FRANCE.

(WITH MAP IN SPECIAL EDITION)

France extends from the foot of the Eastern Pyrenecs in the lat. of 42-25, in almost a perpendicular line, to Dunkirk, in the department of the Nord, in the lat. of 51-2 N. The sprincies is equal to 124 millions of acres, 92 millions of which are in a state of cultivation, and 32 millions unproductive. The historical records of monarchical, imperial, and revolutionary France, are so well known to every reader, as to render nunecessary a lengthened notice of its history. France could boast of an unbroken dynasty up to the close of the eighteenth century, at which period the social grievances endured by the people, produced an internal convulsion, that ended in that sanguinary event called the "French Revolution." The productive fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative fundative.

The silk manufactures of France were given birth to by the luxury of the court of Francis I. and now we find that the raw silk imported in 1951 amounted to 2,291,500 lbs. against 136,800 in 1792, showing an increase of seven-fold. These large importations, added to the supply from our own soil, furnishthe raw in the reign of Louis XIV., and under the premiership of Colbert, new roads were made into the interior, and new markets were thrown open for foreign commerce. The workmen of Venice and Flanders filled the workshops of France; and during a period of 20 years, productive industry in that country bid fair to attain the highest pinnacle of success; but in 1685 all these brilliant prospects were destroyed by the death of Colbert and the revocation of the edict of Nants. The revolution of 1789 removed the gloom; and science coming to the aid of industry, with intelligence governing physical labour, soon gave it a strong and lasting impulse, which, since 1814, has been steady and sure, and to-day France as a manufacturing country stands second only to England in the amount of her productions and the value of her exports. The statistical summary of the trade of France for 1851, published by authority, makes the declared value of the imports and exports amount together to 2,614 millions of france, or £104,560,000, of which the exports are put down at £60,860,000, and the imports £43,760,000.

France has rapidly improved in her agricultural system of late years, and has become eminent for the cultivation of beet-root, which crop produces annually 45,484 tons of raw sugar. In her arts and manufactures she has also been signally and successfully progressive; and in no branch of these more so than in her cotton, the importation of which into France amounted in 1851 to 130,000,000 lbs. In 1792 it was 19,000,000 lbs., the increase being nearly seven-fold. The consumption is about one-fifth to one-sixti. of our own. The woollen and linen manufactures are carried on in that country with great success, indeed the woollen and worsted trades of France are of startling magnitude, the importation of sl.eep's wool amounted in 1851 to 101,201,000 lbs., whilst in 1792 it reached only 7,860,000 lbs., being an increase of over-twelve-fold. There estimates the value of woollen cloth made in France at £16,000,000. In 1851, her importation of coal and coke reached the prodigious quantity of 2,841,900 tons. In 1712, it amounted to only 80,000 tons. In ron she imported 33,700 tons. As regards commerce, France cultivates an extensive inland and foreign trade, from both of which she enjoys much advantage. She possesses only one privileged Hank, that of France; it is under the direction of a governor, nominated by the Emperor, at a salary of £4,000 per annum.

HOTEL DE FERNCE ET D'ANGLETERRE—first-rate, and highly recoumended. Landlord, Mr. Fontaine. Omnibuses at the station convey passengers to the Hotel. where there are private carriages for the use of travelleck.

Population 49,000. 92 miles N: of Paris. An ancient, handsome city, having several fine streets with splendid shops. From the central position of Amiens, between Boulogne, Calais, Brussels, and Paris, it is a most desirable place for travellers to sleep at when they wish to avoid arriving in Paris at an inconveniently early hour in the morning, than which there is nothing more annoying, as the bost hotels are always closed, and the expense of being driven from place to place is very considerable. The 10.30 train in the morning affords time for one to breakfast and visit the Cathedral before starting, and then reach l'aris by two in the afternoon.

Diligences leave the Hotel d'Angleterre for Rouen at 8 a.m., performing the journey in 12 hours. Fares—Coupe, 14fr. 50c.; Interior, 12fr. 50c.; Banquette, 10fr. 59c. For St. Quentin at 7 a.m., and arrive at 4 p.m.

OBJECTS OF ATTRICTION.—The Château d'Eau, the Palais de Justice the Hotel de Ville, built by Henry IV., the Corn Market, and particularly the Cathedral, the very lofty nave of which is considered a masterpiere of architecture. This town is celebrated for the treaty of peace concluded here in 1802 between France and England.

DES ETRANGERS

This town is situated on the Charente, 275‡ English miles from Paris, and 73‡ from Bordeaux, containing a population of 19,400. It is a very old town, built on a hill bristling with rocks, and surrounded by an extensive and beautiful torraced promenade which commands fine views. The air is very pure and bracing, yet does not agree with delicate constitutions.

Angoulème has few objects worth noticing except the cathedral (re-built in 1816, and topped by a gothic steeple.) a theatre, a cabinet of natural and physical history, and a library containing 18,000 vols. In the environs are some paper-mills, which produce an excellent article. The trade consists in corn, wine, ardent spirits, hemp, finx, chestinits, saffron, cork, and paper.

Converances.—Railway to Libourne, Bordeaux, Tours, Nantes, Orleans, Paris, &c. See page 34. FRANCE. 245

Arles .- Stat., Marseilles and Lyons.- HOTEL: HOTEL FORUM.

An irregularly-built town, situated on one of the embouchures of the Rhone; contains about 23,000 inhabitante, and is alike celebrated for the beauty of the women, which is heightened by their picturesque coestume, and for its Roman remains, of which the principal is an amphitheatre in a tolerable state of preservation. Adjoining the cathedral are the clusters, of which the Gothic arches, supported by finely-sculpture pillars, are good specimens of architectural skill in the earlier periods of Christianity.

Places worth visiting are-

The remains of the Roman Theatre, the Museum, where many early Christian tombstones, statues, &c., are preserved, and Les Champs Elysées, converted by the Christians into a burisl-ground, where numbers of their tombs still remain, and where is a chapel dedicated to St. Honorius. The Cathedral, a building of the 6th century, by B Vigilius, has a splendidly ornamented doorway Also the bridge of boats, and ruins of a larger amphitheatre than at Nismes, but more imperfect.

Converances.—Railway to Marseilles, Nimes, Montpellier, &c., see Tune Tables, pages 46 & 47.

Arras. -Stat., Northern of France. -HOTEL: HOTEL DU GRIFFON.

Population 22,000.—134 mlles N. of Paris. A place of considerable trade, on the Scarpe, which divides it, and is herejoined by the Crinchon. The town is built partly on an eminence, and partly on the plain, and consists of four distinct divigions—the City, the Upper Town, the Lower Town, and the Citadel, besides several suburbs. The Esplanade, in the centre, is a fine promenade. The city is on the site of Nemetocenna, the capital of the Atrebates, which Cæsar took about 50 B.C.. This part of Arras is very beautiful, formed of houses of heyn stone. The public squares are surrounded by buildings in the Gothic style. The Cathedral, dedicated to Our Lady, is a large Grecian building, finished in 1932, the ancient one having been destroyed in the great Revolution. Robespierre was born here. Manufactures of cotton linen and tapestry.

Conveyances.—Railway to Douai, Valencionnes, Paris, &c., see Time Tables, pages 12 to 15.

Avignon. - Stat. - Marseilles and Lyons. --

Avignon. — Stat. — Marseilles and Lyons. — 32,000. — Hotel:—

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE,—clean and comfortable. Refreshment room at station, good dinners.

The chief city of the department of the Vaucluse, on the Khone, 77 E. M. North of Marsellies. It contains a great number of churches and sacrod buildings. The once celebrated Church of the Franciscans, however, is now destroyed. The promenade of the Rocher des Dons commands a delightful view. The most attractive object, perhaps, is the old Palace of the Popes, now converted into barracks. Petrarch resided in this city several years, and here he saw his Laurs, whose tomb was in the Franciscan Church. The Fountain of Vaucluse is about seventeen English miles distant from Avignon. A calleche may be hired to take a party there and back for 22 francs, including the driver's grabity.

Besides the Fountain itself, an object of greater curiosity, the house where Petrarch resided is shown. Avignon is the centre of the Madder districts of France, the cultivation of which is very general in the neighbourhood Near the Cathedral is a statue to the memory of the first introducer into France of that valuable root. The Pont du Gard is distant about 15 miles, and is in fine preservation.

Museum of antiquities and paintings is well worth a visit; it contains a variety of Roman scalpture, pottery, glass, coins, &c., found from time to time in the neighbourhood, also a very good collection of modern French paintings, among which are a few by Horace Vernet, who was born in this city, and his father Joseph. Here is a very handsome Hotel de Ville.

Conveyances. - Railway to Lyons, Arles, and Marseilles, pages 46 and 47. Steamers daily to Lyons and Valence. The new road from Avignon to Geneva, by the beautiful plains of the Bresse, is now open.

DE LONDRES.

A town in Normandy, most beautifully situated on a considerable eminence, whence a magnificent view of the surrounding country may be had. It contains a college and a convent. It is a very agreeable town, and is much frequented by the English; the route being by Jersey and St. Malo, or Jersey and Granville. The distance to the latter is about 6 hours by diligence, which starts from the Hotel de France. The diligence for Laval starts from the Messageries Imperiales, next the Hotel de Londres. The excursion is often made to Mont St. Michel, distant about 5 leagues, a rock in the sea on which has been crected a church and a little village. We believe that at low tide the rock can be reached on foot. The excursion takes a day, from Avranches to Paris, per rail and coach in 16 hours. Good view of Mont St. Michel.

Bar-le-Duc.-Stat.-13,000.

Chief town of the department of the Meuse, beautifully situated on the Ornain, and the ancient scat of the Dukes of Barrois. The ligh Town stands on a hill round a fragment of the old cast'e, whence there is a fine view. The Low Town lies along the river, which is crossed by three bridges, and is a well-built and lively part, with good broad streets, several tan yards, cotton mil's, dye houses, &c. The principal buildings are the Prefecture, Hotel de Ville, the College, the Palais de Justice, and Theatre. The Café des Oiseaux is well worth visiting, as it is a perfect curiosity, forming a com-plete museum of natural history. The ornithological and mineralogical cabinets being very complete; there are also some very rare exotic plants. Marshal Ondinot and General Exclmans were born here, and to the former there is a fine statue erected.

Bar-le-Duc is celebrated for its beautiful confitures, of which it exports large quantities.

These rivers here form a commodious harbour, two miles from the Bay of Biscay, and divide the city into three parts. A citadel, constructed by Vauban on an eminence in the suburb, commands both the harbour and the town, which are farther defended by small redoubts. The cathedral is a venerable structure, and the quay is a superb, much-frequented promenade; but the most beautiful part of the city is the Place de Grammont. Stone bridge connects the suburb with the town. Before entering the town, passports are demand-A considerable commerce is carried on at Bayonne with Spain; French and foreign goods FBANCE." 247 being given exchange for wood, iron, fruit, gold, and silver. The hams of Bayonne have long been famous, and its wines and chocolate are exported in great quantities to the north of Europe. The military weapon called the basonet takes its name from this city, where it was invented in the seventeenth A pleasant excursion may be made to Biaritz, a pretty watering-place, distant only 5 miles. Also to San Sebastian in Spain, (6 or 7 hours) returning next day. The passport will require the Visas of the consuls of England and Spain who reside in the town, the cost of which will be 8 francs, and also a further charge at Irun of about 24 francs.

The district between Bayonne and the frontier is full of interest, as the scene of the memorable struggle between Soult and Wellington in 1813.

good; and Hotel d'Angleterre. The chief town of the Department de l'Oise, fifty English miles north of Paris, colebrated for tapestry Its principal object of attraction is the Cathedral; seen from a distance it appears a dull and unimposing mass, divested of architectural beauty of site and construction. The roof rests on three rows of flying buttresses, topped by double ranges of pinnacles. It was commenced in 1225, and intended to have been one of the largest and most magnificent Gothic churches in the world. The choir is, no doubt, the loftiest in the world, the elevation of the roof above the pavement being 153 feet high.

CONVETANCES—Railway, see page 16.

HOTEL DES AMBASSADEURS, un excellent first class Hotel for families and gentlemen.

Is situated about five miles from Bayonne. The beauty of the scenery, combined with the genial nature of the climate, its suitableness for sea-bathing, together with its seclusion, has always rendered it a favorite French watering place; and we have little doubt, from the fact of the Emperor of the French having decided upon making Bisritz a place to which he may resort from the bustle and noise of the French capital, in the same manner as our own Monarch seeks retirement in her private mansion at Osborne, that it will become before many years, one of the most fashionable watering places in France.

From the cliffs, one can enjoy a splendid view of the Bay of Biscay, which at all times restless, is rendered turbulent upon the least increase of the wind, The several bays, with their fine sandy bottoms, present admirable conveniences to the sea bather.

English Church Service, Chaplin supplied by Colonial Church Society.

One of the chief ports of France, in the Channel, 29 miles from Folkestone, 112 miles distant from London, and 170 by rail from Paris. As a watering-place it is much resorted to by parties chiefly from England. It is situated at the mouth of the Liane, in the department of the Pas de Calais. The town is divided into "the high and low town," connected by means of a steep street called La Grande Rus. The favourite locality of the English is in the modern part called the Tintelleries, which lies in a valley towards the north. The railway station is on the opposite side of the river, near to the Place Bellevue. The Lower Town is modern and regularly built. It extends to the glacis of the Citadel, erected under Louis XIV. by the celebrated Vauban.

The Museum in the Grande Rue is well worth visiting, and contains some paintings deserving of notice, besides many curiosities. The Baths is a splendid establishment. The Belfry, behind the Hotel de Ville, is one of the most ancient buildings in Boulogne; the tower, 140 feet high, sould be ascended, as from it a magnificent view of the town and its beautiful environs may be ob-tained. The chief architectural attraction of Boulogne, however, is the Monument, an exceedingly handsome structure, which was intended to commemorate the invasion of England by Napoleon. There is a colossal bronze statue of Napolcon at the top. The Jetty is the favourite walk, extending about 2000 feet from the end of the quay and commanding a fine view of the harbour and part of the coast; it presents, on a fine summer evening, with its numerous visitors, a very gay and lively appearance. The environs of Boulogne are exceedingly interesting, and among the places of celebrity we may point out the following:—Mont St. Ettenne, a quaint little village, about five miles distant, Mont Outresu, within a short distance, will interest the visitor by its antiquarian remains, intimately associated with historical events; Mont Lambert, from the summit of which is obtained a rare and beautiful view, diversified with hill and dale. sea and land, and far in the distance the white cliffs of "rare old England." The Botanic Gardens, at Mount Pelé, fourteen miles distant, are open to the public twice a week.

Cherbourg.—Stat. - 28,000. HOTEL: -DE L'EURPOS-on the quay.

A strong naval station and fortress, and chief town of a maritime prefecture, situated in the department of the Manche, at the mouth of the Divetto, which spreads out into a wide road or bay with the great breakwater or Dique in front. The breakwater was completed under many difficulties, and, after repeated failures, at a cost of nearly £2,000,000; it is two and-a-half times the length. two and-a-half times the width, and twice the depth of Plymonth breakwater. Cherbourg itself is insignificant, having narrow dirty streets, and nothing of interest spart from its naval works, except the Hetel de Ville and its Picture Gallery.

There are two entrances to Chertiourg, one at the cast and the other at the west end of a strongly formice mole. The channel is narrowed at the eastern and by the island of Pales, upon which is erected a large fort, called Fort Imperial, which, with the corresponding fort at the castern side of the mole, completely commands the passage. The western channel is protected by an immense fort, called Fort de Querqueville, on the mainland, and immediately opposite the fort at the west end of the embankment; these immense forts, however . form but a fraction of the fortifications with which this place abounds. At the entrance of the Napolean Dock there is a gigantic fort called Fort des Flamands, which is constructed on a rock dry at low water, and is supported by a redoubt called Tour la Ville. There are fourteen forts and redoubts which form two semicircles around the town on the land side, the outer one consisting of a chain of detached star forts, and the inner being formed of redoubts. These are all in a commanding position and the guns would sweep the outer harbour, as well as the entrance channel. There are in all twenty-four regular forts and redoubts for the protection of Cherbourg, in addition to the six batteries on the mole.

The docks, along the face of which are numerous small forts and batteries, are formed of a large basia communicating with one to the north, and there are also three other docks at the southern part of the excavation, into which an entrance is obtained through the central opening and basin. There are nine basins in all. Along the docks there is a series of large buildings constructed for arsenals, magazines, and naval stores.

HOTEL DES AMBASSADEURS.

Hyeres is about a league distant from the sea (of which, however, and of the adjacent islands it has a good view.) and eleven miles from Toulon, whence there is communication by diligence several times a day. The accommodations have much improved within the last three years. New buildings have been erected, and many allorations are about to be effected, the number of English and other (chiefly French) visitors increases yearly. The envirous are beautiful, abounding in delightful walks among the monatains and valleys, clothed with cork trees and other evergreens. There is an English chapel, Divino Service twice on Sundays during the Winter months. A circulating library and reading-room. Sapples pretty abundant and of fair quality. English prescriptions are tolerably propared.

As respects climate, Hyeres partakes of the general character of the coast of Provence: it is dry, and less variable than that of Nice, less rain falls in winter. The place however, being mostly frequented by invalids, is comparatively deficient in resources for amusement. See "South of France," by Dr. Lee, 3a. 6d., Adams, 59, Fleet Street; Galignani, Paris.

GRAND HOTEL DE LYON, a first class hotel for families and gentlemen.

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, particularly good, and commanding on one side a delightful view of the most picturesque scenery, including the Fourviers hills and the Saone.

HOTEL DE L'UNIVERS, near the Post-Office and Steam-hoats, and the nearest to the universal RailwayiStation of Perrache, is a first-class Hotel, and highly spoken of. Mr. Glover is English.

HOTEL COLLET, Rus Imperial, near the Place Belle Cour—very good and comfortable.

Lyons is the chief manufacturing city of France. Population, including suburbs, 275,000. Well situated at the function of the two great rivers the Saöne and the Shone. The Rhone is crossed by 8 bridges, and the Saöne by 9. Lyons contains many public squares, among which is that of Louis ic Grand, or Beliecour, one of the most magnificent in Europe, adorned with beautiful lime-trees and an equestrian statue of Louis XIV. This city contains one of the fluest libraries in France consisting of nearly 100,000 volumes, and scientific and benevolent institutions are numerous. Within the walls of the city there are upwards of 7,000 establishments for the manufacture of silk, amploying nearly 20,000 looms. The streets which run parallel with the river, have their names on black plates, and those running at right angles with them on yellow plates; there is a magnificent view from the Observatory. No traveller should omit ascending the height of Fourdières, on account of the magnificent view to be obtained therefrom. On a clear day, the Alps and Mont Blanc can be seen in the distance. It is 326 miles S.E of Paris, and 224 N.W. of Marseilles. For climate, &c., see Bradshaw's Companion to the Continent, (price 7s. 6d.)

The descents of the Saone from Chalons to Lyons, and of the Rhone from the latter town, in many respects resemble that of the Rhine. In fine weather it may be doubted whether the scenery is not equal in beauty and variety. The cities on the Rhone are, generally speaking, of very remote antiquity, much more so than those on the Rhine. The historical associations are, at least, of equal interest, whether considered with reforence to the period of classical antiquity, to that of the feudal ages, or to the more recent one of the French revolution. Ruins of ancient casties and foriresses frequently occur, whilst the bon vicant is gratified by observing as he passes, the vineyards which produce Cote Rot, Hernitage, and St. Perny.

Chief port of the Mediterranean, and Steam Packet Station for Italy, the Peninsula, and the East, with a wonderful natural and artificial harbour, but so foul and unwholesome that all who can, steep in their villas or "Bastides," of which there are thousands within a few miles of the city. The ports of Marseilles afford accommodation to nearly 2,000 vessels of all classes. The city was founded 600 years before the Christian era, by a colony of Phocoans. Marseilles is considered by many as the finest city of France, and the various approaches to it are lined with trees and wall-built houses; the city itself is composed of the old and new towns, the latter portion especially being elegantly built. Worthy of notice are the Square and Fountain of the Obelisk, the Prado. which is three miles long, the fine broad Street Cannbière, and one or two Churches-also the remarkable Chateau d' If, at the entrance of the Port. The manufactures consist chiefly of tobacco, printed goods, hats, glass, porcelain, china, soap, coral, &c. There is a good view from the hill "Notre Dame de Garde," Its museum contains poor pictures; it has also a fish market, flower market, and a jardin des plantes, &c. It is 218 miles south by east of Lyons, 300 east-south-east of Bordeaux, and 534 from Paris.

HOTEL DU MIDI.

A very ancient city, the capital of the department of the Herault, containing a population of 40,200. It is highly celebrated for the salubrity of its air, and for its extensive and interesting prospects, which on the one hand embrace the Pyrences, and on the other the Alps, and is much visited by invalids from foreign countries. The town is situated on a declivity between the rivers Masson and Lez, about five miles from the sea, with which it communicates by means of the Canal de Grave. Some of the streets are steep and irregular; in the interior of the town they are winding, narrow, and dark, the most regular and the best houses being in the suburbs. The public premenade, called Peyroun, is one of the finest in Europe; an equestrian statue of Louis XIV, was erected in it in 1829. Montpellier is the seat of a celebrated university, famous for its school of medicine; the anatomical theatre alone is capable of accommodating about 2000 persons. The town also contains a botanical garden, museum, cabinet of natural history and anatomy, an observatory, and a public library of 35,000 volumes and many valuable manuscripts.

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE, a comfortable house, opposite the Railway Station.

Distant 220 E. miles from Paris, and 93 from Strasburg by rail. Capital of the department of Mourthe on the river of that name. Divided into old and new towns; the latter by far the larger as well as more handsome of the two. The gates of Nancy are particularly fine, and are more like triumphal arches than the mere entrances to a city. royal square, built by Stanislaus, is surrounded by an iron railing, and by some of the finest buildings in the town. The streets of the old town are narrow and crooked; but it contains two elegant squares. Besides the old and new town, Nancy has two well built suburbs. Of its public edifices the chief are the elegant town-hall, the cathedral, a large modern edifice, the church of St. Sebastian, the church of Notre Dame, and the theatre, all situated in the new town; the palais de justice, the exchange, the arsenal, the barracks, and churches. Extensive and beautiful promenade. Nancy has no manufactures of consequence, with the exception of linen, woolleft, and embroidery.

Nantes.—Stat.—Hotels: — Hotel de France.

One of the largest and richest commercial cities in France, capital of the department of Lower Loire, seated on the Loire. It was formerly the residence of the Dukes of Bretagne, who built a strong castle on the side of the river, which still exists. The cathedral contains the tombs of the ancient dukes, besides which there are a collegists church and 11 parish churches. The bridges over the Loire, in which are some islands, are almost a league in length. The city contains 20 squares, 17 churches, and many handsome buildings, together with scientific and literary establishments, and a collection of tolerable paintings. Infamous for its Noyades. The suburbs exceed the city in extent. A great quantity of salt is made in the territory of Nantes, both at the bay of Bourgneuf and in the salt marshes of Guerande and Croisic, and a great manu-facture of preserved provisions is carried on here. Large vessels can come no higher than Paimbouf. which is 30 miles from Nantes; but its fine quays are crowded with those of less burden than 200 tons. It is the great point of export of brandy. It has some building yards for Steam vessels, and also large naval store-houses. Population 91,300. principally engaged in fighing, and in the manufacture of cotton goods, glass, &c It was here that Henry IV. promulgated the famous edict, in 1898, in favour of the Prefestants, which was revoked by Louis XIV. in 1685. Paris is attuated set the Seine, in the same manner as London on the Thames, the river running from east to west; its circumference is 18 English miles. Population about 1,200,000; number of houses about 50,000. Viewed from any eminence, the form of the city is nearly circular. Paris contains about 1,350 streets, 204 covered avennes, 30 bonlevards, 99 public establishments, 58 barriers, 28 bridges, and 38 quays. The city is divided into 12 parishes, each containing its church, and two or three chapels of case. There are two islands formed in the Seine—one called the City Island, the other the Island of St. Louis. The numbers of the heuses in the streets parallel with the river are arranged according to the course of the stream, and in the streets at right angles with the Seine the numbers begin at the end nearest the river: in both cases the numbers on the right side of the street being even, and on the left odd.

The most lively streets are the Rue St. Honoré, Vivienne, likchelieu, Neuve des-Petits-Ghamps, &c. The streets, squares, and bridges are lighted by upwards of 6,600 gas lamps, and the city is fortified with a strong wall, taking in all the town, as far as St. Denis and Mont Valerien. On passing the barrier, the luggage is examined. Commissioners (or porters) ply at every railway station or coach office, who will convey the traveller and his luggage to any of the hotels, at a charge of I franc. Having arrived at the hotel, it is necessary to arrange the charge for lodging from one mid-day to another.

Post-office.-The General Post-office is situated in the Rues Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Cog-Heron There are also 16 auxiliary Bureaux, called Bureaux d'Arrondissement, and 26% smaller offices, called Boites aux Lettres. The system of postage stamps is now adopted in France, at a universal rate of 20 centimes, or 2d. for the provinces and 10 centimes for letters posted in Paris to any address within the fortifications .- Letters for England, foreign countries, and the departments, are in time at the boltes till half-past three o'clock; at the bureaux d'arrondissement, till four; and at the general post-office till five, except on Sundays and holidays, when the Exchange is shut . - the general post-office then closes at three o'clock. Letters may be directed to a traveller, Poste Restante, Paris, or any other town where he intends to go. The Poste Restante is open daily from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Sundays excented, when it closes at 5 p.m.

Onnibuse.—In addition to cabriolets, flacres, voltures, and similar vehicles that ply in the streets of l'aris, numerous sets of Omnibuses are established. Their uniform price for all distances is six sous, and as each of them corresponds with a similar one that intersects their line, a person may, without any extra charge, change from one to another, merely asking for atticket called cachet de correspondance.

Hackney Coach and Cabriolet Farez.—In Paris Hackney Coach and Cab Fares are regulated by the course, or by time, at the option of the traveller, who is required to signify to the driver before starting which he selects. A Course is any given distance within the limits of Paris, whether long or short, and eithout stoppage. Farev: 1 fr. 25 c the course, and 1 fr. 75 c. the hour, if with 2 places; 1 fr. 40 c. the course, and 2 frs. the hour if with 4 or 5 places from 6 am., to half past 12 night; and 2 frs. the course, and 2 frs. 50 c. the hour, whether of two, four or five places from half past; 23-25 d.g.sm.
There is a better class of public vahicles ealled

FOUNTAINS AND WATERWORKS.—Among the Public fountains in Paris, those most worthy of note are those on the Place de la Concorde, the Boulevard du Temple, Place Louvois, the Fontaine Molière, Rue de Richelieu, and the Fontaine Cuvier, Rue Cuvier, The Artesian Well de Grenelle, made from 1834 to 1841, is 1650 feet in depth, and throws up 1,700 cubic feet of water per hour.—The Water Filtering Establishment, 24, Qual des Celestins, is well worth seeing.

The QUAYS are formed on both sides of the Seine, and have thirty-three different names.

CHURCHES .- The Cathedral of Notre Dame is a very noble pile of building, erected in the 12th century. It has two majestic towers. The three principal entrances are finely carved, from subjects out of the New Testament. The colossal bell in the north tower, called Le Bourdon, weighs 322 cwt. It is only rung on state occasions, requiring the labour of eight men. There are some most beautiful paintings and magnificent curvings in the choir. which is supported by 120 massive pillars, and the gallery by 297 pillars. The floor is of marble. The altar is most magnificently carved, and here are placed the statues of Louis XIII. and XIV. In a miche there is a beautiful marble group, representing the Descent from the Cross. The charge for ascending the tower, from which there is a delightful prospect, is 20 cents .- The New Church of the Madeleine, situated on the place of the same name, opposite the Rue Royal. The first stone was laid in 1764, and it was fluished by Louis Philippe. It is surrounded by 52 Corinthian pillars, ornamented by a splendid façade. This building was intended by Napoleon to represent the Temple of Fame. The bas-relief over the portico is worthy of particular attention. The interior is most magnificently ornamented with rich gilding, paintings, and statuary, and is lighted by its three domes. which are most be utifully painted. The Church Notre Dame de Lorette, at the end of the Rue Lafitte, was completed in 1823, and is fitted up in the most costly manner with paintings by the best French artists .- The Church St. Etienne du Mont, in the square of the same name, behind the Pantheon, celebrated for its choir, pulpit, and the grave of the holy Genoveva .- The Church St. Eustache in the Rue Trainée, is one of the largest and most handsome in Paris .- The Church of St. Germain des Prés, in the square of the same name, is the oldest in Paris, containing the monument to King Casimir of Poland, and the remains of Descartes and Boileau .- The Church of St. Germain l'Auxorrois. in the place of the same name, opposite the colonnade of the Louvre, is remarkable for its antique architecture .- Also the Gothic Church of St. Merry, in the Rue St. Martin, and the Church of St. Roch, in the Rue St. Honore, containing monuments of Crequi, Corneille, and Le Nôtre, and a splendid pulpit .- The Church of St. Sulpice, in the place of the same name, has a beautiful portico, baptismal fonts of colossal shells, and a beautiful pulpit .- The Pantheon, which is now restored to church purposes, and called the Church of Geneviève, may be classed among the most beautiful buildings in Paris. It is intended to place the remains of celebrated men in its tombs: those of Voltaire and Rousseau are interred here .- The Synagogue of the Jews, in the kne Notre Dame de Nazareth, is a beautiful temple, resting on thirty Doric pillars.

PALACES AND OTHER PUBLIC BUILDINGS .- The Palace of the Tulleries (formerly the residence of the Kings of France) claims attention for its magnificent garden, adorned with statues, vases, and fountains .-- The Louvre may be classed among the most beautiful of the l'arisian palaces; its splendid picture gallery reaches to the Tuilerics. colonnade, opposite the Church St. Germain l'Auxerrois, is worthy notice .- The Palace of the Laxenbourg, Rue de Vangirard, formerly used as the House of Peers, now the place where the senate meets, has a beautiful garden. The splendid steps, the Hercules Saloon, the Salon de la Réunion and des Séances, with its amphilibeatrical arrangement for its members; la Salle du Trone, the Library next to the Chapel, a saloon adorned with panel paintings by Rubens; a gallery studded with sculpture and paintings, and the Observatory, claim the visitor's inspection .- The Palais Royal, Rue St. Honoré, contains innumerable courts. galleries, arcades, and a garden planned by Cardinal Richelleu in 1629. The father of Louis Philippe converted the whole of this superb mass of building into mercantile purposes. Louis Philippe finished a part of the square which had been left incomplute. The principal entrance is from the Rue St. Honoré. The shops consist mostly of libraries, booksellers, jewellers, confectioners, bazaars, coffee-houses, taverns, &c .- The Palais de Justice. situated in the Place of the same name, contains an enormous saloon called the Sails des Pas-Perdus, and the Monument Malesherbes. On the south side is La Sainte Chapelle, a gothic building, erected by St. Louis, is quite a gem, and worth a visit. Those who wish to view the interior must apply to the porter, behind the chapel,-The Palais des Beaux Arts, in the Rue des Petite Augustins, is principally used for the exhibition of works of art, manufactures, and architectural models. In the large court-yard is a portico of 262 FRANCE.

the chateau of Gaillon .- The Hotel des Invalides is structed between the Suburb St. Germain and Le Gros Caillon, and is open to public inspection on Thes. and Thur. from 12 to 3. Under the beautiful dome of the church rest the remains of Napoleon. The tomb is magnificent. The Entrance Gate, the Royal Court, the Library, and the Kitchens, are well worthy inspection .- The Palais Hourbon, (now the Corps Legislatif, where the members hold their sittings), is situated in the Rue de l'Université. The Military School (now used as barracks) is on the Champ de Mars. The Hotel des Monnales (containing a rich collection of coins and medals), is on the Qual de Conti. -- The Hotel de Ville (Town Hall), and residence of the Pretet de la Scine, is situated in the place of the same name. It is adorned with sixteen statues of celebrated men. -The Exchange (La Bourse), is situated in the square of the same name, the buildings composing it forming a parallelogram, supported externally by 66 Corinthian columns. The principal saloon will contain two thousand persons, and is handsomely decorated with cartoons .- The Hallo au Die, in the Rue de Viarmes, is a most beautiful structure, in which there is a most astonishing echo, and near to this building stands the Pillar built by Catharme de Medicis, and on which she was accustomed to make her astronomical observations. This building Is the grain market and granary of Paris, and is capable of containing 30,000 sacks of corn. The hall is 126 feet in diameter.—The Halle aux Vins (Wine Market,) on the Quai St. Bernard, is well worth a visit. It covers a vast surface, and is portioned off into streets, named according to the kind of sme contained in the warehouses that form them. Open daily.

EXHIBITIONS, MUSEUMS AND LIBRARIES. -- The Imperial Library, in the Rue Richelieu, contains 800,000 volumes, 72,000 manuscripts, 5,000 portfolios of engravings, and a most complete collection of goins and medals. The Litrary of the Arsenal, in the Rue de Sully, contains 170,000 volumes, and 6,000 manuscripts.—The Library of St. Genevieve in the upper story of the Abbey of St. Genevieve, in the Square of the l'anthcon, contains 110,000 vols., and 2,000 manuscripts, besides several other collec-tions of rare books.—The Museum of the Jardin des Plantes has three entrances, one in the Rue du Jardin, the second in the Rue Cuvier, and the most astonishing exhibition somewhat like the Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, London. The sociogical collection is in the Swiss Valley. The museum contains a magnificent collection of mineralogical, botanical, and zoological specimens; also a splendid anatomical collection.—The Conservatoire des Arts et Mutiers, Rue St. Martin, contains a good collection of mechanical and industrial models, &c.—The Museum of the Louvre is divided in The following manner: -- 1. Collection of Antiquities. . Museum of French Sculpture. 3. Gallery of Drawings. 4. Gallery of Paintings of the Italian, lendsh, and French Schools. 5. Collections of Spanish Paintings. 6. HOTELS.

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE on the quay exceedingly good in every respect, good table d'hote at 1-past 5. price 3 francs.

SMITHS ALBION HOTEL-Deserving our best recommendation.

The fine old Gothic town of Rouen, situated on the river Seine, the ancient capital of Normandy, is 1eplete with picturesque attractions to the English tourist. The population is 91,500. Some relic of antiquity here meets the traveller at every turn, either in the form of a pointed arch, the mutilated statue of some suint, or a gothic fountain; the door-posts, window-frames, beam-ends, and wood work of almost every building are chequered, intersected, and ornamented with rich carving, grotesque heads, flowers, and otherfanciful devices; while the mouldering magnificence of the cathedral, churches, palais de justice, and other public edifices, carries the traveller in imagination half-desen centuries backward. The cathadral, smooth the public edifices of Rouen, stands pre-emimint, and is said to have been founded as early as 260. It has a fine new Iron Spire. Some splendid monnments are found within its walls; and its churches are equally rich in this respect. St. Ouen is a magnificent church. - Juan of Arc's statue ornaments the Market-place, which is situated in the Place de The Jardin des Plantes, rue d' Elbœut, la Pucelle. Fanbourg St. Sever, is well worth seeing. Mount St. Catharine commands a beautiful view of the city and river.

St. Denis. -12,200. - Stat., Northern of France. A town four miles from Paris. It is of very melent origin, celebrated for its abbey. The church is a structure of great beauty and interest. highly ornamented, and rich in sculpture and paintings. It is the burial place of the kings of France. During the revolution more than fifty of the tomba were demolished in consequence of the decrea of 1793 for the destruction of all mausoleums of kings erected: in the church of St Denis, and throughout the territory of the republic. Bonaparte made considerable additions to the church, and was careful to restors the injuries it had received. He intended it should be the last resting-place for the emperors of his own dynasty. Napoleon founded here an institution for the gratuitous education of relatives of members of the Legion of Honour, in which 500 pupils (girls). are educated. The town of St. Denis is well built: there are numerous manufactures; and its confectionery is much in request.

Strasburg .- Stat. - HOTEL:-

HOTEL DE LA MAISON ROUGE, comfortable and moderate, landlord, Mr. Caspari.

HOTEL DE LA FLEUR, a well-known, quiet, clean, and comfortable house.

Population 64,200, with a garrison of 6000 men. Strongly fortified town on the French frontier. Much improved by the Railways. The spire of Strasbourg Cathedral is 474 feet above the pavement, being 112 fect higher than St. Paul's in London, and 24 feet higher than the great Pyramid. It is considered a master-piece of architecture, being built of hewn stone, cut with such precision as to give it, at a distance, a strong resemblance to lace. The tower was planned by Erwin of Steinbach, by whom it was commenced, but it was completed by his brother John, on the death of the former, in 1318. Promenade of Ruprechtsau. There is a remarkable clock connected with this Cathedral. It is a complete astronomical Almanac, from which you can read the revolutions of the heavenly bodies. and the various phenomena which they exhibit.

A visit should be paid to the tomb of Marshal Saxe. Strasbourg claims the honour of the discovery of the art of printing, by Guttenburg, in 1436. It is favourably situated for commerce, the Rhine connecting it with Switzerland, Holland, and Belgium: its chief exports are corn, flax, hemp, wine and spirits, linen, sail-cloth, blankets, carpets, hardware, leather, cotton, lace, tobacco, and snuff. By making the best use of the railways now in operation, a traveller returning from Switzerland may go from Basle to London in 36 hours.

Toulon,-Hotel.-

HOTEL DE LE CROIX D'OR, having a southern aspect is exceedingly clean, and is highly recommended for its good accommodation and moderate charges.

Population 45,500: 564 English miles from Paris. and 30 from Marseilles. Toulon is a well-known sesport in the south-east of France, department of the Var, in a bay of the Mediterranean. It is built at the foot of a ridge of lofty mountains, which shelter it from the north; and is surrounded with ramparts, ditches, and bastions, and defended by a fine citadel, and a number of forts and batteries distributed on the neighbouring eminences. The town is divided into two parts, the old and the new. The former is ill built, but the new town is better, containing the public structures erected by Louis XIV., several straight streets and a square, or rather oblong, called the Champ de Bataille, and used for exercising the garrison. The principal public buildings are the town-hall, the hotal de l'Intendance, and the churches and hospitals. Toulon has long been one of the chief stations of the French navy, being on the Mediterranean what Brest is on the Atlantic. It has two ports. The old one is a basin, not large but commodious, surrounded with a handsome quay; the new port is one of the finest in Europe, and is said to be capable of containing 200 sail of the line. The roadstead is spacious, and communicates with the outer port by a narrow passage. The passage by which the two ports communicate with each other is also narrow. Here are docks for ship-building, storehouses for timber, manufactures for canvas, cordage, ship anchors, &c. CONVEYANCE. - Railway to Murseilles, see page

GRAND HOTEL DU FAISAN .- A house very highly spoken of, in a good situation.

GRAND HOTEL DE BORDEAUX ET DE LA POSTE, opposite the Railway Station

A considerable town on the Loire, containing about 30,000 inhabitants, who were formerly actively engaged in the silk manufacture, which however, has much declined of late years. It is 147 miles south-west of Paris, and the surrounding country is delightful. There is a handsome bridge here, 1300 feet long, and a very fine cathedral. A few miles from Tours, at Mettray, is the very interesting establishment for reclaiming juvenile delinquents, which will well repay a visit. A large number of English constantly reside at Tours.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE twice on Sundays. Conveyance.-Railway to Orleans, Paris, Le Mans, Portiers, Bordeaux, &c. See pages 34, 35, and 37.

Troyes.—Stat., Montereau and Troyes.

HOTEL :-- GRANDE MULET.

Population 26,000; 113; English miles from Paris. 1521 from Besancon, and 70 from Rheims. Troyes is a large town in Champagne, the capital of the department of the Aube, situated between two fine meadows on the Seine. It is ill built, the chief material being wood. It has considerable manufactures, particularly in cotton and cotton stockings. Woollen, linen, leather, and thread, are all made here, but on a smaller scale. Its chief edifices are the churches; in particular the cathedral, and the churches of St. Etienne and St. Urban. Its castle, now antiquated, was long the residence of the Counts of Champagne. A public mall, or walk, extends along the ramparts, and is of great length. Here are also a town-hall, a centralschool. a public library, and a society of arts. Troy weight takes its name from this town.

Conveyances.- Railway to Montereau and Paris. see page 56.

HOTEL DE LA POSTE.

Population 13,800; 396 English miles from Paris, 151 from Marseilles, and 45 from Grenoble. lence is situated in the department of the Drome, on the Rhone. It is old, ill built, and irregular, with narrow, winding, and dirty streets. The cathedral is an ancient building; but neither it nor the episcopal palace are distinguished for their architecture. The case is otherwise with the gothic facade of an old castle at this place, which is said to be one of the finest specimens of that style in France. Its manufactures comprise silk, cotton, and leather; and an extensive trade is carried on in wine. A booksellers shop in the Grande Rue is worth notice as a small bit of very rich Gothic.

The well-known St. Peray wine is produced from . a small mountainous district, about 2 miles distant on the opposite side of the Rhone. Valence is about half way between Lyons and Avignon.

CONVEYANCE.—Italiway, see pages 46 and 47. For Steamers, see Alphabetical List, page 211.

Valenciennes-Stat., Northern of France. NOTEL DE COMMERCE.

Population 20,600. A place of considerable trade and wealth; also strongly fortified by its posttion on the Scheldt, at its confluence with the Rhendelle, by which it may be surrounded for three-fourths of its circumference by water, retained by means of sluices in the fortifications. town is well built; the houses are generally of brick and white stone. The Hotel de Ville, in which the Gothic style is minuled with several orders of architecture, will claim attention; it is highly decorated; the handsomeficade, surmounted by an attic, adorned with Cariatide figures, representing the four seasons. The Hospital and the Theatre are also remarkable. Many agreeable promenades will be found; the Cours-Bourbon, the Place-Verte, the Embants-ment between the city and the suburbs, the circuit of the outer fortifications from the Mons Gate to Quesmey Gate, the Faubourg Cambral. From the Citadel tho valley of the Scheldt is seen to advantage. Froissart, the historian of the 14th century, was born here. It was also the birth-place of Watteau. It is noted for its lace.

HOMEL DE FRANCE.

Population 30,000. Reached by Railways from Paris on both sides of the Seine in half an hour. (See pp. 1) & 24). It would require a volume to explain the beauties and remarkable productions of this palace, its pleasure-grounds, galleries, and noble salorns, containing the Historical Museum, a magnificent collection of paintings, representing the History of France or rather the wars of France, from the earliest period to the present time. Louis Philippe caused the interior of this magnificent building to be entirely redecorated, in keeping with the splendid collection of paintings. The whole is arranged to show the progress of time; and some future day, not far in the distance we would hope, will surely give way to a history of the peace of France, and its attendant The floors throughout are studded with blessings. The floors throughout are studded with statuary. It requires fully four hours merely to wander through the various apartments and gardens. The principal masters who have contributed to its adorument are Horaco Vernet, l'aul Delaroche, Johannot, and many others. The Cabinet of Natural History, the Opera Saloon, the Chapel, and the Park, with its splendid statues, fountains, and cascades, as planned by Louis XIV., will each in succession excite the admiration of the beholder. The Hall of the Jen do Paume or Tennis Court, the scene of the first decided act of the French Revolution is also interesting .- A Catalogue may be bought at the Palace, explaining everything worth seeing in it .-The Museum is shown on Saturdays, Sundays, Mondays, and Tuesdays, from ten till four. The various small fountains play the first Sunday in every month—the larger ones only a few days in the year, of which notice is given in all the Parisian newspapers .- The railway on the left bank of the Seine passes Sevres, where the national china manufactorios are carried on.

BELGIUM. 271

BELGIUM.

For a more detailed description of Belgium and the Rhine, see BRADSHAW'S ILLUSTRATED HAND-BOOK OF BELGIUM AND THE RILINE, which gives, in a portable and convenient form, a clear and elaborate description of all the Cities, Monuments, Works of Art, Cathedrals, Public Buildings. and Historical Reminiscences of this very interesting country; and the Rhine-from Rotterdam to Schaffhausen-with wood and steel engravings, clear and distinct Maps of the Country, Plans of the Towns, and Panorama Map of the Rhine, the Sambre, Meuse, &c .- Price Five Shillings.

BELGIUM is situated between 49°27' and 57°31' north latitude, and 2°37' and 6°0 east longitude, Its greatest length from N.W. to S.E. is about 175 English miles, and its greatest breadth from N.E. to S.W. about 127 English miles. Its superficial area is about 7,279,448 English acres, or 11,375 square miles. The general aspect of Belgium is level, indeed it contains no ridge that could be properly called a mountain. The southern portion is high and rugged, but towards the north it sinks into a flat plain. The country in the northern provinces, along the rivers and estnaries is, like that of Holland, protected from inundation by dykes; and along the open sea by sand hills or downs, which vary in breadth from one to three miles, rise to a height of fifty or sixty feet, and are in most cases thickly covered with pins trees. The sea itself, to a great distance from the shore, is filled along the whole coast with sand banks. which render the navigation very intricate, and very dangerous to large vessels.

In climate the Belgian provinces differ much: for whilst in Luxembourg the climate is temperate and healthy, in Liege it is often hazy and damp. In Namur the air is sharp and agreeable, and in Halmanit the climate is mild and temperate. Fast and West Flanders enjoy a moist climate, and in some places are subject to maluria. The summer here is warm and rainy, and the winter cold.

The Belgian people consist of two distinct stocks-the Germanic and the Groco-Latin. To the former belong the proper Belgians or Netherlanders, who speak the Flemish tongue, and a small number of German-Dutch-mostly in Limburg and Luxembourg. To the latter belong the Walloons, who inhabit the higher or southern portion of the country and speak the French-Flemish and the Walloon-two dialects of the French language. Productive industry has long characterised the Belgians, the principal productions of which are Brussels, Mechlin, Bruges, Ghent, and St. Tron laces, the clothes of Flanders, Brabant, and Hainault, the printed cottons of Ghent, Brussels, and other places, the bleaching establishments of Courtray, which rival those of Haarlem, the carpets of Tournay, the papers of Liege, with its military arms and cutlety. The industry of the Flemings has within two hundred years converted a tract of land, once a sandy and barron heath, into a beautiful garden; and the product of its wheat is often not less than sixteen to one, and outs ten to one; whilst scarcely in any part of Britain does wheat give more than eight to ten for one. East and West Flanders alone produce annually flax to the amount of £1,600,000. The Coal Mines of Hainault produce more than those of the whole of France; and the anausi quantity raised in Belgium is 2,000,000 chaldrons. More than 150,000 tons of iron are annually counted. The cloth manufactures at Verviers employ 4000 men; and the oction manufactures, not-withstanding the loss of the Dutch colonial markets, have improved steadily since 1830, and now repre-sent a capital of £3,000,000 storling. Commerce has greatly increased in Belgium lately. The principal exports are the productions of its flourishing agriculture and numerous manufactures, such as corn, bran, cost, oil, lace, woollen and cotton cloths, linen, canvass, arms, cutlery, and ironmongery.

The Administrative divisions of Belgium consist of nine provinces, subdivided into arrondisements communes, and cantons, after the French models.

Passports.—See pages xxiii to xxxviii.

Money.—English Bank Notes or Sovereigns are convertible into francs throughout Belgium, at the rate of exchange of the day. The Sovereign, or Pound Sterling, being at par 25 francs, and a few continues more or less, according to the variations in the rate of exchange. A reference to our "Table of Fereign Monics," page xxxix, corrected for the current month, will enable the traveller to accertain the actual rate of exchange, within a few contimes; and any respectable "Exchanger" will give the value for English money current for the time being. A francis equal to 100 centimes.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—The lines were opened on the 15th of March, 1851, and extens from Ostendto Verviers, where they are in connection with the Prussian, Austrian, Saxon and Bavarias lines. to Benssels, and from thence to Paris. These lines are also in connexion with the Submarine Telegraphy

DIFFERENT ROUTES.

2, By South Eastern Railway to Dover every night at 81, and thence by Steam-packet at 11.15 to Ostend, every night except Sunday. See Advertisement.

I.—By Railway from London to Dover, and thence by Steam-packets to Calais, see advertisement; and by Northern of France Railway to Lille and Ghent, or Lille to Douat, Valenciemess; and Mons, to Brussels. Also by Lille, Mouscron, Tournay, and Jurhise, to Brussels.

S .- By Steam to Ostend every Wednesday and Saturday, direct from St. Katherine's Wharf. See page 193. The "Holland" and "Belgium" are fine ships, and perform the passage in ten hours

4 .- By Steam to Antwerp, direct from St. Katherine's Wharf. See page 197. The packets on this station are now of a very superior description. The General Steam Navigation Company's steamers "Dolphin" and "Rhine" are superior first-class ships. The Belgian Company's new ship "Baron Osy," is also a very fine vessel. They perform the passage in about 17 hours, and reach Antwerp on the day after leaving London, in ample time to enable the passengers to proceed, if they wish, by the first or second train to Cologne. But few persons do this, as the "glorious works of art" in Antwerp are , chiects of too much interest to be passed unvisited.

5 .- By Steam to Calais every Sunday and Thursday morning, direct from London Bridge Wharf. See page 198.

6.- By the Screw Steam Shipping Co's. Steamers from off Irongate Wharf to Dunkirk, thence by Rail to any part of Belgium. See page 198.

7 .- Hull to Antwerp, Gee and Co's Steamers, see p. 193; also by the Hull Steam Packet Co.'s Steamers, see p. 193.

ROUTE 1.

In order to facilitate travellers in their Belgian tour, we arrange in consecutive order the principal railway routes at present existing in that country. We may also observe, that we have pointed to such places of note worth the excursionist's attention, which, though not immediately on the direct ronte, yet branch off at intervals and admit of a short visit by a little delay. The first route we give is from

London to Brussels, via Dover and Calais.

The tourist, on leaving London Bridge, finds himself whirled over a beautiful country; and at about six and a quarter miles he finds himself in sight of Sydenham. To the right of the line the Crystal Palace of 1851 has found a permanent home, and stands forth as a grand and splendid monument representing the combined elements of universal industry, and ornamenting the picturesque locality in which it is situated. Very little of interest surrounds the remaining part of the journey to Dover, where the traveller takes the steam-boat, and leaving the old cliffs of England, finds himself after a delightful sca-trip of two hours, at Calais, in France On arrival here tourists should proceed direct to the passport office, on the railway station, and get their passports properly rise, after which they should proceed to an adjoining room for the purpose of having their baggage examined. This, however, can be avoided by declaring them for trunsit.

Calais .- See page 240.

The journey between Calais and Brussels is performed by rail. The first place of interest to be met with is Lille, where carriages are changed.

Lille .- See page 255.

Roubaix.-See page 267.-Tourcoing.

Mouseron is seen on an eminence to the right. with its beautiful church built of bricks. Its chief Importance arises from the fact of its being situated a on the frontier.

From Mouseron the traveller can proceed to Brus-bls by either of two routes. By that leading to Chent, Malines, and thence to Brussels, or by the direct route from Tournay to Ath and Jurbise. As " the trains, however, start at the same time for each of these places, passengers should examine their tickets to ascertain which route they are booked for, and to see that they and their luggage proceed by the same train.]

MOUSCEON TO BRUSSELS, via COURTRAY, GHENT, AND TERMONDE.

Courtray .- HOTELS: -- DAMIFR and LION D'OR. -20,000.—This is a fortified town of West Flanders, situated on the river Lys, which supplies good water for bleaching. It is much celebrated for its manufactures of linen and lace, and produces a large supply of fine flax. It is 32 miles south of Bruges, and 27 miles south-west of Ghent.

The Town Hall deserves to be seen, on account of two chimneys, the sculpture of which are of the greatest beauty, and most highly finished. One is placed in a sort of ante-chamber, which leads to the conneil hall, the other is in the hall, which it wonderfully beautifies. The Church of St. Martin. founded about 650 by St. Eloi, apostle of Flanders, is remarkable for its tower, which surmounts the front portal, commands a splendid view of the surrounding country and adds much to the majestic appearance of the building. The multitude and richness of the ornaments in the interior attract attention. The Tabernacle of brown stone of Avernus is worth notice. The church also contains a very valuable painting-"The Scene of Martyrdom at Rome," by Van Manderen, who was a poet and historian rather than a painter. It also contains a picture representing the "Descent of the Holy Spirit upon the Apostles;" and the two shutters, the "Sleep of Adam in l'aradise;" and the "Bap-tism of Christ." The Church of Notre Dame possesses a Vandyke-it is in Baldwin's Chapel, and represents the "Crucifixion;" this painting is greatly admired. This church was crected by Baldwin, Count of Flanders and Emperor of Constantinople. It deserves to be visited both on account of the splendour of its ornaments and the richness of its paintings. In the same church are two bas-reliefs by Godecharles, and a "Christ in the Tomb," by Van Reable, which deserve attention—the Church of St. Michael has a small picture of the celebrated "Battle of the Spura." The Tabernacle will attract the visitor's attention. The Academy, Museum, and Library together with the Market Hall are the only other places worth visiting.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pp. 63 & 69. Haerlebeke.—Olsene.—Nazareth.

Ghemt—Stat.—(With Map in Special Edition.)
Horiz. Royal, Place d'Armes, in the centre of the town, and nearest to the railway station, a first-class Hotel—highly recommended to Eng. travellers; Landlord, Mr. Marit.

HOTEL DE VIENNE, nearest hotel to the churches St. Bavon, St. Nichol, and St. Michael—recommended for its moderate charges, and excellent accommodation. A. Roszmann, proprietor. (A German.)

HOTEL DE LA POSTE.—This old established first rate Hotel has been re-opened by Mr. C. Dubus, late of the Hotel de Flandre, and is highly recomrected.

Ilistance from Bruges, 44 kilometres=28 miles; time lh. 25m.—The stations between this place and Bruges are Blæmendæl, Ælire, llambæke, and Landeghem. The station of the Direct railway to Antwerp is at the Porte d'Anvers. This direct line, worked by a private company, runs through the Pays de Waes, the finest garden-like and most deusely populated district in Belgium: it passes the important towns of Lokeren with 18,000, and St. Micholas with 21,000 inhabitants. Post-Office in Rue de l'Université. Facilantes as at Bruces.

The streets and public squares of Ghent are wide and spacious: it has more the appearance of a modorn city than Bruges; and there are elegant equipages rolling through its busy thoroughfares. The Town Hall of Ghent is apparently an unfinished structure; and in admiring this exquisite specimen of florid gothic architecture of the right wing and corner, the traveller will regret that the architect who executed this part of the edifice did not complete the other side in the same style of elegance and beauty of design, which is probably unequalled by any other specimen in Europe. There is a bust of Philip van Artevelde to be seen here. The eathedral church of St. Bayon is not remarkable for external beauty, but the interior presents a singular appearance, from its being lined with black marble, and from its having 24 chapels containing orusments and paintings of great value. The curious will be interested by visiting the site of the houses of Van Artevelde, the Flemish Captain-general, and Count Egmont; also the Gilded Dragen, brought by Van Artevelde from Bruges, now on the Belfry. The oldest and one of the finest churches is that of St. Nicholas.

It would occupy too much of our limited space to describe each oratory, but we would direct attention to the eleventh, which is embellished by one of the most remarkable works of the early Flemish school. A painting, representing "The Adoration of the Lamb," by the brothers Van Eyck, is considered an extraordinary chef devere. The colouring is as strillant and as pure as the first day it left the hands of the painters. The composition combines the breadth and power of the Flemish school, with the grace and delicacy of the Italian. No person should quit this chapel without having the details of the picture, described to him. In auother part of the glaung described to him. In auother part of the schuges (ju chapel fourteenth) there is a painting by Kutone squally admired. It is a picture representing a religious ceronory—St. Bayon renouching the military profession to become a monk. Joshua Reynolds says of this painting, that "for composition, colouring, richness of effect, and all those qualities in which Rubens more particularly excelled, it claims a rank among his greatest and best works." The pictures in the church of St. Michael have been shamefully treated by the vandalism of ruthless depredators and modern restorers or picture cleaners. The once beautiful work representing the Crucifixion, by Van Dyck, is so disfigured as not to be worth examination! The Museum of Ghent is by no means worthy of such a city: but the florist will be much gratified by a visit to the Botanical Gardens, which contain some of the choicest exotics and rarest plants acclimated in Europe The Beguinage is worth visiting; it contains one of the finest pictures by Raphæl in Belgium, the subject is the head of our Savfour. The Beguinage is a convent, but the inmates are permitted to leave when they like, they may get married and even return in widowhood.

Cauren of England Service—On alternate Sundays at half-past 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., at the Chapel in the little Digue du Brabant, near the railway station. Holy Communion, second Sunday in the month.

Ath .- HOTEL CIGNE -- A fortified town on the Dendresco, 21 miles from Tournay. A terrible fire In 1433, a hurricane in 1600, and an earthquake in 1691, and other disastrous events dismantled Ath of all her monuments, &c. St. Julien's Tower and the Parish Church alone escaped the conflagration. Ath instained many dreadful sieges. The fortifications constructed in 1815 are strengthened with great care. The population is about 9000. Plax manufactures.

Railway, see pages 70, 71, and 74. Mailles, Attres, Brugelette, Lens. Jurbise, a small commune with a population of 700 souls. It is about eight miles from Mons by railway. The country along from Jurbise to Brainele-Comte is rather interesting.

Soignies .- the chief town of a district in the province of Hainault, is a pretty and nest town, agreeably situated on the Senne, and passed by the railway. Its churches and tombstones are very old, and counctfull to interest the antiquarian Extra fine flax produced here, used for the manufacture of lace.

Braine-le-Comte. This town wastermerty in the department of Jemappe, and derived its name from the celebrated Brennus, in the time of Julius Casar, who built the town, and strongly fortified it with a castle, &c. Both castle and town, however, were destroyed by the Spaniards about the year 1677. The district around furnishes some of the linest flux in the world. A few miles to the north-west is Steenkerke, remarkable as being the spot where the Duke of Laxembourg defeated William III., in 1692, with a loss of 7000 men. From here a railway branches off to Charlerol and Namur.

DEC. -- Stat. -- HOTEL PAYS BAS.

On the river Dendre, the shief town of the stript of Rest Flanders, is said to owe its origin to a fortress built by the Goths in 411. It was formerly the capital of what was called Imperial Flanders, and was reduced to ashes by a conflagration in 1360, and in 1667 the celebrated Marshal Turenne took and dismantled it. The town hall is & fine gothic edifice, built in 1210, and is in excellent preservation. The collegiate church of St. Martin was built by the same architect as the cathedral of Amiens, and contains a fine picture by Rubens, representing the "Plague of Alost." The population is about 15,000, chiefly engaged in linen, soap, and thread-lace manufactures. Great Hop Market.

Termonde-Stat.-HOTEL.-AIGLE.

An ancient town, said to be earlier than the time of Charlemagne. It is situated at the mouth of the river Dendre, at its confluence with the Scheldt. The inhabitants have a taste for the fine arts, and the traveller may readily obtain access to several private collections, among which we may name those of M. Schellekin and Madame Terlinden. David Teniers married in this town, and resided here several years. The population is about 8,000, chiefly engaged in the homp and flax trade. It is 16 miles, by rail, west of Malines, and 19 from Ghent.

zeel.-Capelle. Malines, -(In German, Mechlin.) -Stat. Horra Sr. Jacques, in the Corn Market-an old established comfortable Hotel, much recommended.

A large town, in the province of Antwerp, divided by the Dyle into two parts. It is couldistant from Brussels, Antwerp, and Louvain, and contains a population of 25,000. The Malines station is about five minutes' walk from the town, which is one of the most picturesque Flemish cities. An obelisk is here erected, to mark the point where the various Belgiclines of railway diverge.

The antrance from the railway station is very fine. The streets are broad, and bordered in many places by good buildings. The public square and the market-place are spacious, and regularly built. The cathedral has a tower 350 feet high, of massive Gothic construction. Although unfinished, it is worthy of attention, especially the interior, which is elegant. The other buildings of interest are the arsenal, the town-house, a Franciscan monastery, and an asylum for 800 widows and ciderly women. The town also contains many curious old buildings. It has manufactures of fine Brabant lace and linen damask and silk, and woollen stuffs, besides a three lace, known and celebrated as the Mechlin lace.

Works of Art in the Churches at Malines: The Church of St. Rumbold-in the chapel on the left there is a fine painting, "Christ erucified be tween the two thieves," by Van Dyke. The Church of Notre Dame contains a picture by Ruberts." miraculous draught of fishes." The Church of St.

John possesses several of Rubens finest paintings,

"The Worshipping of the Magi," two painted shutters, and three other small pictares. The receipt is shown in the vestry, dated March 12, 1624, stating that Rubens painted these elight paintings, in eighteen days, and received 1800 fiorins for them.

Vivorde.—Stat.—A small, healthy town of 6,500 linhabitants, situated between Mainnes and Brussels. It is one of the most ancient in Belgium, and is much visited by philanthropists desirous of inspecting the great prison or penitentiary, situated in the suburbs of the town. The church of Vilvorde contains some exquisite carvings in wood. In this town Tindal, the first English translator of the Bible, suffered martyrdom in 1536. From here he passes through a very agreeable country until he enters Brussels.

HOTELS.—Caution.—Travellers should proceed direct to the Hotel they have selected in a Cah, as the Omnibuses charge as much, and make so many stoppages, that the best accommodation is engaged, before passengers by these vehicles reach the hotel. We also advise them not to allow themselves to be miled by cab-drivers or others interested in recommending certain hotels.

HOTEL DE BELLE VUE, one of the most highly recommended hotels on the Continent, landlord, Mr. Proft.

HOTEL DE L'UNIVERS, one of the largest, handsomest, and best in Brussels.

HOTEL DE SAKE, exceedingly good in every respect & close to the railway; landlord, Mr. Kervand.

HOTEL DE FLANDER.—This first class old-estabilahed and highly recommended hotel, in the Flace Royal, has been considerably enlarged, and has one of the finest saloons in Europe. The table d'hots is deservedly celebrated.

House, or L'Europe, a first-rate old established house, enjoying an excellent reputation. Strongly recommended.

House Winners, a comfortable and ressenable family house

HOTEL DE HOLLANDE, Rue de la Putterie, excelient attustion in the heart of the city, between the park, the Cathedral, and the Grand Place, this oldestablished house is quiet and comfortable, good and reasonable.

HOTEL DES CHATELER, a most comfortable, ressonable, and excellent second-class house. The landlady, Mrs. Callo, is English. Travellers are cautioned not to confound this hotel with one of the name of Gallu.

GRANDE BRETAGNE.—Well situated in the Place Royale and charges moderate.

THE HORTON'S PRINCE OF WALES ENGLISH TAVERN AND CHOP HOUSE, Rue Villa Hermess, Montagns do la Cour—everything first-rute and reasonable. Good beds. Ales, stout, and porter on draft, always in splendid condition. Chops and steaks, &c., admirably cooked. The London Times and New York Herald newspapers taken in.

CARTER'S (late BAILT'S) COMMERCIAL TAVERN, Tuddu Musee. Ale and Porter on draft. Chops and Steaks. Good beds and comfortable accommodation on reasonable terms.

BOARDING AND LODGING-HOUSE.—Mrs. Haydon's, 47, Avenue de la Toison d'Or Porte Louise, is most respectable, and deserves our best recommendations.

PRIVATE BOARDING-HOUSE — No. 1, Rue de Vienne, and 126, Chaussée de Wavre, near the quarter Leopold, kept by Mile. Louise Pillond.

This, the capital of the kingdom, and seat of Government, is 88 miles from Ostend, 272 from Antworp, 48 from Glent, 714 from Liege, 922 from Lille, 1452 from Cologne, and 150 from Paris. Population (including suburbs) 145,000 The local structions are numerous.

We have now to introduce this fair city to our readers, a city which has formed the subject of the warinest eulogiums from three of our greatest modern poets, Byron, Scott, and Southey; and no person who visits it in the present day will say that their praises are exaggerated or undeserved. No. traveller who visits the lower town, observes its noble streets and mansions, inhabited by the mercantile part of the community, and then proceeds to the upper or "west end" of the city, commencing with the Place Royale, embellished by the church of St. Jaques sur Caudenberg, and the statue of the Crusader, Godfrey of Bouilion, thence to the Place des Palais, and there admires the pleasing coup d'ail formed by the King's Palace, the Palace of the Prince of Orange, the beautiful and umbrages Park, the magnificent Rue Royale, the noble buildings in the Rue de la Loi, the splendid view fram-the Place du Congrès, but what will exclaim that the beauty of the tout ensemble, the nestment. and cleanliness of this part of Brussels, render in one of the most charming claims in Eugepe, and impart a becoming dignity to the seat of the Halgian government.

If the cities of Antwerp, Bruges, and Ghent, are objects of reverence to the antiquarian, the historian, and the lover of the fine arts, the fair capital of Belgium is peculiarly the property of the ladies. It is Paris in miniature, Parisian toilettes, ganteries, chausseries, and, above all, the genuine lace of Mechlin and Brussels manufacture are to be had here on advantageous terms! The Montagne de la Cour, the Rue de la Madeleine, and the beautiful Arcade of St. Hubert, should be the special objects of their attention, and whilst they are making acquisitions at these marts, we will invite the messieurs to accompany us to the Grande Place, to admire the beautiful Gothic spire of the Hotel de Ville, and the various architectural designs of the surrounding buildings. Then crossing the Place to the Rue de PEtuve, and proceeding to the corner of the Rue du Chêne, the traveller will suddenly find himself in the presence of the oldest citizen of Brussels, the celebrated "Manniken" fountain. Honi soit qui mal y pense! Diminutive as this personage is, he is nevertheless of great importance to the bourgeoise of Brussels. Legends and traditions invest him with an importance and dignity which is peculiarly manifested upon helidays or gala days, fêtes and kermesses, when the Manniken is attired in the fieldday unitorm of a garde civique, and decorated with the order of St. Louis.

The traveller next visits the Cathedral Church of Saint Guidle, and is struck by the beautiful painted glass in its windows, particularly that of the St. Sacrament chapel, which is deemed the most exquisitely painted window in Europe. The carved pulpit, by Verbruggen, representing the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden, is also an object of admiration, and we would likewise direct attention to a menument recently placed in this cathedral, to the memory of a Belgian philanthropist, the late Chanolne Triste. This piece of sculpture is by the same nitist that executed the staine of Godfrey de Bouillon, in the Place Royale, and is considered one of the parest and most classical works of modern times.

The amateur of paintings will be gratified by paying a visit to the Museum.

COMMISSIONATHES.—Parties visiting this city should engage a Commissionairo of the hotel they are residing in, at 5 frs. per day, to guide them to the sights of Brussels, as he will save them much time; the same person will attend them during dinner at Table d'Hôte, and may be engaged as travelling servant.

Cerriages.—Travellers wishing to go to Waterloo, can do so by the Mail Coaches, see particulars page 280, or if they wish to visit different objects of interest in Brussels and the environs, Lacken or Boltafort, may obtain two horse carriages at 3 frs. per hour, or one horse carriages at 2 fr. 50 c. per hour for town use, of J. Suffell, 17, Rue Villa Hermosa, Montagne de la Cour, and of J. Copper, 23, Esplanade, Porte de Namur.

The Post-office, at the top of Ruede is Moutsgne, is been from 5 till 9. Postsgestamps are in use throughout the kingdom: single rate for one-third of anos. 10 centimes, for 30 kilometres (about 18‡ miles,) 20 centimes for all distances above; prepayment options. Between Belgium and all France fliestamp is 40 centimes. The following is a list of the offices for obtaining passports:—France 1, Rue des Douze Apôtres, Austria, 9, Rue Relliard, Quartier Leopold: English Embassy, Rue Belliard, Quartier Leopold. The Duke d'Aremberg's Palace daily, by applying to the porter, and producing a passport, when the Prince is in town. The Town Hall daily, from 10 till 5, (gratis.) The two Houses of Parliament daily, from 10 till 3. The Botanical Gardens, (gratis) every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, from 9 till 5. The Passport Office is at the Hotel de Ville and is open daily from 10 till 4. The London mail arrives in Brussels every day, except Monday, and departs from Brussels every day, except Saturday, in the afternoon. Letters for England must be posted at the Chief Office. Rue de la Montagne, before 2 p.m. for the first dispatch, and before 5 15 p.m. for the second, via France. Letters, &c., forwarded by the former are delivered in London by 9 in the morning, and by the latter by 12 the day after their leaving Brussels. Theatre Royal de la Monnaie.—Performances every evening. Theatre des Galeries Saint Hubert.—Performances every evening. Concert in the Park every evening during the summer.

In conclusion we may remark, that it is enstomary for travellers passing through Belgium, to sejourn and rest during the Sabbath in Brussels, as it offers the advantages of possessing several Protestant places of worship:—

Church of England Service.—On Sundays, at the Chapel Royal, Ruo du Musèe, at 9 a.m. and half past 2, by the Rev. C. E. :Ostend_Stat.-(With Map in Special Edition)

HOTEL FONTAINE, an excellent establishment and highly recommended, very conveniently situated, and commanding a fine view of the sea and harbour. It has a splendid dining-room and the newly futuished apartments overlook a beautiful garden.

MESTIAN'S NEW HOTEL, is a capital, first-rate house, very comfortable; the prices are reasonable, and the handlord, formerly co-proprietor of the Hotel d'Allemagne, is particularly attentive and convisous to English travellers.

Brokers.-R. St. Amour & Son.-Agonts of the General Steam Navigation Company. Omnibuses attend the arrival of each train.

Ostend is at present principally known as a favour-Hewatering-place, much p stronized by the ellicofthe meighbouring states, who resort here in great num-bers during the summer. The town itself has no particular object deserving of notice beyond its comparts and fortifications, but it possesses one of bouse, enjoying an excellent resurtation.

the finest marine parades in Europe. The Diane of Ostend is a celebrated walk along the shore, upon an elevated mole built parallel with the sea-ward rampart of the town, and so constructed, that while It serves as a barrier against the encroaching and formidable attacks of the sea, it forms one of the most agreeable promenades imaginable.

By recent arrangements, travellers proceeding to or returning from Germany, by declaring the same at the Ostend or frontier Custom-house, their luggage is not examined in Belgium, but entered in transit, thus avoiding the annoyance of a search of luggage until the end of the journey. By an order of the Board of Customs, luggage of travellers arriving by the mails at Dover or Ostend is examined at any hour of the day or night. No permit is required on embarking at Ostend.

Bruges-Slat.-- Hotels:--

HOTEL DE COMMERCE, à first-rate ofd-establish

HOTEL DE FLANDRE—au old established house famous for its fine wines and good dinners; andlord Mr. Decker Cruyt.

Distance from Ostend, 22 kilometres (14 miles); time occupied in transit 30 to 35 minutes. Six canais here meet, from Ghent, Ostend, Dunkirk, Sluys, Furnes, and Ypres, in the large dook or basin, which is the finest in Belgumn. Fares of Vigilantes, 1 france per drive; or for the first hour, 1 fr. 50 c.; for the others 1 fr. for two persons; if for three or four, \( \frac{1}{2} \) fr. per hour more. The railway station at Brugos is on the Vrydags Markt. The West Flanders Railway is now open to Courtray, making a direct railway from Ostend and Bruges to Paris, via Lille, Amiens, &c. It is 23 miles shorter than by Ghent.

On leaving Ostend, it is a very general custom for travellers going to Germany to take a railway ticket for the whole distance to Cologne, for the purpose of reaching the Rhine with the least possible delay. In so doing they deprive themselves of the opportunity of visiting the cities in Belgium which possess more objects of interest to the lover of the fine arts, more pure and perfect specimens of florid gothic architecture, a richer collection of rare and beautiful paintings, by the old Flemish masters, than can probably be found in the whole of Germany. If, instead of hurrying in this hot-haste through a country which presents so many points of interest to travellers in general, and to Englishmen in particular, our countrymen were to devote a part of their time to Belgium, they would never regret becoming acquainted with its peculiarities, its tine old cities, its glorious monuments, its arts and sciences, the people and their institutions.

Commencing with Bruges, which occupies so prominent a place in the history of Flanders, the traveller will find this town especially worthy of notice—not that it presents the aspect of a populous modern city, but breams it has preserved the peculiarities which distinguished its appearance during the middle ages.

The population is about 49,000, and on fete days the fine old city wears a gay and animated appearance.

The churches and other public edifices of Bruges contain several rare paintings. The church of Notre Dame has many works of art worthy of an attentive examination. A statue of the Virgir and the infant Jesus, supposed to be by Michael Angelo, is greatly admired by connoisseurs for the classical beauty of feature and delicate form of the hands which characterises the two figures. Among the paintings we need only direct attention to a picture of the Virgin and Child, surrounded by Saints, reputed to be by Van Dyck, the "Adoration of the Shepherds," and the "Adoration of the Magi." Before quitting the church the traveller should inspect the puipit, one of the most beautiful and highly finished pieces of carving in wood to be seen in Belgium. Instead of visiting the neighbouring churches, the traveller will do well to go to the Hospital of St. John, which is close to the church of Notre Dame, as this institution is celebrated for consequence of the setting pictures, painted by Hans Scholing, so remarkable for purity of colouring and significant of the most indifferent spectator will find himself an admirer and a describer of their prominent beauties.

The Belfrey of Bruges has, according to some, the finest chime of bells in Europe, 48 in number, played 4 times an hour by carfous machinery which can be inspected by paying a small fee. The lace-working, which is the chief industry of the poor women can be seen in almost every street. The Fish market is very curious. Bruges has the characteristics of a Dutch town, more than any in Belgium.

Waterloo,-Hotels:-Mount St. Jean and Colonno.

The excursion to Waterloo is a very pleasant one indeed—through the forest of Soignies. Fee English or American travellers who visit Brussels, can refrain from going to Waterloo and Mount St. Jean, the Chateau of Hougounout, La Haic Sainte, Quatro Bras, &c., which with their exciting associations, are as attractive as ever.

The expense of a party going to Waterloo was formerly 27 francs, but this hus been reduced to a more reasonable price by the spirit of English enterprise. Instead of the close mediante, or lumbering carriage, there is now an English four-horse Mail Coach belonging to Messrs. Copper and Suffell, which runs daily between Brussels and Mount St. Jean on the field of Waterloo. Fares - 5 francs there and back, or 6 francs, including the Branch Coach round the fold!! . A reduction is made for the conveyance of parties consisting of more than three persons, on booking at Suffell's, 17, Rue Villa Hermusa. Ladies in particular will find this conveyance by far the most agreeable and unexceptionable, as two-horse branch coach conveys the passenour from the village of Mount St. Jean round the field, thus obviating all fatigue on a suitry day, and inconvenience in unfavourable weather. The Réveille in the morning, announcing the departure of the Couches, is said to produce anexciting effect. The Bugler generally startles the traveller with the tune of the "Fine Old English Gentleman."—" See the Conquering Hero Commers," or some other equally thrilling notes to with the ear, and woe the patronage of English Crawellers. The "Victoria" or "Warntor" starts at 2.30 a.m. from the licted de Saxe, and the Hotel de l'Univers, Rue Neuve: taking up passengers at all the hotes in Rio Place Royale at 9.45 a.m. precisely. The Coach reaches Waterlee at 11.15, al all the bot

Brussels at 3.30, in time for all the Table d'Hôte dinners. We strongly recommend travellers to secure their places, for the day they wish to go, immediately on their arrival in Brussels, at Suffell's, No 17, Rue Ville Hermosa, Montagne de la Cour; or of J. Copper, 23, Esplanade, Port de Namur.

This conveyance renders a visit to Waterloo an agreeable and cheap excursion, but as it interferes with the parties who formerly let out vehicles for Waterloo, this coach is opposed by Waters and Commissioners. We therefore think it right to warn our readers, that if they mention "Waterloo," attempts will be made to dissuade them from going by the "Mail Coach," though we hope unsuccessfully, as this conveyance is decidedly the best, being respectably conducted by a steady English coachman; and considering that the proprietors are two undustrious Englishmen, who have established this coach for the conveyance of travellers, we think they are entitled to the support of their fellow-countrymen.

Travellers wishing to possess a concise and authentic history of the celebrated battle, should purchase "The Voice from Waterloo," by the late Serjeant-major Cotton, to be had at the Waterloo Museum.

A fifth edition is now published, which has been carefully revised, and exceedingly well got up. It is judiciously embellished with portraits of the principal heroes of this great drama, and contains capital maps of the campaign, and the field of Waterloo, giving the position of the armics, and showing the spots where brave Picton, the gallant Howard, Gordon, and other chiefs were struck down. The author was in the fight, in the Thussars, and subsequently resided at Mont St. Jean, where he acted as Guide to English visitors over the field for a great many years.

Sengeaut-Major Cotton left a family of young motherless children, who derive their chief support from the sale of this work, and the collection of relies sold at the Waterloo Museum.

Mrs. Veraleywich, a niece of the late Serjeant Cotton, keeps excellent refreshments at the Museum, viz: -Pale Ale, Porter, &c.

The Steam-Packet direct from London to Antwerp reaches the mouth of the Scheldt a few hours more or less after midnight, passes Flushing, and generally ascends the river up to Fort Lillo, before the passengers have left their berths. At this point the beautiful spire of the cathedral of Antwerp is visible, and gradually becomes more conspicuous, tapering up into the sky far above the other steeples as the steamer advances towards the rine old city. After passing Fort Lille the presengers usually settle their accounts with the steward, and prepare their luggage for the examination of the Belgian Douaniers. This operation is performed on board, immediately the vessel reaches the quay; and though the officers are somewhat like our own. rather "capricious," and occasionally "rough," and unnecessarily zealous in behalf of the Crown, a little humoursome coaxing softens these asperlities, and they endeavour to perform their duties with as much urbanity as they are susceptible of. When this is accomplished, the passenger must exhibit his passport to the Commissaire maritime of the port. who comes on board; and if it is in order, or en règle, as they term it, it is risé, and he can disembark without further hindrance. Should an English subject have omitted to provide himself with a passport, he can obtain one from the English consul; but, as this is attended with considerable inconvenience, it is better to bring one from London. at Windsor.

The commercial capital of Reigium is situated on the banks of the Scheldt. It is celebrated for its magnificent docks, constructed under the direction, of Napoleon, which are capable of receiving twotheusand ships.

The streets of Antwerp, like those of many of the . towns in Belgium are not apparently laid out upon any plan, but have probably, in the first instance, followed the natural caprices of a growing population. They wind and turn, and turn and wind, each street so like its neighbour, that a stranger has no small difficulty in choosing out his way. Around the cathedral there are a few open squares; but generally, there is a want of some bold street, by the course of which all the rest may be indicated. If this he a fault, it is amply repaid by the grotesque architectural combinations, produced by the endless turnings of the streets. The quaint old houses, six or seven stories high, tapering up to a pinnacle, and their fronts all adorned with the luxuriant tracery which characterises the buildings erected in Flanders by the Spaniards, present themselves in such groups, and jet so pleturesquely that you are ready to forgive the irregular construction of the city. The costume of the market and peasant women is quite in harmony with the picturesque architecture. The peculiar and odd-looking shape of the straw bonnets of the elder women, and the cornettish, gay contrast in the foilette of the glils. with their variety of colours, scarlet, blue and pink trimming, the pure white cap of lace, its broad border or "lappels" shadowing the rosy face. like the mailed casque of a knight.

Probably there is no place in Europe so rich in magnificent churches, embellished by the most remarkable works of art, as the town of Antwerpenriched by the best productions of Rubons and Van Dyck, and other great masters of painting, who were natives of the city. Commencing with the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the traveller must first examine the architecture of the spire-a Gothic structure of exceeding beauty. It is 466 feet high, and runs up tapering into the clouds. with a gradual, yet correct mathematical precision which is unequalled in any other edifice on the Continent. Entering the Cathodral, the first object of attraction is the celebrated painting-with engraved copies or which most people are familiar -viz., The Descent from the Cross-reputed to be the chef Course of Rubens. To our mind the helpless heaviness of the dead body of the Saviour suspended and supported by the Apostles, and being gradually lowered-is represented with inimitable truth.

On the other side is another painting—the pendant, as the French express it—representing the "Elevation of the Cross," which Sir Joshua Reyolds describes as one of the best and most animated compositions painted by Rubens. "The Assumption of the Virgin" and "The Resurrection of the Saviour," two other admirable paintings by the same master, should also be inspected; as also the paintin acryed wood, and the newly-erected sculptured gothic stalls in the principal Choir, which will remind the traveller of those in St. George's chapsi, at Window.

In front of the west door of the cathedral is a remarkable work in iron, executed by the celebrated Antwerp blacksmith, Quentin Matsys, who subsequently became a great painter; and in the Place Verte, opposite the cathedral, is a fine statute of Rubens.

The church of St. Jaques is an imposing-looking edifice, which contains many precious and rare works in painting and sculpture; and the interior of the church is embellished with splendour and richness of decoration. The tomb of Rubens is, however, the principal object of attraction. The altar-piece is also by Rubens, and the beautiful picture of the Saviour Crucified is by Van Dyck. The marble statue of the Virgin agreatly admired; it is by Duque-nov.

On entering the church of St. Paul, the visitor will be struck by a representation of Mount Calvary, -the Crucifixion-and the Ordeal of Purgatory. The coarse and rough manner in which these scenes are represented, form a singular contrast to the numerous works of Art excented in the highest perfection within the church. The "Adoration of the Shepherds" is said-but not generally considered-to be the production of Rubens. "The Descent from the Cross" --- A magnificent altar-piece-"The Works of Mercy"-and last, though not the least worthy of notice, the thrilling picture designated "The Scourging of Christ," by Rubens. No person can behold this extraordinary painting with unmoved feelings of admiration of the painter who could delineate the person of the Saviour undergoing the "flagellation" from the hands of the public executioner-and indignant sympathy with the suffering Saviour and author of Christianity.

The churches of St. Augustine and that of the Jesuits also contain several good paintings and remarkable statues in wood. In the church of St. Augustine is the celebrated alter-piece by Reubens, the marriage of St. Catharine. The church of St. Andrew has a pulpit representing the calling of Andrew the patron saint of the church. The carying is as fine as sculpture, and is, perhaps, Verbruggen's best work. The collection of pictures at the Museum should likewise be visited. Quentin Matsys has several works here of merit—his "Descent from the Cross" is one of the best; No. 82, "The Dead Christ"; 84, "The Virgin holding the infant Redeemer;" 83, "St. John;" 85, "A Holy Family;" 86, "Our Saviour on the Cross;" 72, The Crucifixion of Christ between the two Thieves;" 73, 77, 75, 76, and 79, are the Works of Reubens; 111, 112, 113, are admirable specimens of the productions of Van Dyck.

Teniers, Van Dyck, Sneiders and Jordans, the celebrated Flomish painters, were all born in Antwerp. It is celebrated for its manufacture of black silk and lace.

The Zoological gardens are well worth visiting; the collection of beautiful birds, and various specimens of animals, will even be found worthy of a visit from a subscriber to the aristocratic gardens in London. There are several private collections of paintings which are shown to strangers. We give the addresses of a few of them: — M. Henry, Rue de la Digne d'Ever; M. Vart Comp, Rue d'Hoboken; M. Traché, Rue du Couvent; Mr Baillic, manufacturer of the celebrated Antwerp black silks: M de Wayt, Rue du Jardin, very good; the visitor pays 1 fr., which goes to the poor.

The interior of the Brewer's Hall, near the Quay, is worth a visit.

This town is situated on the river Pyle, 27 miles from Brussels by the railroad, and 44 from Liége. The Town-hall is a splendid specimen of gothic architecture, and contains a fine gallery of paintings, the greater part by the first masters of the Flomish school. Travellers should also pay a visit to the Charch of St. Peter, and its celebrated charel of "Endr, idom." The Church of St. Peter has several fine pictures; the one representing "Jesus giving the Krys to St. Peter," was taken by the Fioneh to Paris, and afterwards returned. The stalls in the choir of the Church St. Gertrade are considered remarkably beautiful. In the 14th century Louvain contained 140,000 inhabitants; now less them 30,000. The most important article of industry is been, of which large quantities are annually exported. It also carries on considerable traffic in lace, corn, and hops.

Brussels may be reached either by Wavre or Mahnes.

Among the chief objects of its attractions may be enumerated the old Church of St. Germain, built upon an eminence overhanging the town. It is an erection of the ninth century, containing an altar-piece by Wappes. The railroad, after leaving the station, looks down from an embankment on the town. On nearing Landen, it runs through the plain of Neirwelden, celebrated for two great battles fought there in 1693, when our countrymen, under the third William, were beaten by the French under Marshal Luxembourg; and in 1793, when the Austrians defeated the revolutionary army, and drove them from Belgium. On approaching Liege the traveller should be particular in watching the ascent of the train, from the station at Ans to the stationary engine-house on the summit of the hill, and then prepare himsel. to behold, during the descent on the inclined plane. one of the most splendid paroramic views in the world, which will burst upon his sight with instanengeous grandeur. The whele city of Liege, with its cupola-dome ; its immunerable manufactories. and its palace, extended over the valley, or plainat the junction of the Meuse and Ourthe -is one of those suches never to be forgotten. The descent from the top of this hill is down an inclined plane to Liege, and the train is drawn down or up this line by means of a rope and two fixed engines of 80 horse power. There are some unusual engineering difficulties. The station is between 400 and 500 feet above the level of the Meuse. The gradient of descent is so steep, that the locomotive engines cannot be used; but the train is drawn by ropes up and down two inclined plains, cach about two miles and a half long. The view you obtain from the height of the gradient of Liege and the valley of the Meuse, is one of a character not often seen on a railway, or indeed, anywhere else! Perhaps some part of the effect it produces on the specta-tor, may be attributable to the sudden change which here takes place from flat unteresting, or, at all events, commonplace scenery, to the unfamiliar beauties of bill and valley. But the some would be grand and picturesque seen from and point of view. Emerging from the "cuttings" of the railway, where the view is obstructed on either side, you come suddenly on Liege lying in a valley below, and embosomed in hills of more than common beauty. The town itself is, in many of its features, very similar to our large manufacturing towns with the advantage of much finer position. The smoke of the factories, rises above the mass the houses; but what would be destructive to all idea of the picturesque in any other position, becomes here almost an additional beauty, from the contrast it affords to the smiling verdure of the valley of the Meuse, and the fir-crowned hills around, The contrast presented by the view of Liege from the heights of the railway at Ans, is as strinking as the scene itself is beautiful; and, as the train deseends the inclined plane generally very slowly the traveller has a most favourable opportunity for viewing this magnificent panarama in all its thrilling details, until the train reaches the station at

Its history is connected with the celebrated bishops of Liege-the repeated conflicts between the citizens and their bishops -the bishops against their allies, the Dukes of Burgundy- and there is prohably no better historical nurrative of these events than that given by Scott in Quentin Durward; even the town and palace of Liege are so graphically described, that the details are correct even at the present day. The church of St. Jaques is remarkable for a similarity existing between the style of Ats architecture and that of the Bourse at Antwerp: both are distinguished by the piazzas, or pillars of Sothic Moorish art-each of different pattern-and each characterized by the same beautiful elegance f design and finish.

This town has enjoyed a perfect neutrality during some of the hottest wars, chiefly on account of its being a place of medical resort for invalids from all parts of the world. The waters are highly beneficial in liver complaints and agreeable. English Newspapers can be seen here.

The fountains of Spa are distinguished by the following names, viz .: - The Pouhon, situate in the centre of the town, is the most celebrated; the Geronstere is about two miles from Spa, in a charming spot in the middle of a wood; the Sauveniere and the Groosbeck are at about the same distance, in a wood containing most delightful walks. The Redoute of Spa is situate in the centre of the town; and during the season, which generally commen ces in June, is one of the most frequented establishments in Europe. The articles of Spa wood made here are most beautiful, and tew ladies leave Spa without taking some of these with them. The Cascade of Coo, and the Grotto of Remouchamp, should be visited by every admirer of picturesque scenery.

The amusements at Spa are so arranged as to follow in uninterrupted succession. Theatre three times a week; Balls twice a week, and on the remaining days, Concerts. A band composed of 25 first-rate musicians plays twice a day either in the lively promenade, or in the Music Gallery of the Redoute. Steeple chases, flat races, hunting with a pack of capital working harriers, shooting, and fishing. Upwards of 500 saddle-horses, and numbers of elegant carriages, are let out for hire. Extra balls and fêtes, and fêtes-champêties are given during the course of the season in three splendid establishments:-the Redoute, the Vanshall, and Salle Levos, and in the magnificent garden of the Geronstere. Numerous excavations of Roman antiquities have been made here; and this is supposed to be the Novesium of the Romans. Here Drusus, who built the town, threw a bridge over the Rhine. Reuss has sustained some remarkable sleges, which are mentioned in history. Among its edifices the old church of St. Quirinus, a fine Gothic building, erected in 1209, is well worthy examination, its dome having some early paintings in Fresco by Cornelius.

Near Neuss, is the ancient abbey of Eberach, the church of which, built in the thirteenth century, was remarkable for its mountenets. On the decrease of the Princes and Bishops of Wurzburg, their hearts were deposited in it. Also, near here is the ancient castle of the family of Dyck.

Crefeld .- 25,000 .- HOTEL :- OBERHEIMS.

This is a flourishing town, with fine wide streets of nicely-built houses, about 5 miles from the Rhine, between Dusseldorf and Cleves. Here, there are considerable manufactures of velvet, silk, cotton, wool, linen and other articles, beside: dyeworks. The produce of the looms amounts annually to about 4,000,000 dollars. During the seven years' war, an important conflict took place hereabout. In the neighbourhood are the charming villages of Tennonthal, Crebun, Freiheit, and Ruine. For Rail to Neuss and Cologne, see page 89.

Ruhrort.-2500.-Hotel: Villes DE CLEVES. Situated at the confluence of the Ruhr (Roor), with the Rhine. It possesses many large shipbuilding docks, and has an immense coal-trade with Holland, the coal being derived from the large beds of that mineral on the banks of the Roer. This is the best harbour on the Lower Rhine, and does a large carrying trade, besides those in corn, timber, and wool. To Luftballon, a public pleasure garden about a mile distant, an agreeable walk may be taken; and the ironworks at Sterkeradeearn Oberhausen, are worth visiting. At Ruhrort is an Hydraulic Establishment, consisting of two towers, each 120 feet high, one on each side of the Rhine, at Homberg and Ruhrort, each of which contains an engine. These machines, combining the forces of steam and water, have a platform with rails, and by means of which two large waggons, loaded with goods, can be raised and lowered according to the difference of the height of the water and the rails of the railway, which terminate in the towers. The correspondence be-tween the two banks, and the stations of Homberg and Ruhrort, is made by a large steamer, having rails on deck carrying twelve carriages, and in this manner the passengers are conveyed in the railway carriages without changing their mette. from one bank to the other

Mons (Bergen in German). - 30,000 -HOTEL :-

THE HOTEL DU SINGE D'OR IS a house of humble pretensions, but very good, and exceedingly quiet.

This important town is divided into two sections by the river Trouble. It is surrounded by an earth-work and ditch, and was considerably strengthened in 1820. The Hotel de Ville is a fine old structure, richly ornamented with sculpture ; and the old church of St. Elizabeth is said to have been erected on the site of a fortress erected by Julius Cæsar. It has suffered considerably at times from the ravages of war. The chief manufactures are woollen stuffs, linen, lace, and earthenware, The surrounding district abounds with coal-mines. There are also in the neighbourhood extensive bleaching grounds. The principal building is the Church of St. Waudru, built in the Gothic style, commenced in 1460, but not finished until 1580. It stands on the left hand side as we enter Mons from the railway. The interior of the church is well worth a visit; its rude piers without capitals, network of ribs, and high altar decorated with basreliefs from the New Testament, and cut by an Italian artist, commands attention.

Mons has a communication with the Scheldt by the Canal de Condé; and also, by railway, with Jurbise, Ath, Tournai, Lille, and Calais.

Conveyances .- Railway to Valenciennes, Douai. Lille, Dunkirk, and Calais, see pages 64, 12, and 14. To Valenciennes, Arras, Amiens, and Paris, see pages 12 and 15.

At Mons a branch railway ensures a direct commanication to Paris, Charleroi, Namur, and Colegne. This route avoids the detour to Braine-le-domts. On leaving Mons, the Railway passes the Stations of Cucames, Frameries, Quevy (the Bel-gian Custom-house), Feiguies (the French Customhouse), after which it reaches-Maritmont, and here joins the Northern of France line.

Quievrain .-- A town containing 2000 inhabitants, carrying on an active commerce with France. It does not absolutely contain any thing worth notice. This is the frontier station of the Southern Line, and the point of junction with the Great Northern of France Railway. At Quievrain is the Belgian custom-house, where the examina-tion of the Passport and Luggage take place on entering Belgium; and one half mile further, the small river Annelle marks the boundary of France. The neighbourhood abounds in coal and other minerals.

The delay during the examination of luggage, which takes place at Valenciannes, is considerable. The next station of importance met with is Donat after passing St. Raismes, St. Uallars, Louvain, and Martigny, all places of small note, and not requiring a special notice at our hands; we arrive at

The village of Hoyelsert, which is close by, is very picturesque. Mr. Deman d'Atterrode is building a country house in the style of the "Moyen age," which will have a very imposing effect, as seen from the road.

La Hulpe is nine miles from Brussels, and is a village of some importance. It was once a provincial town. From the station there is a fine view over an extensive sheet of water towards the country-seat of the Marquis d'Bethune, which is a remarkably fine house, with extensive grounds. There is a paper mill in the village, which gives employment to a great many hands. From the high ground above the station may be seen on a clear day, the monumental ilon on the field of Waterloo.

Ottignies is 15 miles from Brussels, and forms tite junction of the Charleroi and Louvain and the Manage and Wavre lines with that of the Luxembourg. It is one common station for the three companies. There is a considerable movement here, owing to the change of trains by passengers and the goods traffic passing from one line to another. It is intended shortly to erect more commodious waiting-rooms, &c. There are several gentlemen's seats in this neighbourhood, which are seen from the different lines.

Court St. Etienne.-

On leaving this station the traveller should refriember that he is approaching one of the most singular and beautiful views in Europe, viz.—the ruins of the Abbey le Villers at

Villers la Ville.—Stat.—

The line passes through the garden of the abbey, and generally so rapidly, that only a glimpse can be sibtained of these magnificent rules. The Tourist should therefore make an excursion expressly to that them from Brussels, or alight at this station and take a subsequent train on to Paris; but the armor course is the most pleasant. Arrangements have been made by which tourists can leave Brussels every day at 9.5 in the morning, and return to Brussels at 4.30 in the afternoon, in time for the hable d'hoires; thus, spending a most delightful the most aplendid, romantic, and picturesque pile ratius in Europe. Situated in a beautiful valley, in the centre of an ancient forest, the rains where an immense area of enclosed grounds, as extensive as some towns; and the remains attest not only the importance of this celebrated monastery, but its former splendour and palatial grandeur.

The best view of the ruins is from the terrace gardens beyond the railway; but it is impossible to say which excites the most admiration, the view from the heights around, or a walk through the ruins. No one can behold the refectory, the cloisters, the crypts, the breviary, and last the magnificent ruins of the beautiful church, without feelings of awe and wonder. It is a seem of surpassing beauty, particularly in the effulgence of the noon day or setting sun. Amid these ruins the silence is so profound that it impresses the visitor with an indescribable awe. But, in the words of Sir Walter Scott—addressed to the ruins of Melrose—we would also add:—

"If thou would'st view fair Villers aright, Go visit it by the pale moonlight; For the gray beams of lightsome day Gild, but to float, the ruins grey. When the broken arches are black in night; And each shafted oricl glimmers white; When the cold lights' uncertain shower Streams on the ruin'd central tower; When buttress and buttress, afternately Seem framed of ebon and ivory.

Then go—but not alone the while, Then view La Villers' rulned pile; And, home returning, soothly swear Was never scene so sad and fair."

The Abbey de Villers was first pillaged, and then set fire to by a party of French Republican soldiers in 1789. The ruins were then sold to a person of the name of La Terrace for 70,000fr., who continued the work of destruction, and left the present ruins, which, with the adjacent land, is now the property of Madame Huart d'Enghien.

At two leagues' distance from Charlerol, in the picturesque valley of the Sambre, are the ruins of the Abbaye d'Alne, the most ancient monastery perhaps in Europe, built in the year 556.

From Charlerol to the French frontier the line proceeds through a remarkably fine and even picturesque scenery to Erqueliumes, the first station in France, where the baggage and passports are examined. The undulations are continuous to Namur, which is an agreeable change after passing over the low country from the coast.

Gembloux is a small town, the trade of which is cutlery. Very little of the town is seen from the railway, as it lies in a hollow. Between the town and the station may be observed a large pile of brick building. This was formerly a Benedictine College, but in 1789 the monks were dispersed, the property was seized and sold.

Yery rich fron ore is found in this neighbourhood, which has made this rather insignificant station important for its traffic.

Phisnes.

The last station before reaching Namur. The train passes through several deep cuttings in rock, giving occasional peeps of very lovely country. After passing the last cutting, the line is carried oyer a long bank, below which lie the Staterallway and the river Sambre; the valley of the Sambre, thus presented to view, showing one of the richest scenes in Europe. The formidable citadel dysphauging the valley on the one side, with the richly wooded kills surrounding it on the other, together with its surface so highly cultivated, is most interesting to view.

It contains a population of 25,000, who are chiefly employed in the cuttery business. It is defended by a cliadel, built on the summit of a craggy rock. The cathedral and the church of the Jesuits are both worthy attention: the former is a fine specimen of modern the latter of ancient parchitecture. Here are extensive manufactures of fire-arms, swords, knives, solssors, and other articles of iron, copper, and brass, Quantities of leather, paper, thread, and tobacco are also prepared here. Namur has often changed masters, and is noted for the many sieges which it has sustained. It is the strongest fortress in Bolyum.

HOLLAND.

The following description of the route to the Rhine, from London to Rotterdam, and through Folland, is from so impartial a source, that we are persuaded our readers will peruse it with pleasure. It is written by the Foreign correspondent of the Literary Gazette, and dated from Neuwied on the Thine:— Whilst strolling in the grounds of Prince Maximilian in this delightful spot, immortalised by Turner's charming drawing in the possession of Mr. Windus, it has occurred to me to recommend the Tourist to try, for variety's soke, the route hither riv Holland. It is true that four-and-twenty hours' Atsaming on the 'majestic Rhine,' before a glimpse of scenery comparable to the Thames presents issuelf, is enough to deter the seeker of pleasant vales and vine-clad mountains, to say nothing of twenty Bours' tumbling and tossing in the Channel; but the Dutch are a peculiar people—quaint, cleanly, and antiquated, and a few days' sojourn in their curious pile-built towns and bedyked country is a thing to interest. The whole extent of land between Rotterdam and Amsterdam is a watery meadow, devoted to the pasture of oxen, which are exported almost daily in vessels trading to London, Hull, and Newcastle, yet it is studded at intervals with towns of great contrasting interest. Rotterdam, with its broad canals overhanging drawbridges, and picturesque shipping, looking as clean-painted and as shining as if the planks from deck to keel were scrubbed with soap and water every morning, reminds one of London such as we see it represented in pictures a hundred years ago. The large-gabled red-brick houses, with their long windows and antiquated doors, ornamented externally with festoons of manypatterned chains from post to post, we have often seen in Hogarth's street pictures; and the hackney coches are still swung and loosed after the lumbering model of my Lord Mayor's gold coach. In the market square is a time statue of the great folterdamscholar, favourite of our Henry VIIL, and subsequent teacher of Greek at Cambridge-Erasmus. Passing to the railway, of which the station is a particularly light and elegant structure, the traveller leaves at a good comfortable pace to the sound of tae korn. The Train has a guard at each end, dressed, Robin Hood-like, with a neat bugle and tassels, and an echo from one to the other is the signal for starting. The first station, Schiedam, may be known by the innumerable windmills m its vicinity, used by the Hollands distilleries; and the second, Delft, is well known for its manufacture of a peculiar rough kind of crockery. The train next stops at the seat of Dutch aristocracy, the Hague, and here the tourist should alight to see the King's Palace and Park, and House in the Wood, while the Table d'hôtes will give a fair idea of the grandeur and antiquity of Dutch cookery. The picture-gallery contains some choice examples of the lilemish school. Here may be seen the finest gems of Michs and Gerard Douw, Paul Potter's cl. of d'aurre, 'The Bull,' and Savery's 'Orpheus Charming the Beasts,' in which Professor Owen discovered one of the most valuable links in the chain of pictorial evidence of the existence of the Dodo. Holland has, however, lost . neveral fine pictures during the last few years; we missed the fine Remorandts and the Raffaelle drawings that formerly enriched the palace of the Prince of Orange; and the choice collection of M. Verstolk van Socien, sold in London a year or two since, has not been replaced by any other. Leyden, the next town of importance on the line, has a totally different aspect, being an academic city, with a valuable natural history museum. The eminent ornithologist, Temminck, still presides here, and many specimens of birds, shells, etc., from islands in the East, with which the Dutch have almost an excluaive intercourse, attract the eye of foreigners. The Dutch are not, however, the naturalists they were are intercourse, attract the cycle of contents. They have worked up the Greenland and Spitzbergen tanna pretty well, but have left the tropies to other hands. Haarlem, a few miles farther north, is chiefly notice able for its park and bulb gardens. The great sandhills, which formerly marked the limits of the Zuyder Zee, afford rare soil for such plants as tulps, hyacinths, and the like, and several gardeners of eminence have come to be established in this locality. On entering Amsterdam the tourist is struck stonce by the busy quaintness and bustle of the people, the strange irregularity of the buildings, and the lively marketing that is going on every where. Most of the better class of the peasuntry still preserve the fashion of wearing metal skull shields of tin or brass beneath the clean lace caps turning out on either side of the face in a large square ornament nearly as large and not much unlike a curtainpand. Passing the marbled Stadt-House we were amused at hearing the old clock playing on its numerous belis Papageno's well-known bell-song in Mozart's Zauberflote. Those who would avoid much of the flat scenery of the Rhine, may at this point take the Dutch Rhenish Railway to Cologne, and here the glories of the 'exulting and abounding river' begin."

HOLLAND is situated along the south-eastern coast of the North Sea, and extends in its greatest length, from N.E. to S.W., about 190 English miles. Its greatest breadth, from E. to W., is about 192 English miles. The superficial area is 7,614,252 English acres, or 11,897 English square miles. The ancient accounts of Hollaud represent it as an extended swamp, alternately covered with and abantioned by the waters of the ocean. Hollaud has had a severe contest with the ocean, which has ended as a great, almost omnipotent, triumph for human industry, and in the country being brought into a high state of cultivation and comparative safety. The canals are very numerous, and of the greatest willity in facilitating the internal trade. They are lined with trees, which tend greatly to beautify the secontry, in itself so flat that to those sproaching it along the rivers, and some part of the coast it has been also shown in some parts so very high as to shut out the view of the sea even from the sorget of the spress. In some parts of Zealand and of North Holland, the defensive war against the encreach-ments of the sea is kept up with great difficulty and at an immense expense. The province of Frier's land, which has no sandhills, is protected against the sea by dykes and palisadoes. The industry of the people has multiplied cattle and pasture-grounds. Vast meadows, dazzling with the richest verdure are, during eight months of the year, covered with cattle, whose high condition attests an abundant and wholesome nutriment. In the North, wheat, flax, and madder are raised; and in the South, where agriculture has made the greatest progress, tobacco and different kinds of fruit-trees cover the fields.

The Dutch possess an excellent system of elementary education, regulated according to a law passed in 1857, and is based on a system of religious equality, and a total separation of Church and State. This law is most complete in all its details and provisions, which ensure that every child in the country shall receive an education in the simple branches of secular knowledge. The law does not compet parents to send their children to school, but refuses all relief from the public funds unless they do so;

and the result is, there are none without education.

The Government is a Constitutional Monarchy. The King sharing the legislative power with the two Chambers of the States-general. The first is chosen by the Provincial States, and consists of 39 members who sit during nine years. The second Chamber consists of 68 members, sitting 4 years, and are chosen by those who pay a certain sum in the taxes, varying for the different towns and provinces. The chief legislative power resides in the second Chamber, which contains the most eminent political men in the country There is religious toleration, though the prevailing religion is Protestantism. Each of the 11 Provinces and its Provincial States, with whom resides the legislative power, chosen by the electors. Each Province is sub-divided into arrondisments and cantons, which form judicial circuits. The Colonial Government is vested principally in the Crown, the "States" having a right of inquiry.

Productive Industry.—At present the manufactures of Holland are upon a narrow scale. Linen, tapes, and other smallware are partially manufactured, principally for domestic consumption, The sugar-refining trade is extensively cultivated; and the manufacture of tobacco and snuff given employment to a large number of persons. The broweries are also extensive; but the building of ships, barges, and boats, at present form the staple industry of the country. There are several rising Iron and Metal Works at Rotterdam, The Hague, and Amsterdam, the principal of which are the Royal Iron Works, at the latter place, of Messrs. I aul Van Vlissingen and Dudon Van Hull, employing about

The fares. are about I stiver per mile. Rate of travelling, five miles per hour. A trip by Canal would give the best notion of Holland.

INNS.—The average charges are—bed, I guilder; breakfast, 12 stivers; tes, ditto; dinner, with wine, 2 guilders; table d'hôte at 4 o'clock. Throughout Holland the waiter is called "Jan." The only water fit for table use is the effervescing water from the Nassau springs, which is generally adopted for drinking by travellers.

COUNTRY -Travellers should observe the admirable and perfect system of canal intercommunication, forming not only the high roads but almost the streets of Holland. Also the stuper. dous dykes, (the annual repair of which costs upwards of £500,000,) the sole protection from the sea. which is at a higher level than much of the land. The number of windmills presents a curious feature ; their use is much more general than in England. In the towns, beyond the complete collections of Dutch Paintings at the Hague and Amsterdam, (and the Japanese Collections, which circumstances. render peculiar to Holland,) there is little to attract. Holland, however, presents the picture of people owing not only their wealth and high commercial position, but even the vory land, to their own abour and enterprise.

NEW BARH HOTEL.—A first-rate house, offering excellent accommodation.

A large commercial city of Holland, being the second in the kingdom. It is in the province of south Holland, delightfully situated on the north bank of the river Mars, which here resembles an nem of the sea, although nearly 20 miles from its passing at the Quays, (Boomples). Luggage is examined apon leaving the Steamers. The form of Rotterdam is triangular, its longest side (above a mile and a balf in extent) stretching along the bank of the Mass. It is traversed by the Rotte, which here joins the Mass and is intersected, even more than other Dutch towns, by canals, which divide the half of the town near the river into several insulated spots, connected by draw-bridges. These canals are almost all bordered with trees. The row called the Boompjes is the finest, as well in regard to buildings as for its plessant prospect across the Maas. Next to it come. the Having-vliet. The other streets are in genera long, but narrow. The houses of Rot erdamar more convenient than elegant; their height is from four to five and six stories, many have mirrors outside of windows. Of the public buildings, the principal are, the great church of St. Lawrence. from the top of which there is an extensive prospect; the South church, an elegant building; and several other churches: the Academy, the Theatre. and the extensive buildings of the East India Company. There are also an excellent Gallery of pictures a very large Sailor's Home, a magnificent racht Club House; Zoological Gardens; a beauti-:ul Park, and other pullic walks. Rotterdam contains both an English Episcopal chapel and a Scotch Presbyterian church. It became a privileged town, and was surrounded with walls, in the thirteenth century. #### STEAMERS ON THE DAIL E.

The Steamers are divided into three cabins—the Pavillon. Chief Cabin, and the Fore Cabin. Refreshments are provided on board at a moderate rate, and by a printed tariff. The quickest boats go in one day down the Rhine, from Mannheim to Cologne and Dusseldorf; Mayence to Dusseldorf; Dusseldorf to Rotterdam. Up the stream in one day from Cologne to Mannheim in summer, and to Coblentz in winter; Coblentz to Mannheim. The following will be found the average line occupied on the voyage between:—

Dusseldorf and Cologne ... 314... 3 hrs... 5 hrs. Cologne and Mayence ... 127... 9 , ... 134... Mayence and Mannhelm ... 464... 32 , ... 54 , ...

In addition to the above stations, there are 38 small towns and 21 landing-places at which the steamers touch, some of them being the most picturesque points on the Rhine. At any of them, without exception, the tourist may land, and continue his journey when he pleases, up or down the river, by any of the company's steamers: he has only to take care to have his ticket marked by the conductor of the boat before leaving it. For landing or embarking at any of these points the charge is three halfpence. Upon disembarking, a small charge is made for each article of baggage placed in care of the boatman. A tariff fixes the amount of charge, which is often doubled by the men of the boat; the Captain, if referred to, will rectify this imposition, and declare the real sums which ought to be paid.

MONEY.—See pages xxxix and xl. &1 sterling is worth about 6 thalers 20 greachens.

SCENERY of the RHINE.—Below Bonn, in the direction of Cologne, or above Mayence, there is a scarcely any object at this in crawsh to merital mirration. About 20 miles above Cologne the scenary of the Rhine may be said to begin with the Soven Mountains, and thence to Coblentz; and from Coblentz to Mayence the turreted towns, castellated rains, and vine-terraced hills, succeed each other in picturesque profusion. The most appropriate starting places to explore the inland glories of the Rhine are Boun, Godesberg, Coblentz, St. Goar, Bingen, and Mayence. We trace in the elevated Alps, in Switzerland, and near Mount St. Gothard, the sources of the Rhine, the Tesua, and the Rhine, or the king of the German—may, of the West European rivers. The visitor, on ascending the Rhine, or on his arrival at Strasbourg, calls to his recollection how this seream has hakeened his course through Lake of Constance; how he precipitated himself over the rocky ramparis at Schaffmansen, then, strengthened by the collected waters of Switzerland—the influx of 70 glaciers and upwards of 370 rivers of various sizes—he commences his majestic course near the ancient Roman city of Bale; how he expands between the upper Black Forest, amidst ranges of mountains encircling a valley of nearly thirty miles in breadth, through which he playfully winds, and receiving, besides other streams, the important Neckar and Maine, until a rocky gate at Bingdu seeins to arrest his further, career, but which he powerfully bursts, and strengthened by the Naha and Moselle, overcomes, a similar polysical at Andernach, when he continues his victorious sources towards the sea.

For a fuller description of the scenery, places of antiquity, towns, villages, &c., on the Rhine, see Bradshaw's Liustrated Handrok for Belgium and the Rhine, price 5s.; also Bradshaw's Companion to the Continent, with romarks on climate, and the influence of travelling, by Dr. Edwin Lee, author of the baths of Germany, &c., &c.

tamilies and single gentlemen, who experience equal attention and civility. The proprietors, Messrs. Disch and Capellan, have a large assortment of the best Rhine and Moselle wines for wholesale.

HOTEL DE HOLLANDE, a first-rate establishment, facing the Quay, commands a charming view of the Rhine. Moderate charges, civility and attention, recommend the house to the patronage of English travellers.

HOTEL ROYAL, excellent in every respect, and commanding a fine view of the Rhine. Landlord, Mr. Dietzmann.

At Deutz, the HOTEL DE BELLE VUE, on the opposite side of the Rhine, facing Cologne, of which it commands a flue view, is a capital house —landlord, Mr. J. A. Kimmel.

Dome Hotel—near the Cathedral, and opposite the bridge.

HOTEL DU RHIN, a well-known good house, situated in the Hay-market.

EAU DE COLOGNE.—Travellers are frequently in partinued by officious persons offering to direct or accompany them to this or that vendor of the celebrated perfurie; and as there are upwards of sixty manufacturers of this article, we have deemed it right to try the qualities of several samples, and having submitted them to good connoiseurs, we recommend, in full confidence, the ostablishment of JOHANN ANTON FARINA, known by the name of the City of Milan, 129, High-streef, Hohe Strass, (extablished June, 1695)—a descendant of the original Farina family, and purveyor to most of the reigning monarchs of Europe, and who obtained the Mention Honorable" at the Paris Exhibition.

One of the best ways of distinguishing the genuine from the spurious, is to rub a few drops on the hand, when the good Ean de Cologne must neither smell of any spirituous liquor, nor of musk, nor of any foreign substance, but only the odour peculiar to the water.

Cologue, a city and fortress of Prussia, on the Rhine, with a population of 105,000. It has 20 churches, 8,500 houses, 19 gates, 33 squares, 270 streets, is strongly fortified, and possesses a bridge upon 39 boats across the Rhine, 1250 feet in length. It carries on a brisk trade by means of its connection by railways with all the chief cities of the continent.

Ouncers of Attraction.—The cathedral of Cologne, 511 ft. by 231 ft. merits the traveller's first notice. It was commenced in 1248, and is not yet finished, but its colossal proportions and magnificent architecture are calculated to inspire feelings of admiration. It is necessary to walk or drive round the area in which the cathedral stands, to see the full beauty of the structure; which, although it is unfinished in nevertheless magnificent: when it is unfinished which now, after the lapse of mearly three centuries and a half, seems probable, it will be the most splendid and perfect specimes of Gothic architecture in the world. The great design of the architect for the whole building is marked out with tolerable clearness; but nearly all that is necessary to give it an ensemble of architectural beauty is unfinished. The great tower, which is a miracle of lightness and elegance for so gigantic at mass, was to have been 500 feet high; but it is cut short at about 160. The choir is remarkable as one of the most perfect specimens of Gothle architecture extant. Mr. Woyer, whose residence is near the Isom Railway Terminus, has a very fine collection of paintings, both of the ancient and modern schools, which are opened froc to the public. The Gallery in which the paintings are exhibited is in itself quite a model for buildings of such a character, and well worthy the attention of the traveller.

Among the objects of interest may be noted the chapel of the Holy Three Kings, sepulchre of Maria of Medicis, of Conrad of Hochstetten, and of the Count of Schaumberg, &c.—St. Peter's church with the celebrated "Crucifixion of Peter," by Rubens, the original of which is shown on all days, by paying a fixed fee; the church of St. Ursula, with cloven thousand damsels, whose relies are to be seen in the walls of the church; the Jesuits' church, the clocks of which are cast out of the cannons which Tilly took in Magdeburg; the houses in which Maria of Medicis died, and in which Rubens was born, 1577, in the Sternengasse, No. 10; the Anostle's church, in the new market, built 1200; the museum in the Frankgasse, No. 7, near the cathedral, admission 10 agr.; it contains many valuable relies, besides a good collection of Roman antiquities; the Senate House, with the Hansa room. At the Stadt Casa, there is a splendid collection of the most exquisite paintings on glass, no one should leave Cologne without seeing them they are indescribably beautiful gems, and chefs d'œuvres of matchless beauty.

On leaving Cologne to sail up the Rhine, the traveller sees nothing as yet of that surpassing beauty, for which this magnificent river is so justly famed, still the banks, even here, are by no means devoid of interest. The country is not altogether flat; its aspect is enlivened by villages and well cultivated fields. As we approach Bonn the summits of the famous Siebengebirge (seven mountains) rise gradually into view, sometimes to the right and at other times to the left according as the direction of the boat's head is changed in accordance with the windings of the stream. These. with-their rugged sides and ruined castles, on a nearer approach, produce an imposing effect, and mark, as it were, the entrance into the "Paradise of Germany," as that portion of the Rhine is called which lies between Bonn and Mayence.

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. E. Metz, 13, Obenmaraptorter, has resided many years in London, and speaks English finently. Dr. M. is also a good Goomlist. F. C. Eisen, Bookseller, Frederick Withelm Street,

No. 2, and Domhof, No. 13. Buokseller to the King, Bradshaw's Guides and Hand-Books on sale.

The best and newest description of the Cathedral is that of Mr. Eisen, in French and German, at 1 fr. 50 c. per copy.

Bonn .- Stat .- HOTELS:-

GOLDEN STAR HOTEL, one of the best on the Continent in every respect, and worthy of the highest recommendation.

THE GRAND HOTEL ROYAL, overlooking the Rhine and facing the Park, is a good house, commanding a delightful view of the Seven Mountains. Mr. Ermekiol, proprietor.

Population 20,000, including the students and garrison. A university town in Rhenish-Prussia, of Roman origin, and formerly the residence of the Electors of Cologne. Its best edifices are the university, formerly the electoral palace, in which, besides lecture rooms, are a library of 150,000 volumes ; the academical and Rhenish museums; a fine collection of Roman antiquities, including an altar to victory; and the anla, or academical hall, decorated with fresco paintings. The minster, in which there is a bronze statue of the Empress Helena, mother of Constanting, by whom it was founded in 320, and built in the Byzantine style : the collegiate church ; that of the Jesuita; of St. Remi, in which is a fine painting by Spielberg; and the Schlosskirche. The house of Beethoven is pointed out in the Rheingasse, and his monument in the minater-platz. There are many beautiful walks, especially to the Hofgarten, with a fine terrace on the Rhine called "der alte Zoll," which gives a magnificent view of the river and Siebengebirge; of greater extent is that by the Poppelsdorf avenue, with its double rows of chestnut trees, to the castle of Poppelsdorf, and to the Kreutzberg, with its picturesque grounds. Roisdorf mineral water good.

Doctor Parow's Institution of Orthopaidy and Medical Cymnastics for the cure of spinal curvature and deformities of the chest and limbs, &c.; offers by young ladies board and lodging in the Establishmentitaelf, where in addition to suitable treatment, every arrangement is made for giving them a finished and accomplished education, especially in modern languages.

The view of the seven mountains on the opposite saids of the river is very fine. Excursions to Godesters, the Drachenfels, seven mountains, and the valley of the Ahr.

RAILWAY to Godesberg; steamboats up and cown the Rhine, Railway trains to Cologne, page 38.

Gadenberg.-Hotels:-Blinzer's & Belle

An agreeable summer residence. Fine old seattle on the hill, commanding beautiful view of the Rhims. Excursions to the volcanic hill of Englerberg; the seven mountains; by ferry boat to Ecologowinter; the Abbey of Heiserbach.

Konigswinten-1500.-Horas:-

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE.

The beauties of the Rhine begin at this town situated at the foot of the Drackenfels, the nearest of the seven mountains to the river. No traveller ought on any account to omit ascending this hill, even if he have to lose a day by doing so, as the view from its summit is one of the most lovely on the whole course of the Rhine. The walk from the pier to the top is not more than half an hour, and mules are always in waiting at the foot of the ascent for those who prefer to ride;—charge loggr. A small Hotel at the top of the Drachenfels affords very fair sleeping accommodation, and the view at sunrise is splendid.

The best way of reaching Königswinter from Cologno is, not by the steamers, which occupy hearly four hours, but by rail to the Mehlen forry opposite Königswinter, where boats are always waiting. By leaving Cologne by the first train, the traveller may easily reach Königswinter, ascend the Drachenfels, and proceed by steamer to Coblentz about noon. But should he be obliged to spend the day at Königswinter, he will not repent the delay, as he may find a delightful and picturesque walk, turn which way he will. Boat to Nonnenswerth and back, 20 sgr.

Excursions from Konigswinter to the Abbey of Kiesterbach or to the summit of the Lowenberg, the view from which extends into Westphalia.

Rolandseck .- HOTEL :-

This is a delightful residence for a few days. Visit the Castle and charming island of Nonnewerth, celebrated in the legend of Roland and Schiller's ballad of "Ritter Toggenburg."

Oberwinter, merely a village.

Rheinbreitbach, on theleft bank, is a large village, with castles and towers, at the entrance of a valley, in which are the copper mines of Birnberg and Marienberg, now no longer worked, the largest having been inundated by the river.

At Unkel the cliffs encroach on the bed of the stream, so as to produce a slight rapid on one side. Just above this, and on the opposite bank, is

Remagen .- Hotel:-

This is a most agreeable place to pass a few days at. The views on the Rhine are very fine. The hill to the right is Apollinariaberg, with its splendid Gothic church, the property of Count Fuzz-tenberg. The church was built from designs of Zwirner (the restorer of the Dom of Cologno), and contains fine freeco paintings.

From Romagen excursions are made to the beautiful valley of the Ahr—to Ahrweller and Ahrweller and picturesque beinger of which is well worth visiting. Airwestler.—2500. Inns.—Kreusbure.
This town is the centre of the wine trade of the valley, and is very pretifly situated. The church is a fine Gothic edifice. Further up the valley the Burgundy grape is cultivated on every accessible shelf of rock, and forming most singular but picturesque vineyards. Before reaching Altenahr the scenery becomes very fine—precipitous rocks crowned by the castle—a singular tunnel cut through the rock, leads to the village of

of the town. Very good. Trout.

This village is surrounded by an amphithcatre of slate rocks—parily wooded and parily covered with vines, and on the highest peaks are seen the ruins of the Castle of Altenahr, the finest object in the whole valley. No one should omit ascending to the ruins as the view from the height is mugnificent. From Altenahr, if time will admit, the visitor should proceed to the Abbey of Laach—whence he should return to the Rhine through the valley of Brohl.

A little below Erpel, on the left bank, is a basalte mountain, 700 feet high, called the Erpelor Ley. The vines planted on its slopes are rooted in baskets forced into the clefts of the rock.

Near Singig, (Hotel Stern) a small old town on the road between Bonn and Coblentz, about 11 mile from the Khine, well worth visiting.

Close to the confluence of the Ahr is the village of Unterkrippe, (Hotel Nassau Hoi) communicating by a flying bridge with

Ling .- HOTLL NASSAU.

A commercial town, at which the steam vessels put in. Charles the Bold took this town in 1470, in 1632 it was taken by the Swedes, and in 1688 it was garrisoned by the French. The castle, as well as the town walls of Linz, are built of basalf, and the streets are paved with the same material. The surrounding country produces copper, iron, lead, &c., which are exported from this town, and render it a thriving and commercial community.

Andernach.--3000. Hotel:--

HACKENBRUCH HOTEL

An ancient town, founded by the Romans, and, in the middle ages, a free city of the empire. Enclosed with lotty old walls, it contrasts strikingly with Neuwied, further on, which lies quite open Its Roman gate, and the rulus of the Pfulz or Episcopal palace, its ancient church and tower, with the town arms, at least 1000 years old, are well worthy of notice. Much Tarrass (or trass) made hereabent, quarried and burn; it is a mortar er cement which atnots both water and heat.

The Lancher lake may be visited either from this place or from Brohl. It is a singular sheet of deep bine water, of almost circular form, occupying what would seem the crater of an extinct volcano, 656 feet above the Rhine, about 1½ mile long, and 1½ broad, depth in the centre 21½ feet, surrounded by hills richly wooded to the water's edge. A jet of carbonic acid gas issues from a little opening on the R. E. side, and this, together with the scories ashes, pumice, &c., found on the banks, gives evidence of its volcanic origin. The descried abbey of Laach, with its five towers, forms a picturesque object in the view.

The great milistone quarries of Nieder Mendig, 2 miles S. E. of the abbey, are also well worthy of a visit. The distance from Andernach to the Lancher See is about 8 miles. Carriage there and back, 4th.—lbgr. to Cocciman.

Beyond this town the mountains again approach the river, forming a magnificent define, and having, at the water's edge on the left bank, the ruined castle of Friedrichstein, the building of which was begun in the 17th century, but nover finished. On the same side lies the village of Irritch, connected by an avenue of poplars with the town of

Neuwied .- HOTEL -

MORAVIAN HOTEL.

Population 7,000. Capital of the mediatized principality of Wied. Overlooking the river is the Prince's palace, which contains a collection of very interesting Roman antiquities, chiefly from the buried city of Victoria, near Niederbiber, a village 2 miles to the N. The museum of natural history is in the Pheasantry, (Frasucric Gebaude), and consists for the most part of collections made by Pitnec Maximilian of Neuwied, during his travels in Brazil and North America. A distinct quarter of the town is occupied by Moravian brothren, whese sciencias and workshops are worth visiting.

The chateau of Monrepos, with its park and gardens, 6 miles N.N.E., is the object of a very pleasant excursion. Neuwied has also a flying bridge over the Rhine.

CONVEYANCES .- For Railway, see page 89.

The castle of Allwicd, at 8 miles distance is a magnificent ruin and commands a splendid view. Carriage there and back 4 thalers.

Weissenthurm (White Tower), on the right bank, so called from the old watch-tower which stands at the extremity of the village; on an eminence to the left of which is the monument of General Hoche, who crosed the Rhine at this place. Here it is asserted that Julius Casar constructed the famous bridge described in his commentaries; but this is very improbable, as he makes no meantion of the island in mid-channel of which Hoche availed himself in his passage.

Further on to the left is Muhlhofen, a village at the mouth of the Sayn, from which pleasant excursions may be made through the beautifully wooded valley traversed by that stream. Royal

Iron-works here

Resselheim.—Near this are the ruins of Schünhornlust, once a palace of the Elector of Traves; famous also as the rosidence of the exited Bourbon princes, and head-quarters of the army of refugees during the rovolution.

Near the junction of the Moselle and Rhine stands the monument of General Marcean.

Neuendorf.—Here the smaller timber-rafts from the Upper Rhine and its branches, as also from the Moselic, are formed into the great rafts which go down to Holland.

Long before the steamer approaches Commandation for trees of Ehrenbreitstein is visible, while, as she reaches her moorings at that city, one of the most conspicuous objects is the stately palace of the King of Prussia, formerly belonging to the Electors of Treves, stretching along the bank of the river.

HOTEL DE TREVES -Terischer Hof, on the great square, a good and quiet comfortable house.

HOTEL DU GEANT—one of the best on the Rhine. Landlord Mr. Schutz.

Coblenz, the "Confluentes" of the Romans, is a strongly fortified town on the left bank of the Rhine, and right of the Moselle; capital of Rhenish Prussia, with a population of 26,000, including 4,000 military. It occupies a large triangle, formed by the influx of the Moselle into the Rhine, and has an old stone bridge over the Moselle: from this bridge there is a magnificent view. On the opposite bank. of the Rhine's the rocky fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, with the town at its foot, containing 2,800 inhabitants, and communicating with Coblenz by a bridge of boats, 485 paces in length. The view from the summit of the fortress extends as far as the mountains of Lorraine, and will amply repay the fatigue of ascending. The old castle, near the Moselle bridge, possesses historical interest, having been the sojourn of several emperors. The church of St. Castor, at the very confluence of the two rivers, and distinguished by its four towers, dates from 836; here the grandsons of Charlemagne met, todivide amongst them his mighty empire into Germany, France, and Italy. On the left of the chancel stands the beautiful tomb of Cuno of Falkenstein, archbishop of Treves, with a painting of the Crucifixion, attributed to the old German master, William of Cologne. Here, also, Edward III. of England was installed Vicar of the Empire, by Lewis of Bavaria. The celluis under the grammar school, formerly a Jesuits' convent, are worth visiting from their great extent, containing about 300 vats, or 400,000 bottles of Rhine and Moselle wines. From the vicinity of this town to the wine districts, it forms the great depot for the export of their produce, as also of the seltzer waters of Nassau, and the various volcanic productions of the neighhoughood.

The fortifications of Cobleuz are of vast extent; of these Ehrenbreitstein is the most remarkable, faving cost, it is said, 5,000,000 dollars. It has 400 cannons. The monument erected here by the French with the postscript by the Russian general, is very amusing.

In the environs of Coblenz are Mosselweiss, a protty village, much resorted to for recreation; Metternich, 8 miles distant, at the foot of the Krimmelberg. Here are the sources which supply Coblenz with water by pipes which pass over the bridge of the Moselle. This river is navigable to a great distance beyond Treves; during the whole of its course from that city to its mouth, 147 miles, (72 by land) it is closed in by mountains, which form a continued series of the most diversified landscapes, in consequence of the sinuosities of the stream. German steamers ply between Coblenz and Treves, from which place to Metz is navigated by a French company. Besides the beautiful valley o the Moselle itself, which contains some of the most picturesque river scenery in Germany, many the adjacent valleys are well worth a visit.

Coblenz being one of those points on the Rhin from whence so many interesting excursions may be made, it is well, if possible, to make it a halting place for some days. Among the places most worth visiting are the following:—the Pfaffendorier Hohe, a hill on the same side with Ehrenbreitstein, and commanding almost as fine a view; the hill of the Chartreuse; the castle of Stolzenfels, 3 miles up, in the left bank of the Rhine—vehicles there and back, 1 dollar; to the top of the Kuhkopf, tha highest hill near the town; Lahnstein, on the left bank; Sayn and the abbey of Rommersdorf; abbey and lake of Laach; castle of Elz; Neuwied and Marksburg; more distant. Ems and Nassau. The neighbouring forests abound in game.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SERVICE.—Morning service on Sundays, &c., at 1130—Evening service at 5 30. The Rev. S. Tucker, Licensed Chaplain.

View from Chartreuse, half a mile out of the town, very fine.

CONVEXANCES.— Eilwagen to Ems, Kreuznach, Troves, and Wiesbaden. Steamers several times daily to Biebrich, Mayence, and Manuheim; as also to lount, Cologne, Dusseldorf, Emmerich, and Rotterdam Steamers ascend the Mosello as far as Treves and Metz. Rail to Remagen, Bonn, and Cologne, see page 88.

Horchheim, on the left, is the last Prussian village. The island opposite is Oberwerth, on which was formerly a nunnery, now the country house of Count Pfaffenhofen.

Stolzenfels, a fine castle of the middle ages, on a projecting rock overlooking the Rhine and the village of Kapelian. This grand edifice belongs to the king of Prussia, by whom it was restored and fitted up for a summer residence; it was here he entertained Queen Victoria in a most splendid manner in 1845. It is the most beautifully situated of all the Rhine castles, commanding a prospect up the river, as far as the valley of the Drinkholde spring, with Rheuse, Oberlahnstein and Markeburg included. Opposite is the lovely valley of the Rhine; while down the stream the view embraces Coblenz, with its fortifications, and the mountains of Andernach in the distance.

Both banks of the Lahn, and the right bank of the Rhine, almost the whole way to Mayence, belong to Nassau.

There is a ferry from Stolzenfels to Lahnstein, and another over the mouth of the Lahn; a rallway thence to Ems, up the right bank of this river. On the summit of a hill at the mouth of the Lahn are the ruins of Lahneck castle.

Oberlahmstein, an old walled town, with a conspicuous rod building at the edge of the Rhine, once a castle of the electors of Mayence; near it is a small white chapel among trees, where, in 1400, the deposition of the emperor Wanceslaus, and the election of Rupert were pronounced by the electors.

election of Rupert were pronounced by the electors. Rhenne, Horst Zun Konserun, a very antique town, scarcely altered since the middle ages. Near it is the Königstuhl (king's seat), an open vaulted hall, with seven stone seats for the seven electors who used to meet in it to discuss affairs of state.

Branbach .- Hotel Zur Phillipsburg.

Another ancient little town, at the entrance of he valley that winds round the Marksburg, with a ine old castle. There are copper and silver mines a the neighbourhood; there is also a road to Ems rom this place.

Marksburg, a fortress of the middle ages, in serfect preservation, being the only one of the thine castles which has escaped destruction.

Boppart.-Hores:-

HOTEL DU RHIN AND POST.

An ancient walled town, population 4,000. This is s gloomy but interesting old place, of Roman origin, laying been one of the 50 castles of Drusus on the Rhine. In it are the remains of the palace of the Frankish kings, and the ruins of a fine chapel. Behind the town is the ancient nunnery of Marienperg. now an establishment for the water-cure. the walls of the Roman castrum, a quadrangle of strong masonry, still exists in the heart of the The situation of Boppart is remarkably cautiful. The khine here makes one of its most considerable curves, and at some distance further he mountains recede a little from the river, giving way to meadows and corn fields. The streets of Boppart are very narrow and dark, but possess many attractions for the architect and antiquary. many of the buildings presenting great peculiarities of architecture.

Salzig, an agreeable village, with large planations of cherry trees. Opposite, on the twin beaks of a lotty rock, are the ruins of Sterenberg and Liebenstein, called the two brothers, and the abject of a legend. At the foot of the steep mounain, in a narrow valley, is the village and ancient convent of Bornbofen.

In Ehrenthal are silver, lead, and copper works, whose annual produce is 100,000 florins.

Welmich, a little village with a fine old hurch, at the foot of the mountain on which stands he castle of Thurmberg, called "the Mouse," now ast falling into ruin; the walls are, however, still perfect. The castle called "the Cat" is above St. Goarhausen.

Marienberg—Formerly a convent and place of education; now an establishment for the cold water cure.

St. Goar. -1,500. - HOTEL - ZUR LILLIE.

The position of St. Goar is eminently beautiful. On the hill are the ruins of Rheinfels, formerly one of the most extensive fortresses; now a picture of desolation. Opposite is the pretty village of St. Goarhausen, and the ruins of "the Cat." Above this point a narrow defile confines the river, which is precipitated over arcocky channel; on the left is the enormous rock of Lurley, and a little higher are discovered the rocks called the Seven Sisters (Sieben Jangfrauen), the subject of a legend.

Below St. Goarwe meet with the most extensive rain on the Rhine, namely, the fortress of Rheinfels. This immense stronghold was bult in 1245 by a count of Kaizenelinbogen. It became afterwards, in the hands of the Landgrave of Hesse, a modern fortress, which lasfied the French in 1692, but was taken and blown up by them in 1794.

St. Goar is a cheorful little town, and very desirable as a sojourn for the purpose of making excursions in the vicinity, as it lies in the midst of some of the finest of the Rhine scenery. This town is also famous for its extensive salmon fishery. Neor it is a dangerous rapid called the Bank, and below this the whirlpool Gewirr. A very fine view is to be had from the heights above St. Goar, rising directly in face of the Lurielberg. On the opposite side of the river is

St. Goarhausen.—800.—Hotel Adles.

Still partly surrounded with its old walls. Here begins the Forstbach, or Swiss Valley, colebrated for its beauty, budge traversed by a clear stream, forming numerous cascades between precipitous masses of rock. At the entrance of this valley stands the castle of the Cat, a very picturesque object in the landscape. An excursion well worth taking is that to the rulned castle of Richenberg, at a distance of a mile and a half inland.

On the same side, but a little above St. Goarhansen, the black perpendicular preciples of the Lurieiberg rises abruptly from the water's edge, opposite to which on the road side, is a grotto, in which is stationed a man who, with a bugle or by firing a rifle, awakens the echo of the Lurley, which is said to repeat sounds fifteen times. Above this, in midchannel, and visible at low water, are the rocks called the Sevon Sisters, the subject of a legend.

Oberwesel.—Hotels:—Rheinisher Hof and Trierischer Hof.

The Vesalia of the Romans. A small town of 2500 inhabitants; very interesting to visit, and delightfully situated. The whole course of the river from Bonn, where it becomes narrower and more rapid, and onwards to Bingen, is through scenery of surpassing beauty, rocks crowned with castellated ruins, and hills cut in terraces for the cultivation of the vine, rising above the towns and villages on either bank. The church of Our Lady in Oberwesel is considered a model of the gothic style; in St. Martin's is a "Descent from the Cross," by Diepenbrock. The picturesque appearance of this town is much increased by its turreted walls and the lofty round tower called the Ox Tower, by the water side. The village of Engchölle is well worth a visit. as also the ruins of Schönberg Castle, known for the tradition of the Seven Sisters.

Caub .- HOTEL NASSAU HOP.

A small town on the left, above which on a steep rock, rise the ruins of the castle of Guten-fels. In the middle of the river, between Caub and Bacharach, is a well-preserved old castle, called the Pfalz, built by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria for a toll-house. In the lateral valleys are extensive slate-quarries.

Bacharach.-Horsl Post.

A busy town of 1800 inhabitants; formerly the entrepôt for the fine Rhenish wines, which were named on this account "the wines of Bacharach."

In the Rhine, when the water is low, a large atoms appears, called the Altar of Bacchus (Bacchiara)—hence the name.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Church of St. there, dating from the 12th century; the ruins of the eastle of Stahleck, with its truncated walls, on a high hill behind the town, from whence there is a flae view; and the town walls, with twelve towers of popullar construction.

Lorch .- HOTEL SCHWAN.

On the opposite bank; 1800 inhabitants. One of the oldest towns on the Ithine situated at the embouchure of the Wisperbach, and entrance of its picturesque valley, leading through Goroldstein and Langensetion to Schwalbach, a walk of five hours. On the right bank of the Wisper is a rocky emanen e called the Dovi's Ladder, with the ruins of Nollingen castle on its summit. Above the village of Rheindichach stand the round tower and broken walls of Furstenburg, devastated by the French in 1687. The claurch is a handsome relic of the 12th century; in front of it is a carved stone cross dated 1491.

Close by the water's edge is the village of Nieder-Heimbach, above which appear the remains of the eastle of Heimburg, and higher up the turreted ruin of Sonneck.

As we approach Bingen and Assmanshausen, those picturesque monuments of the old iron times become still more numerous.

One of them called the Rheinstein, which has been restored and fitted up in the antique style for a summer residence of Prince Frederick of Prussia, is well worth visiting. It stands upon a projecting elif, rising almost perpendicularly from the water side. Opporte to this is the village of #### Assmanshausen.

On the left, with a warm mineral spring. The fine red wine of that name is produced from the vines in the neighbourhood, which are cultivated on such steep heights as to require baskets and other contrivances to secure them in their places; some of the terraced heights are one thousand feet shows the river.

One of the finest views in the whole course of the siver may be obtained by ascending to the Rossel a little tower on the edge of the heights above Assmanshausen. From this village also may be made the ascent of the Nicderwald.

The great gorge of the Rhine, the commencement of which is about Boppart, terminates here. It is formed by a range of mountains crossing the river's course, nearly at right angies. The Bingenloch obstructed for a long time the navigation of the Rhine; but this passage was widened to 210 feet—ten times tas former breadth, by the Prussians, in 1830–39: the fragments, taken from the river bed by blasting, 'were formed into a monument on the road side to commencents the work. This channel is near the right bank, and overlooked by the ruins of the fottress of kinentels.

On the right, and adjacent to the influx of the Nahe, is an islet with a ruin called the Exacethurm (Mice Tower), the scene of a strange exaction, which Southey gives in his balled of Sistem Hatto.

Bingen .- - 7000 .- HOTEL :- VICTORIA.

In an angle of the beautiful valley of the Nahe the frontier town of the Rheno-Hessian territory, A considerable entrept for trade in corn and wines. The town is much frequented by strangers. The Rhine here makes a considerable curve, and the scenery around is in the highest degree attractive. The ruins of Klopp, on the Drususberg (once a Roman castle) afford a favourite promenade and a view from the tower of the celebrated Nahethal, and the environs as far as the Donnersberg.

An agrecable tour may be made to the Rochusberg and its chapel, from whence there is a prospect of extraordinary beauty; as also up the Nahe to Kreuznach and Oberstein. Opposite Bingen, on the right of the Nahe, stands the Rupertsberg, and, about a mile and a half distant, the Ellsenhölle, from the moss-house of which there is another magnificent view. An excursion to Rüdesheim, and to the heights of the Niederwald is also recommended. From Rudesheim, on the opposite bank of the Rhine, the railway is now open to Wiesbaden, Castel, and Frankfort, see page 90. From Bingen by railway to Kreuznach, see page 90.

HOTEL ROYAL, a newly built establishment, said to combine every modern improvement.

HOTEL DE HOLLANDE, near the Kursaal, one of the best in Germany, and table d'nôte at 1 and 5 o'clock; highly recommended. Proprietor, Mr. A. Roessler.

Baden-Baden is invested with peculiar attraction by the picturesque beauty of its situation, being romantically seated on the banks of the Oos, and embosomed among majestic hills—the children of the Black Forest; it is clienty built on the abope of a hill, owing to the nurrowness of the valley, which consists for the most part of charming prairies, whose light green forms a pleasant contrast to the dark fir-trees that cover the surrounding hills. This excellent site of the town is added to by the mild climate, inasmuch as the neighbouring mountains check the north and east winds, and the hot-wells concealed in the bosom of the earth impart warmth to the soil. These springs were known to, and appreciated by, the Romans, who colonised the spot, and named it Civitas Aureha At one period, Baden was considered the most fashionable watering-place in Germany, and is to-day by far the most beautiful of the baths of North Germany, not even excepting that of the Brunnen of Nassau. The numerous agreeable promenades, cutting through the woods, will farnish a traveller with means of quiet recreation and healthful walking, even in the flerce glow of a midsummer sunshine. The season is at 'ts height during the months of July, August, and September; but from May to October a succession of visiters continue to arrive and depart. The time for as-assembling to drink the waters, is between 6; and 74 a.m., when the band plays from a kind of pavilion. On the left bank of the Cosbach, we see the " Promouade" and "Conversationshaus"a magnificent building, adorned by a Carinthian portico, and surrounded by tastefully laid out gardens and pleasure-grounds. It consists of rooms and saloons, in which are given têtes, concerts, performances of all sorts, and dancing three times a week. There is also an excellent gratuitous Reading-room and Library, in the Conversation House, and another one belong-ing to Mr. Marx, to which visitors can subscribe. There is in the establishment a great restaurant and coffee-house called Restauration. The rougeat-moir tables are much frequented in the evening. The avenue leading to the Conversation House is miled with stalls of traders from Switzerland and the Tyrol, and even from Paris; and in the evening, after dinner, the entire place is filled with chairs and ' stables, occupied by visitors sipping coffee, ices, &c., mer smoking, while listening to the music played by the best bands in the country.

Above the town we see "das Neue Schloss," or new castle, so called to distinguish it from the old one, on the top of the hill. The halls, judgment seat, and horrible dungeons in this castle, ought to be visited. Their appearance will freeze and chill the very life's blood of the spectator who looks on them for the first time, and reads in their iron rings, racks, knives, and instruments of torture, the awful punishment inflicted on the victims of man's barbarism and society's cruelty. Baden is also memorable as being the seat of the Secret Tribunal (Vehmgericht), similar to that described by Scott in Anne of Geierstein. The parish church is worth notice, chiefly as the burial-place of and containing many monuments to the Margraves of Baden.

English church service in Spital Kirche twice every Sunday.

Delightful excursions can be made from here to das Alte Schloss, an hour's walk; to Ebersteinburg; the Jagdhaus, or hunting-lodge, near the Lichen-thal, &c.;—from the first two are delightful views.

MANUFACTURER OF SCULPTURE IN BUCK-HORN AND IVOUY-CARVED WOOD, &c., Chs. Stuffer and binder, Place Leopold, No. 365, and at the Promenade, No. 4.

Bamberg.-21,000-Stat.-Inns.-

BAMBERGER Hor, good; rather an antiquated old house.

Bamberg, on the Regnitz and the Ludwig canal. is a beautiful town. Junction of the Regnitz and the Maine effected here, thus joining the Baltic and the Black Sea. The chief objects of attraction are the cathedral, which is one of the finest in Germany; the Palace: the Pfarrkirche; the Rathaus, and the view from the ruined Castle of Altenberg, signated about a mile and a half from the town: this view is considered one of the finest in Franconia.

Conveyances .- Railway, see pages 132 and 133. For Diligences, page see 215.

Bremen. Stal. HOTEL:

HOTEL DE L'ECROPE, a first-class house, highly recommended.

Situated on the Weser, and containing in the city and suburbs upwards of 75,000 inhabitants. It is divided by the Weser into the old and new towns. The fortifications of the city having been destroyed, the ground on which they stood has been laid out as public gardens, in the English style, with running water, sheltered walks, &c. The principal buildings, besides its churches, are the City Hall, the Exchange, Museum, Theatre, and Hospital. Paintings at Mr. Albir's, and the Kunsthalic. Olbers and Heeron were born at Bremen. Bremen does an immense trace in tobacco, and has the largest eiger manufactories in the world; ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, and there is a large trade between this important port and America, as well as with almost all parts of the globe. Rail to Hanover, seep. 101; Diligences, page 218.

Bruckenau, a fashionable resort on account of its chalybeate waters. It is situated about 17 miles nearly north of Kissengen.

Brunswick .- Stat .- HOTEL :-

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE, an excellent house.

THE GERMAN HOTEL --First class for families and gentlemen, situated in the centre of the town.

Brunswick on the Ocker, 38,000 inhabitants, a town with clean streets, much picturesque architecture in the old buildings, and surrounded with walks and parks, beautifully laid out; the new palace is a neat edifice, built after the plan of Ottmer; the permission to inspect it costs two dollars!! and is not worth the money. The museum in the arsenal has the usual attractions, and is open every day excepting the last Sunday in the month. The cathedral, or the church of the Holy Blasius in the gothic-Norman style, was completed in the year 1194, by Heinrich der Löwe who lies buried here, as also his wife; the Duke of Brunswick, who was slain at the battle of Jena. The Duke, his son, who fell at Quatre Bras; and on the coffin of the Duke may still be seen the withered garland spread by his people on his bier; and the unfortunate wife of George IV., Caroline of Brunswick, also lie buried here. Near the church stands a large buried here. Near the church stands a large bronze lion, which Heinrich der Löwe (Henry the Lion) brought from Constantinople. In the promenades is the large and beautiful monument erected to the memory of the two Dukes of Brunswick, who fell at Jena and Quatre Bras. Before the gate Steinthor and Augustthor, is the monument of the valiant and unfortunate Schill. Who died in 1808. Very interesting is the lately restored Town Hall, Altstadtrathaus, and the fountain at the Altstadt Markit; also the Richmond Park before the Augustthor.

Conveyances.—Rallway trains to Schladen and Harsburg, and also to Wolfenbuttel, page 104.—To Hanover, Minden, pages 102, 102.—To Magdeburg, page 105.—To Magdeburg, Kothen, Halle, and Leipste, page 108.

Cannatadt, Slat. Horst.

Generated testinated on the fertile shores of the Recken constaining 4000 inhabitants, colebrated for the situation and the beauty of the situation besides its salabrity. The Kursaal is very elegant, and distinguished for its freeco paintings: three quarters of an hour from Stattgardt, a pleasant walk through the Royal Fark, or 10 minutes by Railway. Travellers would do well not to remain in the unhealthy town of Stuttgardt, but continue their journey 10 minutes longer to Cannstadt, from which place they can visit every thing worth seeing. It is recommended to tourists on account of its mild climate during winter. It has an Institution for the cure of all distortions of the human frame.

Waters recommended for stomach complaints. Forbidden to salute here by lifting the hat.

English Physician-Dr. Buckhart.

Cassel .- Stat .- 33,000-HOTEL :-

Is the capital of Lower Hesse, and seat of the Electorate. Divided into the Old Town, the Lower New Town, and the Upper New Town, and situated on the Fulda. Enjoys a fair manufacturing trade in linen, cloth, hats, and porcelain. His objects of attraction are rather few. In the Friedrich's Platz, one of the largest squares in Germany, is the Elector's Palace, a building devoid of any imposing effect, and far surpassed by very many of: the hotels inhabited by the bankers in Frankbork. Near it stands the Museum, one of the prefitest buildings in Cassel; and immediately to the rear are the Government Offices. A very fine view of the valley and windings of the Fulds, as also of the remote Mount Meisener, can be enjoyed from an open side of the square on the brow of the hill. In the middle of the square there is a statue of Frederick II., the founder and patron of the primalpal establishments and ectlections of art in Cassil.

Tur Museum is open dally; from 11 to 1: it contain a library of 90,000 volumes, a cabinet of curiosities will worth attention, the collection of natural philosophy, and the picture gallery, in which are some valuable paintings, and much trash.

Fischer, intelligent English bookseller.

The THEATER is also worth notice. It was built by King Jerome Buonsparte. The famous gardens of Wilhelmshöhe, the Versailles of Germany; in them is the Elector's summer palace, about three or four miles from Cassel. The conservatories and fountains behind it are the highest in Europe, except that at Chatsworth. Wednesday and Sunday are the best days for a visit. Waterworks play at half-past two.

The Cascade of the Karlsburg is worth a visit. At the top is a colossal statue, over which falls, at intervals, a stream of water. The statue is led up to by a flight of stone steps 900 feet long. The hill can be ascended by means of a carriage road. On a sort of landing, half-way up the stairs, the Giant Enceladus, rudely carved, is represented in a horizontal position, a mountain of rocks covering his bosom. An eight-sided figure, 1,312 feet over the Fulda, topped by a pyramid supporting the colossal figure of Hercules (81 feet high) manufactured of beaten copper, surmounts the Chateau d'Eau: within the hollow of the club eight persons can be accommodated, and enjoy a very fine view of the surrounding country from a small window constructed therein. The Aquatic Staircase and Temple of the Winds employed 2000 men for fourteen years.

Lowenburg Foy Castle, met with in the descent, is worth notice. Its contents are—armour, belonging to the Great Condé; a curious collection of drinking glasses; some portraits of the Tudors and Stuaris, and a library of romances. The chapel contains the remains of the Elector who built it.

Chemnitz. — Stat. -- Hotel :-- Romischer Kareer.

47 miles S. W. of Dresden; population 27,000. The most considerable manusacturing town in Saxony, producing hoslery which rivals that of England; the condition of the factory-people here is very superior to that in most other places, as they almost all possess freehold cottages, with gardens, which they cultivate themselves when the work at the looms happens to be slack; and they thus improve their means and recruit their health at the same time. Chemnitz is also famous for its meanufactures of machinery for spinning. Its ancient fortifications, having been levelled, afford agreeable promenades; outside the town is the former Schloss, once the residence of the Elector, but now an inn.

HOTEL DE RUSSIE, one of the best in Europe, conducted by Mr. Reid, well known to English travellers for his obliging civility and attention.

THE ROMAN EMPEROR, an hotel of European celebrity, much frequented by European travellers, reputed for its elegant accommodation, comfort, and attention. Messrs. Lohr and Alten, proprietors.

Frankfort is one of the noblest cities in Germany, connected with high recollections, and doing honour by its fame to the spirit of commerce. It has always been a striking object to the traveller, and it has been greatly improved and embellished. Its shops, streets, and public buildings, all exhibit the progress of industry, activity, and invention. Frankfort is one of the liveliest and pleasantest of continental residences. It is a free town, with 70,000 inhabitants, and seat of the German Diet. Promenades extensive and fine, suburbs fine; there is a good casino or club, also a good post-office. Amid a great variety of objects to interest the traveller in this place may be mentioned as worthy of inspection the Hotel de Ville (Roemer). It is a building of the 15th cen-tury, less remarkable for its architectural appearance than for its historical note. Here is the Electors' room, at present the Hall of the Senate, where the effectors or their deputies used to assemble; the Kaisersaal, with the portraits of all the Emperors, from Conrad L to Francis II. In it is also preserved the relic known as the Golden Bull. There are several paintings in the Hall which has been redecorated in the aucient style. On the end wall is the Judgement of Solomon, by Steinbe. The Kaisersaul is open to the public on Mondays and Wednesdays, from 10 am. to 1 pm. The Domkirche or Cathedral, is remarkable for its antiquity; also, as having been the place where, for many years, the Emperors of Germany were crowned. It is considered the last specimen of the sacient German architecture. The town library, with more than 60,000 volumes, is open every Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 to 12, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, from 2 to 4 o'clock, a gallery of paintings, with more than 900 original pictures, is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 11 to 12 o'clock; the stadel Museum of Paintings, open daily, (except Saturdays) from 10 to 1; the natural history museum, open every Wednesday, from 2 to 4 o'clock, on Fridays, from 11 to1; the Bethmann museum, with Danneker's Ariadne, open daily from 11 to 1 o'clock; the monuments of Goethe, and Goethenburg are in the Hop Market; the new cemetery, with several beautiful monuments; the Mainlust, with a beautiful distant prospect. Goethe and Luther were born here, the former in the house marked F. No. 74 in the Hirschgraben. On the front is his father's coat of arms, bearing the poetical devices of three lyres. In the Alte facing the theatre, stand a statue to his memory, executed by Schwanthalar, of Munich. The figure and pedestal are of bronze. A latin inscription and his bust mark the house in which Luther resided in the Domplatz. The inscription is as follows:- "In silentio et spe erit fortidudo vestra"-" Silence and hope shall be your strength." Farnkfort is also distinguished as being the birthplace of the Rothschild family. The Taunus Mountains can be reached by railway as far as Höchst and Soden, a mineral spa; thence by carriage to Königstein, a ruined fortress of great extent and interest. A fine view of Frankfort and the surrounding country may be obtained from the hilly spot called Hainerweg, on which also the ex-tensive cellars of Mesara. Feist Brothers and Sons, have been excavated deep in the rocks for their sparkling wines. They are well worth visiting. Apply at their office, 40, New Mainzer Street.

Ellwagen (office Zeil, next to the post-office and Hotel de Russie).

As ministers from Great Britain, America, and most of the European states reside in Frankfort, travellers proceeding to Italy or Austria should have their passports signed. Two large fairs are held here, in spring and autumn, when merchandise is brought from all parts of Europe.

Excellent cabs, moderate. Staghorn Cameos, fine and moderate. Good baths, 45, J. Main Kay.

Freiburg .- Stat. -14,000 .- Horels:-

HOTEL D'ALLEMAGNE. An excellent house, and the landlord speaks English.

ZAHRINGHER HOF; very good, nearest the cathedral and railway station; landlord, Mr. Sommer

The ancient capital of the Breisgau, situated on the Triesan, at the entrance into the Höllenthal. The minster is worth seeing, a large gothic church; it was begun under Conrad III., of Zahringen, 1122 to 1152; the beautiful tower is 380 feet high. The university, with its collection; the company's hall; the St. Ludwig's church. In the neigh-bourhood: the Schlossberg, Alt Breisch, the Glacis, the coffee-house on the top; the Carthusian monastry, Bad-Pfersich, Allec-graten, Renngarf, the small castle. There is a very fine view from a hill, a quarter of an hour's walk behind the cathedral.

DIVINE SERVICE is performed twice every Sunday by an English clergyman.

Good Restaurant at the Station.

This town is built on an eminence, at the foot of which flows the Sale. The Lutheran is the prevalent religion. The town contains a ducal residence, a great number of ancient buildings, the principal of which is the Castle. The Museum contains 150,000 volumes and many valuable manuscripts, one of the best cabinets of coins in Europe, a fine numismatic library, an Oriental museum, a museum of curiosities of nature and art, and a gallery of paintings, rich in the productions of the old German school. The semi-nary for teachers is the oldest in Germany. There is also a gymnasium, and considerable ma-nufactures and commerce. Pretty environs. Celebrated Almanach de Gotha published here.

HOTEL CROWN PRINCE .- Zum Kronpring, on the Jungfernsteig, good, quiet and comfortable.

THE ENGLISH HOTEL, Admiralty Strasse, good accommodation and English comfort at reasonable prices, the landlord particularly obliging.

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, an immense German house on the Alster basin.

Hamburg, a free imperial city of Germany, in Lower Saxony, on the north bank of the river Elbe, about 70 miles from its mouth, consisting of the old and new town, both nearly equal in size. The population of the city is 160,000; but it covers a much greater space of ground than most other cities, in consequence of its numerous gardens. The large sheet of water called Alster Basin, and the most, occupy a considerable space. After the great fire in 1842, which destroyed 61 streets and 1747 houses, was built the most magnificent part tion nouses, was built the most magnificent, part of this truly elegant city. The business politics of it is commercially grand. The grand proshbunds is on the well, before Damthor Care and March Mall—the last of which, News-treet, is the Bigingsstreet of Hamburg, and the shops as magnificant as any in London. The established religion is Lutherant; but all denominations are tolerated. Words of $1,000 Jews reside here. The tower of the Church of $1,000 Jews reside here. The tower of the Church of $1,000 Jews reside here. The tower of the Church of $1,000 Jews reside here. The top there is a magnificent view. The $1,000 Jews of the Resident of pure Gothic now building, in stone and white brick. Mr. Geo. Gilbert Scott A.R. A., architect. The opera-house is large, capable of accommodating 4000 persons. The sittings of the Senate are now held in the Orphan Asylum. The Exchange here is a splendid building; and at its height surpasses all others. To hear the incessant hum of some 4000 voices, and to look down upon them from the gallery above, one would imagine that it were a roaring sea he heard.

The woods at Friederichsruhe are much frequented for pic-nics.

The environs of Hamburg are very beautiful, particularly on the right shore of the Elbe, from Altona to Blankensee. Near to Altona lies the suburb Ottensen, where is to be seen the tomb of Klopstock, and the monument erected to the memory of 1138 Hamburghers, who were starved to death by Davoust in the winters of 1813 and 1814. Near to Flottbeck, on the Elbe, five miles from Hamburg, lies Booth's flower-garden-one of the most beautiful in Germany. The places most frequented are Elbhohe, with a beautiful prospect, and the Esplanade, situated in the town itself; and Eppendorf, Flottbeck, Eimsbuttel, Ham, and Horn, all about half a German mile from the town. more distant places of resort are Baner's Park, near Blankensee, the Ererlande and Helgeland, and the flower, fruit, and kitchen-gardens of Hamburg. Extensive and liberal "Krankenhaus," or (infirmary.) Tea Gardens, the best are those of Andreas Brunnen; and Ranivelles in Altona. Gates There is a fine levied from which a considerable revenue is derived, upon all persons entering the city after 9 p.m., it increases up till midnight.

CHURCH SERVICE.—The Episcopal Church, Rev. Mr. Viedeman. The English Reformed Church (Congregational) Rev. James Smith M.A. on the Johannisbolwerk, (the Pler).

Travellers from England about to visit this place, will find the port of Hull very convenient to embark from, the distance being 462 miles, 70 miles of which are up the Elbe.

VICTORIA HOTEL.—A short distance from the railway station, facing the Theatre and Promenade, is well conducted, quiet, comfortable, and reasonable,

'Hanover, on the Leine; residence of the King of Hanover; has 56,000 inhabitants. It is a fine specimen of an old German town, with its quaint architecture. The modern part of it near the railway station has very much increased in beauty. There is a splendid Theatre, and the performances are reputed as being equal to, if not the best, in Germany. The best streets are the George, Frederick, and Adolphstreets. The old royal palace, outwardly pretty, has its interior adorned in a moderately sumptuous manner; the Rittersaal in this palace contains & large collection of family portraits, amongst which, the most remarkable is that of Elizabeth, Quren of Bohamia. The old gothic Town-hall is perhaps the most remarkable building in the city; and the-Kaserne (Barracks) the Industrial School, the Royal Riding School, and the Harstall (Royal Stables). are all worthy of inspection. Leibnitz's house is in the Schmiedegrasse, and there is likewise a monument to his memory in Hanover. The Schloss kirche is the prettiest in the town ; it contains relies which were brought from Italy by Heinrich der Lilwe. Herschel, the astronomer, was born here; he was originally a musician in the military service. In the neighbourhood is the Lindenberg, with a beautiful prospect. The establishment containing the royal stud (admission to which is free) is well worth? a visit. Hanover may be reached from London, by way of Rotterdam, Dover, Ostend, and Cologna, in 37 hours.

Lubeck -Hotels:-Stadt Hamburg, the most comfortable.

Lubeck.-Stat .- The visitor to Hamburg should by no means miss spending a day at Lubeck, it is one of the oldest and most interesting towns in Northern Europe. It is of considerable commercial importance, having Steamers weekly to St. Petersburg It bears unmistakeable marks of its former grandeur in the handsome citizens houses, the fine old Rathhaus, and the noble specimens of Gothic brick architecture in its Cathedral and Marine-Kirche. One of the three Hanse towns 27,000 inhabitants, is situated on a ridge between the rivers Trave and Wackenitz, by whose waters it is completely surrounded. The enormous size of its ramparts bears witness to its former importance; they are planted with trees, and The quaint serve as drives and promenades. architecture of its buildings also tell of the magnificence of its olden days; among these the Cathedral is remarkable for its wood-carvings and paintings, some of which are highly prized as specimens of ancient art. The Marienkirche is also well worth seeing. Sir Godfrey Kneller and the brothers Vari Ostade were born in Lubeck, where their houses are still shown. In the Rathhaus is the famous and beautiful Hall of the Hansa. in which the deputies from 85 cities used to meet and hold council together on the affairs of the Confederation. The Holstein-gate is a peculiar specimen of old fortification; the Burg-gate is also a very singular building.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION .- Gates. - The Helstein gate is a fine specimen of Norman brick architecture with its heavy towers. The Burg-gute, built at a later period, is a beautiful example of med eval. Cathedral.-Notice the ornamental work of the gateway, the wood work of the altar screen. the curious clock, and above all, Hans Hemlings fine triptich of the crucifixion, &c The Marine-Kirche is a very interesting specimen of pointed Gothic. Notice Overbeck s paintings; the Dance of Death;" the wood-carving in two of the chapels, and the clock. Rathhaus .- The exterior very interesting as showing what may be done in brick; the bronze work on the outer door, and the reats very quaint; the wood-carving on the council-chamber door, (inside) very fine. The visitor, if only staving a few hou s in Lubeck, will find the Keller under the Rathhaus a place that Caltermole would love to paint, he can obtain a good dinner, and he will and a great variety of good wine to choose from

Munich (Munchen, German) on the Isar, with its suburbs, has more than 115,000 inhabitants and is one of the most beautiful towns in Germany. The most important churches are, the Frauen-kirche, or eathedral, built of bricks, in 1488; the Jesuit church. a beautiful structure in the Italian style, with the tomb of Prince Eugene Beauharnols, by Thorwaldson -on each Sunday is to be heard classical music; the St. Peter's Church, the oldest in Munich . the Theatiner kirche, in the cumbersome Italian style, with the vault of the royal family; the Ludwig's kirche, completed 1842; the All Saints' chapel, in the royal palace; the Mariabilf kirche, in the suburb, in pure gothic style, with nineteen beautially painted glass windows; the Basilica of Holy Bonnace, in the Carlstrasse, without exception the most beautiful church in Germany, in the Byzantine style,-the frescoes which adorn the interior undoubtedly surpass in beauty and richness all other works of living artists. The Royal Palace consists of two parts, the old and new, a beautiful edifice, after the model of the Pitti-palace in Florence It is tasteful and beautiful, open on certain days to the public, by tickets obtained previously, in the morning, at the palace. It is rich in fresco paintings. The glyptotheck, a sculpture gallery, is a very noble and classical building; admission gratis, on most days of the week, from 10 to 2, and from 2 to 4; but the particular days of admission to this and the other galleries in Munich are frequently varied, and the traveller should refer to the small daily German newspaper, called the "Taglicher Anzeiger," for all particulars relating to public exhibitions and amusements at Munich. When the king is not in town the gallery is only open on the Wednesday and Saturday. This museum is one of the richest and most beautiful of the kind in Germany. The two galleries of paintings called the Pinacothek, one containing old paintings, the other devoted to modern works, are some of the finest collections in Europe. Adamusion to these is tree, and generally open during the week, excepting Saturdays and Sundays, or for hour on Sunday s; but as changes are frequently made in the days and times, refer to the daily paper before alluded to, the "Taglicher Anzeiger." The collection of painted glass, formerly belonging to Mesars. Boiserie and Bertran, is now in the Pinacothek. The Erzgiesserei or Bronze Foundry, and the Colossal Statue of Bavaria, one half mile from the Kosel Thor, are worth seeing. The statue of Bavaria, with the accompanying high Liton, is of copper, and upwards of 60 feet, standing on a pecestal of marble 40 feet high. There is a spiral staircase leading to the top: the head will hold eight persons, and there are holes to enable them to view the surrounding country. It is erected on a hill, with a very elegant building and colonade behind, called the Hall of the Heroes, admission, 12 kr. each. An engraving may be obtained on the spot from the Custodian for 24 kg.

The Jesuits' college, with the cabinet of coins and the natural history museum; the royal library, a superb edifice, in the Ludwigstrasse, with room enough to hold two millions of volumest and in richness the second in the word; the reading-room is open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 8 to 1 o'clock. The university, a new building, in the Ludwigstrasse, has also a good library, consisting of 500,000 volumes, the largest after Paris; the Isarthor, newly renovated by King Ludwig, and adorned with beautiful frescon. The Odeon, a beautiful building allotted to masical solress. In the story underneath is the Hereary Verein, in which the stranger finds a rich collection of newspapers, and the charge of admission for a whole month is only I florin.

English Church Service, twice every Sunday, at the English Ambassadors residence.

HIRED SERVANTS (valet de place) are, to the stranger visiting Munich, indispensable; the charge for a day's hire is from 3 to 4 zwanzigern.—Flacres stand in all public places, and have fixed rates; a quarter of an hour or a single drive costs is k reuzers, half an hour 36 kreutzers, a full hour i florin, for one person; for two persons the fare is 4 more. A printed tariff, easily understood, is affixed in all the public carriages. Passes are required from strangers, but it is not necessary to appear personally at the pass-office, as they can be procured through the medium of the valet de place.

OMNIBUSES are stationed at the following places;
—In the Schrannen-platz, passing through the Sendinger, Sonnen, and Bayorstrasse; in the Hof-garten, passing through Ludwig's, Theresien, Forsten, Brimmenstrasse, the Carolinen-platz, the Otto-strasse, &c.: at the Isarthor; and Max Joseph's-platz. The Omnibuses call at the various appointed inne lying in their route. Drivers are responsible for the loss of luggage or for damage done to it. # PRUSSIA.

PRUSSIA-- formerly a duchy, but now an extensive kingdom of second rank--was formed on the ancient electoral possessions, as a nucleus, by means of successive territorial acquisitions, particulariv in Poland, Westphalis, and the Rhine. It had for its original inhabitants the Slavi, or Sarmatiss. an the E. and N.E.,—the Vandals on the shores of the Baltic, to the N. of Pomerania—and the Snevi in the remainder of the kingdom. Prussia has been engaged, during a succession of ages, in very many wars—the particulars of which we do not require to notice here, as they are known to every student of history. Her part in the campaigns of the earlier portion of this century is well known, particularly in the campaigns of 1814 and 1815. At the Congress of Vienna, Prussia had secured to her the restitution of the provinces formerly wrested from her, excepting part of Poland, united to the Duchy of Warsaw; and for this small sacrifice she was amply indemnified by the concession of such territories in Saxony and the Lower Rhine, as were deemed consistent with the stability and security of the bulance of power in Europe. In this year 1.100, Prussia, partly by exchange and partly by putchase, obtained from Demmark that part of Westorn which is commonly called Swedish Pomerania, together with the island of Rugen. And thus, after experiencing violent shocks and vicasitudes, by which the kingdom had been broken into pieces, and little more than the name of the monarchy saved from the wreck, we behold Prussia, after a series of unparalleled changes in another direction, again taking her station among the first sovereign states of Europe, as firm and stable as in the days of Frederick the Great—and with a territory and population far exceeding any thing he could boast of.

The Kingdom of Prussia is situated in the northern part of Germany. It is bounded on the N. by the Baltic Sea, and a small portion of the Duchy of Mecklenburg; on the E. by Russia and Poland; on the S.E. by Austria; on the S. by Saxony and the Saxon Duchies; on the S.W. by Bavaria and part of france; and on the W. by France and the Netherlands. In describing these boundaries, we must observe that some parts of the kingdom are small detached portions, entirely invalated by the dominions of other powers—such as Saxe in Saxony, and Rahnis in Saxe-Weimar. There is no communication between the eastern and western provinces of Prussia, without passing through the atates of other princes. Hanover, on the N., is interspersed between its eastern and western provinces; and the territories of the sovereigns of Brunswick, Waldeck, Hesse-Cassel, Hesse-Darmstadt, and Saxe-Gotha, intercept a direct communication between its southern parts. The Prussian monarchy is divided into eight provinces, as follows:—Prussia, Posen, Brandenhurg, Pomerania, Silesia, Saxony, Westphalla, and the khine province; and these are divided into 25 regencies, which are further divided into 335 circles. The pop. is 14,928,501; and the area in English square miles is 107,627. The surface of the Prussian States is generally flat, except a part of the Hartz Mountains, in the province of Saxony.

The volcanic districts in it and the Lower Rhine, are the Riesengogebirge, on the S.W. confines of Silesia, and some other mountains in Westphalia. The quality of the soil is very various, and the country is very well watered. The climate of Prussia is not less varied than its soil. Along the Baltic it is worst; and in Ducal Prussia especially, the winter is long. It is also severe in the south parts of Silesia, contiguous to the Carpathian Mountains.

Commerce.—The exports from Prussia consist principally of corn, wool, timber Westphalian hams, zinc, flax, bristles, salted provisions, and other articles of raw produce; with linen and woollen ciwin, silk wares, iron and hardware, jewellery, watches, and wooden clocks; Prussian blue, spirits, beer, we. The imports consist chiefly of sugar, coffee, and other coloured products; raw cotton, and cotton twist and stuffs, indigo and other dye-stuffs, &c.

The Government of Prussia is monarchical, the King being assisted by a Council of State, each Department having nine Ministers. The State Religion is called Evangelical; being a fusion of Luthers. anism and Calvinism.

Education.—In Prussia, the State imposes on all parents the strict obligation of sending their children to school, unless they can prove that they are giving them a competent education at home. Neglect of this duty exposes the parents or guardians to imprisonment or fine.

Language...German is spoten by all classes, with the exception of some Polish peasants in the traduce of Power.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.-Ibe Town Hall, an edifice no way remarkable, has undergone a thorough restoration, and embellished with a number of fresco paintings from scenes in the history of Charlemagne. The Cathedial, begun under Charlemagne in 796, is one of the most important in Germany, and here repose the remains of this great Emperor. The choir of the Cathedral is now being restored. There are also an almost innumerable number of relics of various authenticity and value; and we are told these are all exhibited once in seven years, and that pilgrims flock to see them from all parts of Europe. The Eliza Fountain, and charming gardens. The Kurbaus or assembly rooms for strangers; subscription for the season, for one person, 4 thalers; for two persons, if of the same family, 6 thalers: for each person above, 2 thalers. The new government building, in the court of which is depoatted the ponderous Aerolite, said to weigh seven thousand pounds. The monument erected in me-thory of the Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1818, The Belvedere in the Louisberg, and the hill itself. The new hospital now building outside the town, stween the Sendkam and Cologne gates.

The suburbs and environs of Aix-is-Chapelle are sin pheasant and interesting. A charming view the schole city and surrounding country is obtained from the hill of Louisberg, a favourite resort of the good citizens on Sundays and holidays. The valley of Burtscheid or Borcette is also worth visiting. It catends from east to west, and is celebrated for the numerous warm springs and brooks that run through it.

A short distance from the town is situated Frankenberg, an old castle, said to have been a huntinglodge of Charlemagne; a moat surrounds it, into which the legend says Frastrada threw her ring.

Aix-la-Chapelle i- celebrated for its warm nineral springs, containing large quantities of sulphur, efficacious in chronic cutaneous diseases, rhumatism, gout, &c.; but they are sometimes injurious if taken improperly. We refer these who wish to obtain information on the medical properties of these waters to the work of Dr. Wetzlar, physician of Aix, who has communicated the result of 20 years' practice and experience. The city of Vienna, (the Emperor's city, as it is called in Germany,) lies on the right bank of the Danube (Donau). The canal of the Danube divides the city from the suburb Leopoldstadt. The little river Wien, from which the city receives its name, separates the city from the suburbs Landstrasse, Wieden, &c. It contains 9286 houses, and without the garrison a population of about 440,000. principal trade consists in gold, silver, jewellery, and silk manufactures. The best points from which to see the town and its suburbs are, the steeple of St. Stephen's, the Spinnerinn am Kreutz (female spiuner at the cross,) the terrace in front of the Upper Belvedere the Turk's Bulwark, the Gloriette at Schönbrunn, the top of Leopold and Kahlen hills, the Kransenwaldchen, the Himmel and Gallizienberg.

A COMMISSIONER, OF GUIDE, through the city, and to all the principal objects of attraction, costs 1 florin 40 kreutzers to 2 florins a day. There are but few tables d'hôte at Vlenna, which is a very great disadvantage—as, by ordering from the Carte, the chances are that you call for unseasonable dishes, and pay much more than you wish. It is best to dine in Vienna, at the fixed price of the hotel, which is generally four or five shillings. Bachelors will find It best to dine in the re-taurant attached to the hotel frequented by the citizens, where the same excellent food is given as up stairs, at one-third lower. The wines called the Hungarian Burgundy, "Ofner," and "Adelsberger," are excellent, and are to be procured throughout Austria, at reasonable rices. Red Vœsiau, an excellent Austrian wine. When about to leave the Austrian dominions, calculate how much money you will require up to the last moment, and change your paper florins into silver or gold.

platz bankers only give paper.

Money, if sent, must be scaled up at the office in the presence of a proper officer, who delivers a receipt. The former post-office in the Wollzeil, is now only a filial office. There are receiving boxes for letters placed in different parts of the town and suburbs.

Coffee Houses .- The first coffee house in Europe is said to have been established at Vienna, 1684, by a certain Koltschitzky, a Polish spy in the quarters of the Turks, who received permission to open it, as a recompense for his services. The cottee houses in the city are not very showy; most of them have a billiard table, smoking room, and an ordinary supply of newspapers. A cup of coffee without milk, (called black coffee,) costs 8 kr. C.M., a cup with milk is called a mixture, (molange). I'he most goted coffee house is Danm's, No. 278, in the Kohlmarkt; Neuner's, in the Plankencasse, into which ladies may be taken. when hired by the week, are allowed to go without They are, in general, extremely their number. elegant and clean. Cabs in the city cost 12 km. the quarter hour. In the coffee houses of Leonold's. town, (Leopoldstadt) near to Ferdinard's-bridge, (Ferdinard's-brucke,) are to be found in general many Turks and Greeks in their national costume. Club-houses are very scarce, but there is one Insti-tution of this kind, the Judicial-political-reading in siltute, in which are to be found almost all period, icals and literary news, inland and foreign. Access to it can easily be obtained. Access to the ristocratic and mercantile club-houses can be most easily secured by means of the Banker to whom recommended.

Is the Enght's Carle (Rit-Markican) to be observed, a correct imitation of a stronghold of the middle ages. Midling . the read to it leads by the Spinner at the Cross (Spinnerin am Kreutz), a gothic cross, erected by Crispinus Pellitzer, 1547, adorned with the statue of Crispinus and Crispianus. In Mödling is to be seen the old Knight-Templars'church of Holy Ottmar, the castle and the park of Prince Liechtenstein; the ruins of the old family castle of the Babenberger; numerous pleasant walks and eating-houses.—The Kahlenberg (Mons Cifius), above 1000 feet high. The way to it is over Döbling, where there is a good picture-gallery belonging to M. Arthaber and the splendid coffee-house near the observatory; the latter affording the best view around the neighbourhood of the city.—The Leopoldsberg, with an old castle. From this point may be taken pleasant walks on the Cobenzelberg, to the Krapfenwaldchen, to Severing, to the Himmel, to Grinzing and Heiligenstadt; as likewise to Nussdorf and Klosterneuberg, adjoining. The ruins of Greifenstein lie one mile from the convent of Klosterneuberg; Richard, the Lionhearted, lay in prison there; another road on the Vienna Wald leads through Dornbach, where Prince Schwarzenberg possesses a villa, with park. From this part you can reach the Upper Wald, and from thence you descend, and walk-ing in the shade of a fine wood of beech-trees you reach Hainbach, Steinbach, and lastly, Mauerbach, where there is capital refreshment to be had; from thence, through a lovely valley, you get to the Passauer Hutten, and in half an hour to the Tulbinger Kogel, a hill, from the top of which you enjoy the most beautiful prospect. A pleasant trip is one to Pötzleindorf (village of Pötzlein), vulgarly called Potzelsdorf. To this place you can take an omnibus.

REMARES.—Omnibuses may also be made use of, in order to reach a distant suburb, such as the fletzinger, to go to Neubau or to Neinottenfeld; the coachman receives a small allowance—from 3 to 6 kr. c.m. On the Sunday and on holidays the rices of the Omnibuses are raised 1 kroutzer.

SWITZERLAND AND SAVOY.

(With Map in Special Edition.)

Evvitzerland, or the Alpine country, has been divided by naturalists into seven certons, each specially rising above the other-the first, in lowest of which terminates at the height of 1,760 feet above the level of the sea; the second, or region of oaks, reaches the height of 2,800 feet, and is succeeded by the region of the birch, which rises to 4,000 feet. The higher Alpine regions commence Along the chain of the Alps, from Mont Blanc to the frontiers of Tyrol, there are reckoned to be shows 4,000 glacers, many of which are 18 or 21 miles long, 12 to 24 miles wide, and nom 100 to 600 feet thick. Altogether, the glaciers of Switzerland are presumed to form a sea of ice more than 1,000 miles in extent; and from its inexamistible sources flow the waters of some of the principal rivers in Europe. Switzerland is also intersected by mountains, the greater part of which are ramifi-cations of the Alps, whilst the remainder belong to the chain of Jura. From Mount St. Gotbuid- the contrat Alps extend two ranges, which form a mass of the highest mountains in Europe. The snows accumulated on the top of the Alps are continually failing down their precipitous sides into the lower regions, where they often produce serious minry. The chain of Jura presents to the eye of the traveller a deep contrast to that of the Alpa. It stretches in several parallel ridges for about 240 index along the western and north-western frontiers of Switzerland, from the hend of the Rhone, below Geneva, to the banks of the Rhine, castward of Basel, and is clothed from top to bottom with hazurount jone forests.

Switzerland is also pre-eminently a land of takes, the principal of which are the Lake of Constance, the Lake of Geneva, or Lake Leman, the Lake of Zurich, the Lake of Lucerne, and the Lake of Neuchatel, with some minor ones.

DIRECTIONS for TRAVELLERS, and REQUISITES for a JOURNEY to SWITZERLAND.

Average Cost of Living .-- In Switzerland the traveller can manage to live for from 8 francs to 10 francs per day, excluding all charges tor convey ances, horses, guides, &c. A pedistorn fourist can travel for about 7 france, provided he knows German and French. If possible tongets should travel in parties (two or four are the best numbers, as they exactly lift either a one horse or two horse voiture), and make all their arrangements over night. Cold water, &c., should not be taken in large quantities by tourists when heated, and particularly when much tangued. Travellers, in crossing the fact or bridle paths of the passage of the Alps, should be sure to engage a guide. No triveller should attempt to cross a glacier without a guide, and in all cases he should be allowed to take the lead. The usual price for a borse or mule per day, is from 6 frs. to 9 frs., and 1 fr. is frequently given to the man in attendance. The pay to a guide is from 5 to 7 frs. per day, with something to pay his expenses home if discharged at a distance from his place of abode.

Tourists in Switzerland should particularly avoid remaining during night near the embouching of a 'fiver, where it discharges itself into a lake. In case necessity compels the traveller to stop at such a place, he should engage the topmost bedroom in the highest house in the village, and let the windows by the traveller should talle paper, pens, ink, and soap, as they are arricles difficult securaty closed. to be met with. The alpenstock is indispensable upon a mountain journey.

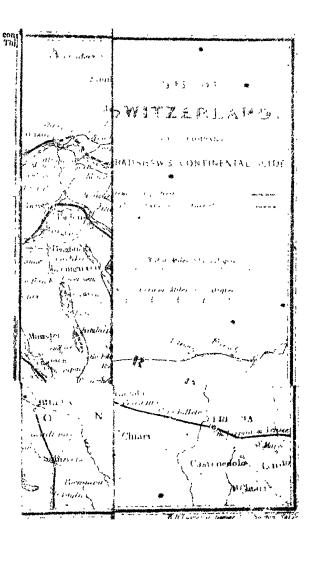

Take as little lugggage as possible, but do not omit a good water-proof coat, and a pair of strong shoes to walk in.

It occupes a parmesque site on the Hessir. about two tailes from its confluence with the Linne, and on the great thad to Italy by the spluggen and Bernardico, and contains a reputation of 5,000 inhabitants. The public places worth visiting are the Culicdral, Luit in 780- in it are some very fine nonuments; the Episcopal Palace, containing a very large number of paintings; the Catholic School; the Town-hall, containing the public library; and the Lyceum. The Roman Catholic Church, out do the city gates, is remarkable from its extreme antiquity, part of it duting from the seventh century. The Romansch, a dialect of the Latin, is still spoken in this vicinity, and a Remarket newspaper is published here. The environs of Corro are worthy the tourist's attention, and command fine views of the Galanda. as well as of the mountains on the valley of the Rhine, with the glaciers of the Bodus. The Cascade, the baths of Luth, the fountain of Aroschka, and the valley of the Albaia, form delightful excursions from Coire, and will well repay a visit.

Constance is an important town of the Grand Duchy of Baden. It contains a population of 8,000 souls, and should be Swiss, from its natural position. It is very pleasantly situated at the point where the Enline issues from the Lake of Containce to enter the lower take, or Lake of Zell. Containce is in a very neglected state, and contains a number of deserred convents; its mills are of a singular rope struction; its edifices and institutions are worthy. the traveller's notice, particularly the cathedral-Gothic building -the summet of which commands very fine view; the carving of the doors is much admired. In the council-hall, (Conciliums Saul) by the Steam Pier was pronounced the sontenes? against John Huss, who, as well as Jorome of Prague, was hard alive by a decree of the famous council of Constance. The serge munile worn by, Huss as he went to the pile, is still seen. Church of St. Munico, the dominican convent, where Huss was imprisoned, wherein is seen the eptaph of Chrystolera, the fermer college of the Jesuits, the episcopal palace, the arsenal, and the chancery house, in which are some rare and value? able manuscripts. In the earthers are several interesting places, participarty the spot where Hus softered, in the suburbs of Brahl.

The northern bonds of the lake are flat; but in south on sale presents a series of picturesque views haven; the mountains of Appendel and St. Callingeries with those of the Tyrol, in the back ground. CONDEARCES. for Steamers, see p. 187; but Dillioners, see p. 22.

ZABRINGHER HOF-good. HOTEL DES MARCHA-cheaper.

HOTEL LEMORICIER, good second class house. The Canton of Freiburg is attuated in the warm portion of Switzerland, between Berne Vand, is traversed from one and to the wheel the river Sasrine. Freiburg, the capital, is partly built upon the bank of the Saarine, and partly upon the declivity of a rock. The principal buildings are the Cathedral, or Eglise de St. Nicholes, containing the richest toned organ in the world; It also possesses the finest bells in Switzerland, and has a magnificent steeple. Over the principal representing the Day of Judgment; the Hotel de Zahringen, the Collége des Jésuites, (now the Cande Bienfalsance, and the suspension bridge thrown meross the Saarine, remarkable for its great length and great height above the river; it stretches across a gorge 160 feet deep, and has a span of 902 feet. There is a second suspension bridge, lefty and light as a spider's web, but able to carry waggons. Half the town lies 600 or 700 feet lower than the other. Best point of view is from Zahringer hof. Freiburg also possesses a great many religious and educational establishments. Its charitable institutions are also worthy of inspection. The Place des Tilleuls, or Limes, so called from a lime or linden planted here in 1476, the day on which Charles the Bold was defeated at Morat. The valley of Gotheron, a suburb of the city, contains an aqueduct 1,000 feet long. The village of Guggisborg and the baths of Gurnige may be visited from Freiburg, as may also the Hermitage de la Madelcine. It is in the immediate vicinity of the town, on the banks of the Saarinebeing a very curious excavation 400 ft. in height, and consists of a church, surmounted by a tower 80 feet high; it also has a kitchen and a cellar, with porches, chambers, and staircases. The founder and builder of this grotto, John Dapre of Grayéres, was drowned in 1708, whilst assisting some strangers across the river. The Abbaye de la Hauterim, founded and richly endowed by William de Clare in 1137; the Chartreuse de la Valsanite and Morat—the scene of the famous battle-are worth a visit, and will well repay the traveller a short analysis of its architectural beauties and chaste structural design.

It has far its capital Geneva—a town i Maison Blaim Frères. tern corner of Switzerland, almost entirely separated from the other contons by the territories of Sevoy situated on the slopes of two hills, divided by the Rhone, where it issues from the lake, forming in its course two islands, on one of which stands part of the town; and the other contains a fine premenade planted with trees and ornamented with a statue of Jean Jacques Rousseau. The two banks of the river and the island are now connected by a suspension bridge; and a handsome quay, studded with fine buildings, lines the river. The city has lately laid out a Jardin Anglais close to the Lake, with beautiful walks and fountains; immediately in front of the Hotel de la Metropole. The streets are in general wide and commodious. The principal buildings are the Church of St. Peter, the Townhall, the Hospital, the Museum of Fine Arts, the Museum of Natural History, and the Penitentiary. The Academy, founded by Calvin—the Library or Reading Room, containing 30,000 volumes, a handsome post office, and the several scientific institutions are also worth visiting.

The environs of Geneva are delightful, particularly Chenes, Cologny, Carouge, Versoix, Ferney, the celebrated residence of Voltaire, and to the "meeting of the waters," the Rhone deep blue, and the Arve white from the glaciers -one of the prettlest little spots in the neighbourhood-one mile from the town. About 45 miles south-east of Geneva is Mont Blanc, on the south side of the valley of the Arve. Both Geneva and its immediate vicinity are celebrated as being the retreats of very many illustrious characters, such as Voltaire, Cal-vin, Cassaubon, Rousseau, Necker, Beranger, the Baroness de Stael, Byron, Marie Louise, Josephine, &c.

Lausanne. -- Stat. -- 16,000 -- HOTEL.

HOTEL GIBBON. -A first-rate house in every respect, highly recommended. Proprietor, Mr. Ritter.

The capital of the canton of Vand, beautifully situated at a short distance from the northern shore of the Lake of Geneva, occupies three hills, and the intervening valleys. The entrance of the city from the Genevese side is through the Rue de Grand Chêne; and this sircet leads to the Place de St. Francois-the chief seat of resort in Lausanne. The streets are ill-pived, up and down and crooked; there is a good market place and coin market, and handsome stone bridge over a valley conpecting two of the tidges or hills. At the opposite side of the Place de St. François, and in a direct line with the Rue de Grand Chêne, is the Rus de Bourgs, in which street are situated most of the principal hotels. The Cathedral, formerly l'Eglise de Notre Dame, founded about the year 1000, and co secrated in 1275 by Pope Gregory X., took very mixed structure, and from its terrace a very fine view may be had. It contains a white marble monument, erected to the memory of Henrietta, first wife of Lord Stratford de Redeliffe, late Sir Stratford Canning. The Museum is worth a visit. Two miles from Lausanne is the Cemetery of Pierre de Plain, in which the celebrated tragedian, John Komble, is buried.

warm baths of Leuk are situated at the foot of the Gemmi, nine miles north of the village, and are frequented chiefly by the natives of Switzerland, and by them held in great repute, and will astonish the British visitor; the Echelles or ladders up the face of a precipiece, are also very remarkable. The pass of the Gemmi is in many respects the most wonderful in Switzerland, the road winding down a precipitous rock, and often projecting over the path immediately below. The height of the pass is 7,000 feet, and is practicable for mules.

A new splendid Carriage Road has been lately constructed from Leuk to the baths, and wonderfully romantic. Horses may trot the whole distance.

Lucerne. - Stat. - HOTELS: -

The capital of a canton of the same name, situated at the western extremity of the lake o the forest cantons on the Reuss, which divides it into two parts at the foot of Mount Pilate. The situation of the town is highly picturesque, and it is well built. Its most remarkable objects are the three Bridges over the Rouss, two of them decorated with historic and legendary paintings, and the wounded colossal lion, (from a model by Thorwaldsen,) in memoryof the Swiss guards, at Paris, in 1792. It has a Cathedral, several Churches and Convents; that of the Jesuits has been converted into a The weekly corn market lyceum or college. is one of the largest in Switzerland. It has no particular manufactures, but a considerable trade is carried on between this place and Italy and Germany, over Mount St. Gothard and the Lucerne Lake. Population about 10,000. It is 30 miles S.W. of Zurich, and 42 E. of Berne. It is the best starting place for a visit to the Right, distant about 10 miles, by the steamboat to Weggis.

The lake of Lucerne is perhaps the grandest in mountain scenery in all Switzerland. To the Bernesc-Oberland the steamer should be taken to Stanstad, thence through the vale of Surnen to Lungern, whence mule road over the Brunig to Meyringen. Or steamer to Flucien, whence diligence over the Devil's Bridge to Hospenthal; thence to Grimsel-Hospice over the Furka Pass, and by the glacier and source of the Rhone, is a day's journey on foot or with mules. Hence to Meyringen or Reichenbach, is an easy day by the wonderful fall of the Aar at Handeck. From Meyringen to Grindelwald over the Scheideck, one day. The glaciers of Grindelwald, the gigantic mountains, the highest of this branch of the Alps from which they issue. and the proximity of the Faulhorn, form the chief points of interest. There is an inn at the top of the Faulhorn, should the traveller desire to see the sun Ulric Bohren, of Lucerne, is an excellent guide, very intelligent, and possesses a complete knowledge of the Botany of the Swiss Mountains. from Grindelwald to Interlachen, distant about 12 miles, there is a char road; or by the Wengern Alp to Lauterbrunnen, and thenceto Interlacken, 20 miles the traveller will find much to repay the detour, the gigantic Jungfrau almost overhanging the path.

Montreux is a village situated near the eastern extremity of the Lake of Geneva, about half way between Clarens and the Castle of Chillon.

The spot is one of the most lovely in Europe. Being on the slope of a precipitous hill, it is completely seletered from the north and east whids, and having a south and west aspect the climate is very mild especially in the spring. It is much sought after as a winter residence by invalids, and is becoming a place of much resort. Houses are now rising very fast, but by no means keeping pace with the demand.

Charlan,—The Rev. S. R. Stock. Divine service is held in Montreux Church. In the winter at 113 a.m. and 3 p.m. In the summer at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. The Sacrament is administered on the first Smidly in the month.

GRANDE MAISON, and CLERC.

A small town in the Canton of the Vallais, situated at the foot of the passes of the Tête Noire and the Col do Palme, leading to Chamounix, and also near the foot of the great st. Bernard. It is about 9 or 10 hours' walk hence to the monastery. Martigny is on the Simplon road into Italy. Diligences pass daily from Geneva and Lausanne.

English Church service twice every Sunday

From Martigny to Villeneuve, at the east end of the Lake of Geneva. Railway from Bex to Villeneuve. About four miles on the road is the splendid warerfall of the Pissevache, one of the most imposing in Switzerland. The valley of the Rhone, from Martigny to Villeneuve, through St. Maurice and Bex, is replete with all that can constitute picturesque seenery—the Dent du Midi and the Dent de Morcles, crowned with snow, being conspicuous objects on each side of the valley. Along the valley of the Rhone, from Martigny to Brieg, at the foot of the Simplen Pass is about sixty-five miles through Sion, Sierre, Leuk, and Visp. These towns have an air of decayed splendour; and the scenery around, from the width of the valley, does not partake of the usual Swiss character.

At Brieg, the ascent of the Simplen begins at Succ, and is a continued steep to the summit, carried round the edge of precipices, and frequently through tunnels blasted in the rock. Houses of refige are erected at frequent intervals, to prefect travellers from the avalanches in spring. At the village of Simplon, a little beyond the summit, is a rude, but clean and comfortable, inn. The descen from Simplon, through the gorge of Gondo, into Italy, is perhaps univalled for sublimity and wildness of scenery, and a triumph of engineering skill. At Isolla, the Sardinian custom-house is situated; soon after which, at a sudden turn of the road, the Val d'Ussola bursts upon the astonished gaze of the traveller. The transition from the snows at the summit of Simplon Pass to the sunny climate of Italy, in the course of a few hours, is truly marvellous.

From Iselia, the Sardinian frontier, through the thoroughly Italian town of Dono d'Ossola, to Baveno, on the Lago Maggiore, is nearly forty miles.

The diligence can be taken from Martigny to-Brieg, there stay the night, and in the marriage from Brieg to Domo Dossola over the Simplon in a small carriage. From Domo to Arona the diligence may be taken. From Martigny to Brieg the diligence occupies about ten hours. From Brieg to Domo twelve hours.

The Great St. Bernard. 30 miles from Martigny, is so much visited by travellers for the romantic beauty of its seenery, that we devote a small space to a notice of it. The summit is about 11,000 feet. above the sea, and 8,000 feet is the height of the highest pass. The monastery erected here has existed under thirty-four superiors for over nine centuries. The most elevated part of the passage of the Great St. Bernurd is a long and narrow valley, whereof the middle is occupied by a lake, at the eastern extremity of which is the Hospice, built on the site of the ancient Roman redoubt of Sto. leare; and at the opposite side, towards Italy, is the Place de Jupiter - a small plain-wherein once stood a temple dedicated to that deity. The convent was founded in 962 by St. Bernard, since . which it has remained unchanged in its rules, and unrivalled in its hosptalities to strangers, who, with their mules or horses, are gratuitously entertained for three days. Tourists ought to leave in the Convent box at least as much money as they would pay at an hotel, as poor travellers are lodged and fed grainitously summer and winter. The bodies o. those who have died on the mountains are to be seen in the Margue in a state free from decomposition The chain of Alps in which Mount St. Bernardis altuated has witnessed four military expeditions, viz, those of Hannibal, Charlemagne, Francis I., and Napoleon. The latter crossed Mount St. Bernard immediately before his descent into the plains of Lominady, where he fought the battle of Marengo.

Meyringen .-- Hotels:--

HOTEL SAUVAGE-COURONNE, comfortable

A thoroughly Swiss village; a central point for many of the most interesting excursions in the Oberland. The only carriage road from it is to Brienz, along the beautiful vale of eyringen, abounding with waterfails. A steamer plies daily on the lake between Brienz and Interlachen, calling at the Glesbach Fall.

: English Church Service twice every Sunday during the season Donations in aid of the fund for supporting this little church will be gratefully received.

Meyringen to Engelberg. An excellent and comfortable little hotel will be found in the Engotlen Thal, close to the top of the Jock Pass. Capital head quarters for visiting the magnificent neighbourhood. This is the best starting place for ascending Mount Tilles. Trustworthy Guides are obtained at the Engotlen Hotel at a third of the cost of the se from Engelberg, and the cost of porters carrying up provisious, &c. is all Saved.

From Meyringen the Lake of Lucerne may be reached in one day, over the lass of the Brung to Langern, and thence along the lovely pastoral vale of Barnen to Stanstad, or Beckenried, on the Lake of Lucerne.

The pedestrian will find the route from Meyringen, by the Sheldeck, to Grindchwald, one of the finest excursions in Switzerland, pa-sing the Falls of the Reichenbach and the glacier of Rosenbaui. A good Pedestrian will readily walk from Meyringen to Grindchwald; and he will find provisions at Rosenbaut and at the Châlei on the top of the Sheldeck.

From Meyringen to the Hospico of the Grimsel is but 23 unles by the splendid Falls of the Aar, at Handels, where is a good challed, where comfortable refreshment may be obtained. From this point, to the surumit of the Grimsel Pass, vegetation gradually ceases, and the road is carried along the precipitous rocks for many milles, the river Aar foaming beneath, Avoid staying at the Village of Guttanen, on the way up the Gilmsel Pass, as the "Inm" is described as a "comfortless place," and the people extortionate.

The lim, at the Hospice of the Grimsel, 6000 feet above the see, far removed from any human habitation, is now re-built, and is a welcome sight to the weariest traveller in this bleak and stelling region. It is inhabited only in summer, but in the season is a constant resort for travellers, connecting the four of the Oberland, by the Furca Pass, with the great St. Gothard route to Italy, and the Lake of Lucerna.

Moutier.—Hotel:—Maison De Commerce. A good resting-place between Blenne and Basle in the Munster Thal. The Hotel de la Couronne, good and moderate.

Winterthur .- Stat .- HOTEL DU SAUVAGE

Winterthur is a prettily situated town in the cantion of Zurich, and is met by the exentsionist in his journey from the capital of the cauton to Constance. It is sented in a fertile plain on the river Alach, 12 miles F.N.E. of Zurich. It is an industrious and manufacturing town, containing 4,600 inhabit mis, who profess Protestantism. There is no object to be met with worth the tourist's attention save the new school, whichwill repay a visit.

Yverdun. - Stat. - 3, 160.

This town is selected as a place of residence, to enable travellers to take exentsions to the several picturesque scenes in the environs, whence some of the fluest views may be obtained, situated at the south end of the lake of Neufchatel. Railwayt Lansanne, and Morges, Lake of Geneva, see pago 156. Diligences, see p. 211. Steamers, see b. 212.

Zermatt.—A small village, now much visited in our square of its numerous glacters, and splended views or Mount Cervin and Monte Rosa. The Pass of the Cervin to Chatillon is practicable for nucles. There are two very fair lines in the village, another on the Rufetberg, from whonce the village, superb. The journey from Vi-p, in the village, will occupy ten hours, on horseback. The roadis very bad in some places, and exceedingly narrow. There is a good in a st Stalden, just half way.

English Church so: vice twice ou Sundays during summer.

, Zug.-Hotels-Hirsch (the Stag). Ochs (Ox.)

The small capital of the smallest canten of the Gonfederation. It is situated at the east en dor the Lake, and contains a population of 3,200. Itschief edifices and institutions are the Cathedral, the Charch of the Capachin, the Town Hall, and the Arrenal. The remark helps church-yard here should be visited by the travellor.

There are few objects of attraction here. The Capuchin convent and nunnery are worth a visit. Some guide-books attribute a picture in the former to Carracci; but it is not his work, but the work of an infusior artist—Hamingo.

The bone-house attached to the Church of St. Michael, a little way outside the town contains many hundred skulls, each having inscribed upon it the name of its owner, his birth, and death. The churchyard is filled with very nice ornaments. The Cemetery is also well worth a visit, on account of its display of armotial bearings, coats, and crests.

The Lake of Zug is situated parily in the canton of the same name, purily in that of Schwytz. It is four leagues in length by one in breadth, abounding in a species of fish called "redleil," much prized. The vicinity of the Lake affords a facility for many short and pleasant excursions along its borders. For instance, to the village of Cham, the Castle of Hunenberg, the Convent of Francuthal, the Gubel, the Fenter See, and the battle-field of Murgarten, the most interesting of them all.

During the summer months the steamboat on the Luke of Zug runs three times a day in connection with the omnibases conveying parsengers from the stramboats on the Lake of Zurich, and once daily on the Lake of Lucerne, and affords a cheap, quick, and pleasant mode of conveyance for tourists to the foot of the Rigt, the Bernese Oberland, and Lucerne.

Guides for these places may be hired at Zng: Casper Schell particularly recommended.

Zurich. -- Stat. -- 16,000 -- HOTEL: --

Zurich Canton is a country of great extent, beautiful, and fertile, with a dense population, a Protestantund great manufacturing neighbourhood. Zurich or Zurch, the capital, situate at the north-west end of the beautiful and extensive Zurcher-See, where the Limmat gushes from it with a broad and impetuous current. It is built along both banks of the river in a valley hemmed in by mountains. The large town on the right bank extends to the foot of the Zurichberg and the Sussenberg, and contains a great number of sloping streets; and the same is the case with the little town on the left bank, which is built on the hills of Lindenbeff and St. Peter's.

The Library was founded in 1620, and centains about 40,000 vols., several rare manuscripts, many Roman antiquities, and a cabinet of 4,000 medals.

Hutliberg, 3 miles from Zurich, 3000 feet, ascend in an hour, charming view.* Inn at the top.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Cathedral; Library; Asylum for the Blind; Corn Market; Post Office; Cantonal School; Plats Promenade, with Gessner's Monument; the Arsenal; the Museum, and reading room.

Chemist And Drugoist.—Mr. J. H. Kerez. Prescriptions accurately prepared. English medicines of the bost quality.

The Lake of Zurich consists of a great and lesser basin; and is ten leagues in length by one and a half in breadth. The tour of the Lake is very delightful, and may be made either by land or water. Perhaps the most agreed being to accomplishing it would be to proceed in a carriage to Rapperschwyl, where the two basins unite along the south-western shore, (which is so elevated as to command delighter ful views, and leads through several very fine villages), to return also by route to Zurich along the north-eastern shore. There is a road leading from Rapperschwyl to Uznach, a little after than the south-eastern extremity of the lake, in three hours and another to Zurich, as is hours.

English Church service twice every Sunday during sunner.

Roads over the Alps. - MountCents, situated between Frage and Italy, is travered by difference from St. Jose and Minerome to Surv and vice reast, and from Geneva to Turin. The pass is 6,700 act high, and the road was constructed by Napoleon.

The pass of the Simplon (also by Napoleon) is 6,500 feet high. Diligence from Geneva, Martigny, and Lausenne to Milen. This is, in many respects, the most remarkable road on the Alps.

St. Gethard.—Diligence from Lucerne to Milan-Height 6,800. (See Lucerne.)

Bernardin 7,100 feet; Splugen 6,800 feet-both these passes are traversed by dilligeness from Colra (Zurich and Constance) to Milan, the road separating at the village of Splugen; the latter pass is the most trequented, and the road was constructed by the Austrans to oppose the Swiss route over the Bernardin. The road from Colra to Splugen passes through the Via Mala, a defile of the utmost grandeur, exceeded by mone in Switzerland.

The Stelvio, connecting the Typol with Italy, from Mals to Bormio, is the highest carriage read in Europe, being 8,700 feet high. A diligence or combins russ daily from Collece to Bounds, and time time, a week from Bormio to Mals.

The pass of Ampezzo afords the nearest road from Innepruck to Venice. There is not, however, any public conveyance, and the travelier would find theroute by Botzen, Thent, and Verona (whence there is a rativacy to Venice), more convenient, and superior in attractions.

In winter the Jurney over the chief passes is performed by siches. Besides these carriage roads, the Pass of the Grand St. Bennard, near Matteny, in the valley of the Rhone, has much traffic over it. It is besides much visited on act count of its celebrated monastery or hospital, on the summit of the pass, $1,200 feet high.

ITALY AND SARDINIA.

In Italy the Railway is called Strain Ferrata.

Italy consists of two distinct portions-the continental and the insular. The latter includes the three large Islands of Sielly, Sardinia, and Corsica, with the smaller ones of Malta, Gozo, Comino, &c. The continental portion forms a long narrow peninsula, extending from N. W. to S. E., the greatest length of which measures about 695 or 700 miles from the sources of the river Toza to Cape Chuiti in Calabria, or Cape Lucca in Ofranto. The breadth is various; its mortherly measurement, from the western border of Savoy to the eastern border of Friull, being 365 miles; about 275 miles from Mount Genevre to the mouth of the Po, through the middle of Lombardy; 105 miles from the coast of Lucca to the coast of Ravenna; 156 miles from Plombino to Anoma; 98 from the Gulf of Naples to the Gulf of Manfredonia; and only 20 miles as ome parts of Calabia and straits—The superficultarea, including the Islands, is 122,167—English square unles.—The northern border of Italy is formed by the stupendous range of the Alps, extending in a long curve line from the shore of the Mediterranean Sea near Generato the head of the Adriatic. The Alps are connected with the Appenines at their extremity, a smaller but still important range, which stretches in an ununtercupted line, parallel to the shores of the Gulf of Genoa, and then through the peninsular part of Italy to the Strait of Messina, dividing the country into two narrow sections of lowland, which run along from the mountains to the adjacent seas. The great Plain of Lombardy lies between the Alps and the Appenines in Northern Italy, and is traversed by the Po, as also watered by immunerable streams which flow down from the adjacent mountains. The length of Lombardy is about 250 miles from east to west, its average breadth being 50 miles. Many narrow but fortile valleys are enclosed by the Appenines in their progress southward.

Italy is divided into nine Sovereign States, in most of which, with the exception of the porty Republic of San Marino, the government is vested in an absolute Monarch, and is exercised with the most rigorous despotism.

London to Italy, through France.—The following information will be useful to persons visiting Italy for the first line, as furnishing a programme of the most desirable route.

A Railway communication being now established between Paris and Marseilles, travellers may proceed, by rail and steam, all the way from London to Florence, viz ,- London to Dover or Folkestone, rall; Folkestone to Boulogne, steamboat; Boulogne to Parls, Chalons, Lyons, Avignon, and Marseilles, by rall; from Marseilles, steamboat to Leghorn, and rall to Florence. Persons preferring a land journey to Italy, instead of taking the boat at Marseilles, should proceed thence by diligence to Toulon, Frejus, Antibes, Nice, and along the coast of the Meditterranean to Genoa and Lucca. This route presents a magnificent scenery of wood and water, intersected by very fine roads.

From Lyons, the traveller may proceed by tail to St. Jean de Maurienne thence by diligence over Mount Cenis, to Su.a, from which place he may take the flat way to Turin, Arona, or Genoa. The views by this road are magnificent. The two finest roads in Italy are the Riviere de Ponente or Cornice Pass, from Nice to Genoa; and the Riviere de Levante, from Genoa to Lu.ca, both of which are on the banks of the Mediterranean, and daily traversed by good diligences.

MONEY EXCHANGE.

English currency not being understood in Italy, Napoleons and 5-franc pieces are the best coins, as they are known all over Italy.

Sardinia and Piedmont, Duchy of Parma. Same as France.

Loral ardy .- The Lira Austrian or Zwanziger is the current silver coin, value about 84d.; 100 Lira Austrian, are equal to 87 Francs, consequently a Napoleon is worth about 23 Zwanzigers; 20 Krentzers or 100 Centesimi, are equal to 1 Austrian Lira or Zwanziger; 3 Zwanzigers equal to 1 Florin; 8 Zwanzigers equal to 1 Cour Thater. The bills at the hotels are usually made out in French Francs.

Modena .- French, Sardinian, and Paimesan coins are current: the currency of the State, however, is the Lira of 20 Sous, subdivided into 12 Deniers; 100 Liras of Modena are equal to 381 Francs, less a fraction.

Tuscany .- The accounts are kept in various ways; the legal currency is the Lira. 5 Liards are equal to 1 Crazia; 8 Crazias to 1 Paul; and 14 Pauls to 1 Lira. The Crazia being an eighth of a Paul, is worth about ad. English, and a Dollar, 4s. 54d. An English sovereign is worth about 46 Pauls. or 50 Lira; the Napoleon is worth about 36 Pauls, or 24 Lira. The larger sliver coins are the Colonata or Spanish Dollar (common throughout Italy) and the Roman Dollar, worth each 10 Panis; the 5-Franc-piece is equal to 9 Pauls.

Lucca .... Accounts are kept in Lira, Soldi, and Denari. The Lira is equal to 75 Centimes, or 74d.;

18 Denari equal to 1 Soldo; 20 Soldo equal to 1 Lira.

States of the Church.—The current coin of the country is in Bajocchi, Pauls, and Seado. 5 Quattrini equal to 1 Bajocchi; 10 Bajocchi equal to 1 Paul; 10 Pauls equal to 1 Sculo. A Napoleon is worth 3. Pauls; a Sovereign about 45 Pauls. A Bajocchi is worth about a id.; a Paul = 5id; a Soudo = 48 3id Paper is taken at the price marked, or rather, it is no onger at a discount, as the Government are buyirs if up.

ITALY, 357

Naples.—The coinage here is in Grani, Carlini, and Ducats. 10 Grani are equal to 1 Carlino : and 10 Carlini equal to 1 Ducat. The Scudo or Piastra, is here worth 12 Carlini; a Grans is worth rather less than a id.; a Carlino, id.; a Ducat, 3s. 4id.; a Piastra, 4s. The latter coin is marked 120, being that number of Grani, and is in general use.

Luggage.—The Luggage is opened on the Tuscan Frontier; it is advisable to get it plombe, as it saves trouble on entering Florence.

Servants are now charged for in the Bills throughout Italy; in Lombardy, I Zwanziger: Tuscany. 1 Paul; Papal States, 2 Pauls; Naples, 2 Carlini.

Waiters .- The Waiter at an Hotel is called "Cameriere," and at a Cafe, "Bottoga."

Passports.—See pages xxxiii to xxxviii. At Palanza, on the western shore of the Lago Maggiors in the Sardinian dominions, there is a resident Austrian Consul; travellers for Italy can obtain the visa to their passports.

Frontier, and Custom House,-In the Papal States the Custom House regulations are less severe than in the other States of Italy, and a small fee of a couple of Pauls will save the traveller much inconvenience. As books are the particular object of enquiry, caution should be observed in their selection.

Travellers on the shores of the Lago Maggiore should be apprised that the eastern side being within the Austrian dominions, and the western being part of the Sardinian dominions, baggage and merchandise on being landed at Intra and other places on the western shores, is liable to be searched and duty levied. Horses, as likewise articles of plate, are treated as merchandise, and are charged with a high duty—as much as 33 francs per house being levied. This duty, however, is returned at the frontier town on quitting the Sardinian dominions—as, for instance, at the foot of the Simplon in taking that route.

Ancona is a city and seaport town of the Roman States. It is an episcopal see, and is built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the slope of two hills rising from the shores of the Adriatic, 132 miles north-east of Rome. It is a busy commercial town, in which is erected a citadel. Ancona also possesses a very fine harbour and quay; the former is formed by a pier 2,000 feet in length, 100 in breadth, and 65 above the water, having at its extremity a lighthouse with a revolving light at the and. Its population is about 35,000, a large proertion of which are Jews, Greeks, and Moslems. it is divided into two portions—the Citta Vecchia and the Citta Nuova. The former occupies the highest grounds and is inhabited by the poorer classes: the latter is situated in the lower slopes. and along the shores of the sea. The city contains some fine buildings, but they are badly arranged. it contains a famous port; it has two moles-one erected by Trajan, and the other by Clement XIL The triumphant arch of Trajan, which has been pronounced the finest marble arch in the world, is worth attention. Within the harbour is the lassretto, built in the form of a pentagon by Clement All, in 1732, and completed by Velletellin. Traveilers landing at this lazaretto from the Levant or Greece, may shorten their quarantine by going through the Spoglio, or Bath, as it is called.

Boucers, the capital of the most important Legation of the Holy See, is a city of two miles in longth by one in breadth, and is divided into four quariers. It is entered by-welve gates, and contains a nopufation of ?1,500 inhaltents. The people of Bologna are remarkalling for their intelligence and agreeable manners, as also for the independence of their opinions. The aspect of the town is gloomy and antique; the stocets are irregular and narrow, whilst the thoroughtares and arcades are broad and noble. The events of 1848 will long continue to make Bologna remarkable. In 270 it was an Episcopal see, and was afterwards raised, by Gregory XIII, to the dignity of an Archeptscopal See. It has given six Popes to Rome, and nearly 160 cardinals. The School of Bologna has also given many illustrious names to the arts, among whom is Oderfari di Gubllo, immortalised by Dante; it also produced the 2 Francias, 3 Caraceres, Guercino, Domenichino, Albani, Guido, Lanfrance, Pusinello, and Cignant. The Academa delle Belle Arte is a noble institution, and well worth a visit.

Bollegna is also the seat of an University, founded in 1119 by Wornerus, called "Lavena Junis;" it will well repay a visit, particularly the museum of Anatomy, and Cabinet of Katural Philosophy, and the University Library which centains many very valuable manuscripts.

The University has had three or four illustrious female professors.

The objects of attraction are the Palazzo della Loggia, or Town Hall, entirely built of marble of the richest description, and covered with sculpture, in the interior are some fine paintings. The Duomo Vecchio, containing some fine paintings by Moretto and Romanini. The Duomo Nuovo, or new Cathedral, is a noble building entirely of marble, and contains some very fair pictures. The church of Santa Afra, built upon the site of a temple of Saturn, is very rich in paintings, containing some of the best work of Titian, Pholo Veronese, Tintoretto, Bassano, and others of less note; there are also some time frescoes. In addition to the churches above mentioned the following contain works of great ment, and are all worth visiting:-San Francesco, San Nazario e Celso, San Domenico, San Barnabo, St. Agata, San Giuseppe, San Giovanni Evangeksta, San Fanstino Maggiore, San Pietro in Oliveto, San Clemente, San Fanstino in Riposo, Santa Julia, San Curtone, La Misericordia, Santa Aguesi, Santa Crocc, La Madonna al Mor-cato di Lino. There are some excellent private collections of pictures which should be visited; the principal are the Galleria Averoldi, Galleria Lecchi, and Galleria Tool. In these galleries will be found specimens of Raphael, Vandyke, Salvator Rosa, Wouverman , Poussin, Titian, Paul Veronese, Tintoretto, Teniers, Canova, and a host of others. The traveller should not neglect to you the Corso del Teatro, the whole of the houses in the street are painted with a series of mythological and historical subjects.

The fine line of steamers plying between Marseilles and Naples regularly touch here, and contribute greatly to its importance and prosperity. Its commercial character possesses some interest, it being the place from which are shipped the exports of the other "states," a large proportion of which are shipped for England. The above line of steamers, together with the French Government Packets, afford great convenience to parties proceeding to Malta and the Levant, and have brought London and Rome within a journey of ten days, making Civita Vecchia the grand point from which a rapid transit may be made to any part of the Mediterranean. Travellers are not permitted to land here until the passports and ship's papers are shown and examined. The traveller on landing to beset with facehous, or porters, and should take care to make his airangements before leaving the vessel. Civita Vecchia is remarkable for its port, which is called "Trajani Portus." It is the capital of the smallest of the Delegation of the Ecclesiastical States, embracing a superficial extent of sixty square leagues, containing a population of 19,600 souls, 6,900 of whom live in the town itself. Leo XII. erected it into an Episcopal See in 1825. and created Cardinal Pacca its first Bishop. It is now connected with the diocese of Porto and Sta. Rufina. Three miles distant from Civita Veechis. are situated the Bagni di Ferrata mineral springs. called by Pliny "Aqua Tauri." HOTEL DE L'EUROPE.

TRE MORI.

Ferrara is the capital of a delegation of the same name, in the Roman States. This city was once the residence of a court celebrated throughout Europe; but grass now grows on its pavements, whilst its magnificent palaces are deserted and crumbling into atoms. The chief interest of Ferrara arises from its connexion with the House of D'Este, from which the House of Brunswick and the royal family of England trace their direct descent. Ferrara was once famous throughout Christendom for its university, within whose walls so many English students were collected as to form a distant nation in that learned body. The School of Ferrara, founded and patronised by the D'Este family, boasts of many illustrious names in all departments of the arts and sciences. It cherished a series of poets, from Ariosto and Bogardo down to our times. Ferrara is also remarkable for the impulse which it gave to the Reformation. It also afforded an asylum to Calvin, to Marsh, to the Duchess of Venice, the noble-minded daughter of Louis XI., and the wife of Ercole!

The public buildings worth visiting are its Cathedral, and Churches of S. Francesco, S. Benedetto, S. l'aulo, S. Domonico, S. Andrea, Campo Santo and others, its castle, formerly the Ducal Palace, now the residence of the Cardinal Legate : its ciallery of Pictures, lately transferred to the "Pinacothua," one of the most beautiful palaces of Ferrara. This gallery contains many excellent paintings worth the traveller's notice, particularly Garafalo, the Agony in the Garden; the Nativity, by Bastlamno; Dosso Dosse, Noah's Ark, and the Fall of Macina, by Agostine Caracco. The Palazzo del Magistrate, in a hall of which is the Ariostean Academy, the studio publico, or Schools of Medicine and Jurisprudence, containing a rich cabinet of Medals, and a collection of Grecian and Roman inscriptions and antiquities; amongst which is the celebrated Sarcophagus of Aurelia, Rutychia, wifteof P. Rubens. Its chief interest is in the public library, containing 80,000 volumes, and 900 M.S., among which are the Greek Palempsists of Gregory, Nazeauder, St. Chrysostom: some manmacripts of Ariosto and Tasso: together with the former's arm-chair of walnut wood, the beautifully executed medal bearing his profile, which was found in his tomb, and his bronze ink-stand, and the Plazza d' Aristir. The most interesting object in Ferrara is the Cell—the hospital of St. Auna, own as the Prison of Tusso. It is below the ground floor, and lighted by a grater window from the yard. On the walls of Tasso's prison are the names of Lord Byron, Lamartine, &c. The theatre and Citadel are also worth attention.

The journey from Florence to Rome can be made by Sienna in 234 posts, or by diligence, which performs the journey in 36 hours. The courier's car-riage is still more expeditious, but the vetturini require five or six days. Post horses accomplish the journey in four days, giving plenty of time to visit Sienna and making Radicomni and Viterbo the sleeping places between Rome and Sienna.

Florence is the capital of Tuscany, contains a population of 106,899 souls, and is remarkable for the beauty of its site and position. The picturesque grandeur of its buildings, its wooded plains, sloping hills, and majestic mountains, can be seen to great advantage from the Boboli gardens, from the Church ot Sun Miniato, and from the Bello Sguardo, a hill whence a fine view may be obtained. Galileo's villa is at some little distance, near the hill of Arcetri. In general, the streets are narrow, its palaces are noble in their architectural beauty. grand design, and exquisite execution

Modern Florence is built like a pentagon. It contains a very fine cathedral, called Santa Maria del Flore. It was commenced in 1298 by Arnolfo di Lasso, whose design may be seen in Muro's fresco, on the cast wall of the chapter-house of Santa Maria Novella. The walls of the cathedral are almost entirely cased with marble. It is 454 feet long and 387 feet high; the transept is nearly 334 feet long, the height of the nave 152 feet, and that of the side aisles 964 feet. Many architects of great talent were employed in carrying out the erection, among whom were Giotto, Taddeo Gaddi, Andrea Orgagna, Filippo di Lorrenzo, and Brunelleschi, to whom its completion was entrusted. In 1558 it was destroyed by the Provedotore Benedetto Ungucionio, who so defaced it, that not a slab or a column was left entire; and the traveller may new see Giotto's facade, in the back ground of a lunetto in the outer cloister of St. Marco. The re-building was commenced in 1420, and entrusted to Brunelleschi, who, before his death, in 1446, saw the cupola all but finished. This cupola is octagonal in the plan. and is 138 feet 6 inches in diameter; this served as a model for Michael Angelo, for St. Peter's. best view of it is obtained from the south-east; and the traveller should go up the dome rather than up the campanile, as a better view can be obtained b his doing so. Over the first door on the north side there are statues attributed to Jacopo della Quirint : and over the second is an "Assumption," by Name d'Anton di Banco, called La Mandoria; benesili are two small statues by Donatello; and in the limette is an "Annunciation," by Doni Ghirlandsje; on the south side, the Madonna over the done in: attributable to Niccolo Arctino, and that over the other door to Gio Pisano.

The small dimensions of the windows, and the rich colours of the glass, cause the interior to look sombre and gloomy. The arcies, though pointed, are not truly gothic. The pavement is tesselated with red, blue, and white marble. The stained glass is said to have been executed by a Florentine artist, Domenico Lisi di Gambrasin, in 1334. Above the side door in the west, to the north of the principal entrance, is the monumental fresco painting of Sir John Hawkwood. The tomb of Balthasar Cossa (John XXIII., 1419) is in the Baptistery, and deserves notice. The White Marble Tabernacle, in the Church of Or'San Michell, constructed ior holding the miracle-working picture by Orgagna, and surmounted by the statue of St. Michael, is worth the traveller's inspection.

The church of Santa Croce, belonging to the Black Friers, will repay a visit—it is called the "Westminster Abbey" of Florence. The principal other charches worth visiting are, Santa Maria Novella, San Lorenzo, which contains the Laurentian Library, designed by Michael Angelo; and Michael Angelo's Sacristy, being the tombs of the Medici, and the celebrated Statue of Day and Night; the church of San Marco, the Annunciation, and Santo Spirito. The Florentine Palaces will also interest the traveller, among which is the Palazzo Vecchio. In this city are two markets, the Mercato Vecchio, and the Mercato Nuovo, which stand in the very centre of the Primo Cerchio Among the public buildings are, Casa Bounarotti, in the Via Ghibellina, the house of Michael Angelo, one of the most interesting objects in Florence. The Cas Martelli, &c. The Galleria Imperiale e Reale, on the upper floor of the Uflizi, is open to the public every day, except Sundays and holidays, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.: in its vestibules and galleries is the richest and most celebrated collection in the world. The Gallery of the Palazzo Pitti is open to the public every day except Sundays and holidays, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. The two galleries contain perhaps the richest and most celebrated collection of statues and pictures in the world. On the second floor of the Uffizi is the Magliabechian Library, of which Bosari was the architect: it is so called from its founder, Antonio Maghabecchi. This li-brary, contains 150,000 volumes, besides 12,000 manuscripts, including one of Tasso, several of Machiavelli, and of Gallileo. The Laurentian Library contains 9,000 manuscripts, including the Pandects, a manuscript of Virgil, two of Tacitus, one of Pintarch, the Decamerone, and several by The Ricardi Library contains 23,000 volumes and 3,500 manuscripts. The Marnulli contains 45,000 volumes.

Among the places worth a visit in the environs of Florence, are Porta Alla Croce. Toggis Imperiate La Certosa, in Val d'Emo, and the Sanctuaries of Valambrosa, which are 16 g. H. from Florence.

It is remarkable for its palaces, and looks like a city of kings. The Palazzo Doria Tursi, in the Strada Nuova, late residence of the Queen Downger, and afterwards the Jesuits' College; the Palazzo Leira, the Palazzo Spinola, and the Palazzo Palavacino, No. 327, Strado Carlo, attract attention. It is called Palavacino, or *Strip my neighbour," from the family name. The Cathedral of St. Lorenzo is a noble pile, and was built in the eleventh century. The columns of its portals were taken from Almeria as part of the spoils won at the capture of the city. The curious pilasters sof the door on the north side of the church, are worth attention. The richest portion of the church is the chapel of St. John the Baptist, into which no female is permitted to enter except on one day of the week, an exclusion imposed by Pope Innocent VIII. The best of the churches worth visiting are the Cathedral, St. Annunciata, and St. Maria Carignano. From the summit of the latter there is a good view of the town, very picturesque port, with its fortifications and lighthouse, and of the Mediterranean sca. The Palazzo Rossi, and the churches "San Ambrosia" and "L'Annunciata," will be found the most interesting. The Academia Lefrestica delle Relle Arte is worth a visit. Leghern is the fivourite resort of the rank and fashion of Rome Florence, Bologna, Sienna, &c. in the summer season, the influx of strangers frequently amounting to 20,000 persons. The Strada Ferrata Leopolds or Leopolda Railway affords the greatest facility for visiting Pisa, Lucca, Florence, Sienna, &c., see our railway table. The Government are now at a great expense, enlarging the port to accommodate the increasing trade of the place; and to those unacquainted with the same, it would be difficult to convey an adequate idea of the enjoyment of a sall at sunset under an Italian sky among vessels gay with the flags of almost every nation of the globe.

The marble group on the quay is a good piece of statuary. The English Cometery contains mounments to Smollet, Francis Horner, &c.

Travellers will do well to provide themselves here with whatever specie they are likely to require. The foreign goods for the supply of all Tuscany and the Papal States are imported and pald for by Leghorn, consequently a much better exchange will be obtained on circular notes, letters of credit, &c., than at Florence, Rome, or other inland towns which have no direct trade with England, France, or the United States, nor any occasion to make remittances to those countries.

pleasant walks, planted with trees, whence some of the fixest views may be obtained of the city, the exquisite valley of Serchio, and of the Appenines.

The principal objects to be seen in Lucca are remains of a Roman amplitheatre, and theatre; the dome, or cathedral; the inlaid work of the fine facade and portico. Inside, the painted roof and frescoes; the mosaic pavement representing the judgment of Solomon; the stained glass windows; and lastly, the several fine paintings and beautiful works of art. The most remarkable of the churches is that of San Romano, containing the magnificent picture by Fra Bartolomeo, called the "Madonna della Misericordia," an exquisite and wonderful painting; and also the "St. Mary Magdalene," by the same master, both of these paintings are masterpieces of incomparable beauty.

BATHS OF LUCCA - about fifteen miles from Lucca—are situated in one of the finest of the Tuscan valleys, and are justly celebrated for the beantiful scenery by which they are surrounded. Pleturesque villas and villages adorn the valley and mountain sides, and excursions may be made among the luxuriant hills in every direction.

There are five Bath Establishments; a bath costs two pauls, and a small gratuity to the attendants. This favourite resort is one of the coolest and most agreeable summer residences in Italy. An English Church is built here. Gregory's Pavilion Motel kept by Mrs. Gregory Mons is highly recommended for its English comfort and good living.

Lugano. - Capital of the Canton Tessin, beautifully situated on the lake. Population 5000.

The lake of Lugano is about 14 miles in length, of an irregular shape, and about a mile to a mile and a half in breadth. The end towards Potezza is the most mountainous. A steamer piles regularly twice a day between Lugano and the two extremities of the lake, and there are dirigences twice a day to Bellinzons and Como, and once a day to Luino, (2 hours drive) on the Lago Maggiore, where the steamers touch regularly four times a day, in ascending and descending. The view from Monte Salvadore is remarkably fine, but the ascent is very fatiguing.

There is service according to the rites of the church of England every Sunday in the Chanel attached to the Hotel du Parc.

Magadino.-Lago Maggiore.-This town is becoming of considerable importance tance from its central situation at the mouth of the Ticino. It is one of the most picturesque spots on the route from Bellinzona to Milan.

Milan, founded by the Insubrian Gauls, is the chief city of Lombardy, and contains a population of 175,000 souls. It was sacked by Attila, A.D. 452, but its destruction was not effected until its surrender to Frederick L., 1162. The city was restored? in 1167. Its restoration was effected by the combined forces of Cremona, Bresela, Bergamo, Mantua. and Verona. Milan fell again in 1535, under the power of Charles the Fifth, who fixed the succession of the Duchy in his nephew. The Treaty of Utrecht in 1713 handed Milan over to Austria. The city has ten gates, all identified with some traditionary recollection, and remarkable for their massive proportious and architectural designs. Soverall: of the gates are fine, particularly Porta della Pace. The Duomo, called by St. Ambrose in his letter to. Sister Marcellina, " The great new Basilica," is perhaps the finest in the world, St. Peter's at Rome, and St. Paul's in London, excepted, and should be-ascended to the top. The different churches arelikewise worth attention; among the foremost: are the churches of the Porta Orientale, Porta Kosnana, of the Porta Tiernesse, &c. Leonardo: da Vinci's celebrated picture of the Last Supper, in the refectory of the Dominican Church of Santa-Maria delle Grazie, is worth visiting. Also the Amphitheatre (Etruscan), the Churches of St. Ambrose, (very ancient), and S. Lorenzo (octagonal), and the Columns of S. Lorenzo. The Ospedale: Maggiore is a grand establishment for the sick. It was founded by Francesco Sforza in 1456. Milan: is celebrated for its theatres, one of which, La Scale, was opened at the end of 1779. It has greatly fulled off since 1840, the Milanese nobility having essaed: to visit it. Good Picture Gullery here. The climate: of the same name. It is located on an island in winter is cold and damp. The traveller will-

In the ducky of Piedmont, situated at the foot of Mount Montalbano, with a fortified castle, and about 35,000 inhabitants, engaged in the preparation of silk, thread, perfumery, &c. The old town has few attractions, being dark and dirty; but the new portion is finely built. A beautiful view of Nice and the surrounding country is obtained from the top of the Chateau, situated at the back of the old town. The town and environs are highly celebrated for a pure healthy air, and great mildness of climate, even in the middle of winter; accounted for by the situation of the neighbouring mountains, which are connected with the Alps, and protect the country from storms. Donkeys are plentiful and cheap for the use of invalids, and there are a great many single and two horse carriages to be had at moderate charges. Large and small furnished apartments easily obtained.

Ravenna.-- Horen:-- La Spada, old and good. is now the capital of a Legation containing a population of 225,600, and the seat of a Cardinal Archbishop whose bishopric is the most ancient in the world, being founded by St. Peter's disciple, Apollinaris, A.D., 44. The city is about three miles in circumforence, and has a population of 11,000. By means of a canal, a communication is maintained with the Adriatic and its port, which is the great outlet of Romagna, and the means of carrying on an extensive trade with the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom. The Cathedral contains, in the Chapel of the S. S. Sacramento, Guido's celebrated sintings—the Fall of the Manna, and the lunctte presenting the meeting of Melchizedek and Abra-E. The other pictures worth notice are the Grand incount of Abstractus, by Carle Bononi, and Ca-abstracts Composition of the Church, by St. Orso, by the Light is a Greek marble was containing assuming at time things of this see, and the silver crucifix is exquisitely wrought with sculptures of the 6th century. The Chapel of the Madonna del Sudore, contains a marble arn in which repose the ashes of St. Barbatian; and in the vestibule of the sanctuary is the Paschal Calendar, remarkable as a specimen of astronomical knowledge in the early times of Christianity. In this place we also see Guido's beautiful painting,—the Angel offering Bread and Wine to Elijah. In the sacristy is the pastoral chair of St. Maximian. Some fragments of its relebrated door of vine wood are still preserved behind the grand door of the Cathedral. The ancient baptistery, called "S. Glovanni in Fonte," is an octagonal building with a cupola adorned with Mosaics.

The magnificent Basilica of San Vitale, built in the reign of Justinian, by St. Ecclesius, furnished to Charlemagne a model for his church at Aixba-Chapelle. It contains excellent Mosaics. In the Chapel S. S. Sacramento is a gilded ciborium, said to be by Michael Angelo; a picture of St. Benedict, by Francesco Gersi; and the Assumption of St. Gertrude, by Andrea Barbiani. In the vestibule of the sacristy is a superb bass-relief of Greek marble, representing the "Apotheosis of Augustus," as also many paintings of considerable merit. We must not fail to notice the Tomb of the Exarch Isaac, the creat ornament of Armenia, erected to his memory by his wife Susanna. He was the 8th Exarch of Ravenua, and died A.D., 644.

The other churches worth visiting are the Basilica of St. Giovanni Evangelista, the churches of St. Giovanni Battista, of San Vittore, of San Domenico, of S. Appolinare Nuovo, of S. Francesco, of Sta. Agatha, of Sta. Maria in Porto, and of S S.Nazario e Celso, also called, Mausoleum of Galla Placida.

Rome, the capital of the "Papal States," seat of the Popes, and once the citadel of the Csesars, is situate on the banks of the Tiber, partly on a plain, and partly on low hills, with their interrecting valleys, about sixteen miles from the mouth of the river. The Tiber divides the city into two unequal parts. The smaller on the righ. bank is called the Leonine city and Trasteveret Walls of 15 miles in circuit surround the entire city. The modern city is built upon the Campus Martius of the ancient Romans, lying along the banks of the Tiber, to the north of the seven hills which formed the site of ancient Rome. Four of these hills, once the scene of so many exciting events, are nowalmost entirely deserted, or covered by gardens, vineyards, broken buildings, or ruins. The streets, though spacious, are winding and badly kept. Rome is entered by the Porta del Popolo, built by Vignola, from designs by Michael Angelo, in 1561. The gate opens upon the spacious Piazza del Popolo, a rather broken area at the foot of Monte Pinclo. In the centre stands the fine obelisk of Rameses I. The inns of Rome are generally situated within the triangular space lying between the Porta del Popok), the Plazza di Spagna, the Via Condotti, and the Corso. The charges are generally for dinner, from 7 to 10 pauls; breakfast, 5 pauls; tea, 3 pauls. A bedroom generally costs from 2 to 5 pauls per diem. A suite of apartments, from 20 to 50 panis per day. Lodgings in private houses are very easily obtained, and at reasonable prices. The best situations are the Plazza di Spagna, the Via Babuino, the Corso, and the intervening streets.

The churches in Rome form the greatest object of attraction for the traveller, and claim his flist attention. They are 364 in number, seven of which are called Basilica; the principal ones are as follows:—St. Peter's, St. John Lateran, Santa Maria Maggiore, and Santa Croce, in Gerusalemme, within the city; and St. Paulo, San Lorenzo, and San Sebastian, ertra muros. St. Peter's stands on a slight acclivity, in the Leonine city, in the north-western corner of Rome. It is built in the form of a Latin cross, the nave being in length 607 feet and the transcpt 444 feet. The east front is 396 feet wide and 160 feet high, whilst the pillars composing it are each 88 feet high and 81 in diameter. The height of the dome, from the pavement to the top of the cross, is 448 feet. In front of the church there is a large piazza. The church occupies the place of Nero's Circus. and is erected on the spot where St. Peter was martyred. It occupied a period of 176 years in building, and required 350 years to perfect it. It cost £10,000,000; it covers eight English acres, and is kept in repair at a cost of £6,300 per annum.

The English traveller cannot fail to be interested by a visit to the Chapel of the Presentazione, in which is the tomb of Maria Clementina Sobieski, wife of the Pretender, James III.; she died at Rome in 1745. Opposite to this is Canova's cele-brated "Monument of the Stuarts." The expense of this monument was defrayed by George IV

San Glovannt in Laterano, St. John Lateran, is the Pope's church, he being its official minister. It is in this church, also, that the Popes are crowned. It contains the famous chapel of the Corsini, reckoned the finest in the world, and stated to have cost £100,000. The Lateran Palace and Museum should

The other hasilice, particularly St. Maggiore and Saint Panio, and churches are equally interesting o the traveller.

The palaces rank next in the order of merit, but cannot here receive any but a very short notice.

The Vatican stands prominent among the palace of the world, as invested with the greatest interest whether we regard its identification with all ecclesi astical history, or the influence it exercised over christendom for 400 years. Its existence dates from the eighth century; being dllapidated, it was rebuilt by Innocent III. in the twelfth century. It is the winter palace of the Pope, and stands over the Vatican hill, near to St. Peter's. It covers a large space, and is 1.151 English feet long, and 767 feet broad. It contains 4,122 chambers, and has eight grand staircases and two hundred smaller ones, and twenty courts. In it are the Pioclementine and Chiaramonti Museums, both filled with the master-pieces of modern art. Here are also the Capella Sistina, or Sistine Chapel built in 1473, and the Vatican Library, containing the richest collection of manuscripts and pictures in the world.

The Quirinal, or the Palace of Monte Cavallo, built on the Quirinal hill, is the Pope's summer residence, and will repay a visit.

The Capitol now occupies the square of the Capitoline hill, under the name of the Plazza del Campidoglio. It occupies the site of the ancient Capitol. and contains the palaces of the Senator and Municipal Magistrates of Rome. The Collegio della Sapienza, a university of Rome, founded by Innocent IV. in 1244, is one of the oldest in Europe. The Roman College, and the College de Propaganda Fide. are likewise worth visiting, Venice, one of the capitals of the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, is built on 72 islands on piles in the midst of a salt lagune, or shallow take, It is dividod into two unequal parts by the Canalazzo, or Grand Canal, the course of which through the city follows the form of an inverted S; is 300 feet wide, crossed near the middle of its course by the Ponte di Rinito, a spiendid marble structure of one spacious arch. In the midst of the labyrinth of canals and streets there are several large plazeas, nearly all of which are adorned with fine churches or palaces. The principal of these is the Plazza di San Marce, a large oblong area 562 feet by 232 surrounded by elegant buildings, and containing at its eastern extremity the metropolitan church of San Marco, a singular but brilliant combination of the Gothic and the Oriental style of architecture. The following Churches should be seen : -- S. Maria della Salute, S. S. Giovanni e Paulo, S. Sebastiano, 8. Maria dei Frari, S. Roco, S. Lorenzo, and the Jesuits (Gesuiti): all remarkable for rich marbles, or the works of Venetian masters. An intelligent Gondoller may serve as a guide--we can recommend Glusoppe Breeca, No. 34.

In the Piazza is also a loft square tower called the Gaupanile, 316 feet high, and 42 feet square, with a syramklet top, to which the ascent is made by an inclined plane. Adjoining the church is the ancient palace of the Doge, the prisons, and other public offices of the late Venetian Republic. San Marco was erected and in the part 1817, when the patriarchal seat was removed to it from San Pietro. It was founded in the year 1829 by the Doge Guistianaro Participazio for the purpose of receiving the sales of St. Marc, which had just then been translated from Alexandria by Bone the Tribune of Malaznecco, and Essico of Torcello. The Library of St. Marc is a nobig designed building, and consists of two orders—the Dorte and Ionat. The Zecca of Mint-adjoins the Library on the Mole. The Dorte of Palace, or the Palazzo Ducale, is altrasted in the astern suff of the Plazzetta. The first palace built on the spot was in 820. The was 464 stroyed in a tunult, and the Doge Pietro Ursolio built a second one is 970, which was destroyed by a great fire in 1120, and rebuilt in 1354-5 by the Doge Marino Fallero.

The Academia dello Belle Arte Islocated in the ancient Convento della Carità, and is well worth attention. The house of Titian is also of great interest, and will repay a visit. The chief Theatres are those of La Fenice and San Benedetto. The islands shout Venice, in the Lagoon, contain many buildings worth seeing. The Lido or narrow Island which makes the shore of the Adriatic, should be visited.

The price for a Gondola, one rower, for the first hour is I Zwanziger, for every subsequent hour 60 cent. There are upwards of 4,000 Gondolas at Venice. The tide rises three feet. A good gondoller serves as valet de place; ferry for crossing the Grand Canal is about id.

L'ONE D'ORO. LA POSTA.

A venerable city, situated close to the left bank of the Sesia, on the road from Turin to Milan by Novara, and containing a population of 18,200 inhabitants. Its chief objects of attraction are the Duomo, or Cathedral, the library attached to which contains a rare and valuable collection of manuscripts, the most remarkable of which are, a copy of the Gospel, written by St. Eusebins in the fourth century, and a manuscript of Angle-Saxon Poems brought, it is said, from England by Cardinal Guala, Papal legate to England in the reigns, i John and Henry III .- The readers of English history will recognise the name as mixed up with the transactions of the Barons of Runnymede in 1215; the church of St. Andrew, the Hospital, both founded by Guals; and the church of St. Christopher, which possesses some Italian frescoes of Gandenzio Ferrari, and some excellent paintings. For Railway, see pages 168 and 169.

Verona.—Stat.—Hotel La Torre de Londra.

HOTEL DUE TORRE AND HOTEL PARIEL.

An ancient city, containing about 65,000 inhabitants, connected with Venice by railway. It has a pleasant and picturesque situation, the Adige, which is crossed by four stone bridges, flowing through it, dividing the city into two parts. The appearance of the buildings is generally very tine, owing, in a great measure, to the great quantity of marble employed in their construction. The most remarkable of the ancient edifices of Verona is the amphitheatre. It is built of Verona marble, and is nearly perfect, owing to the care that has been taken of it. The Palazzo del Consiglio contains some good paintings and statues to celebrated men of Verons, among which are Pliny, the younger, Macer, Catallus, Cornelius Nepos, and Sciplone Maffel. The Museo Lapedario contains a very interesting collection of antiquities. There are a number of churches worthy of remark. The principal of which is the Cathodral, an ancient gothic building with a fine porch, the entrance to which is guarded by the two celebrated Paladins, Roland and Ohrer. It contains some good paintings; among which is an Assumption, by Titlan, and considered as one of his best works. San Zenone, an interesting edifice in the Lombard style, with a front of marble, and siles of alternate brick and marble. San Ferruo Maggiore is a fine ancient gothic building, containing some remarkable monuments, and a few good pictures. Santa Eufemia is rich in frescoes and paintings, a number of which are by Carota. It also contains some remarkable monuments, SS. Nazaro e Celso contains a great number of good paintings and frescoes. Santa Anastosia is a remarkable building, rich in paintings and afters, and some old frescoes. Verona possesses a philharmonic institution, a socicty of serionce and art, academies of painting, music, and agriculture, two libraries, a lyceum, &c. There is a tomb shown in the garden of the Ordantorrollo, said to be Romeo and Juliet's, but the real tomb was destroyed many years ago.

ISLANDS.

Capri.—Situated about 4 miles from Massa, 8 from Sorrento, and 24 from Naples; is remarkable for its picturesque scenery and salubrious air. There is no trace of volcanic formation in this island, and to this fact is attributed by many the healthiness o the climate, and the superiority of its vegetable productions; the oil, wine, and the other produce of Capri being regarded as the finest in the kingdom. Perhaps there is no spot in this neighbourhood so little known, yet so well adapted to the English taste. Here a sportsman will find abundance of quails and woodcocks twice in the year, and excellent fishing at all times—the artist, the boldest and most magnificent marine and rocky scenery-the antiquary, ruins of Roman grandeur-and the economist, cheap and excellent living. There are two very clean and decent hotels, called respectively the Vittoria, kept by Signor Pagani, and the Londra, by Signor Petagua; and were there a greater concourse of strangers, many are the small houses, now lying vacant, which could be fitted up for a trifle.

Amongst the natural curlosities of the Island ahould be mentioned the Blao Grotto, the tircen Grotto, and one recently discovered; but the lover of spiendid scenery should never leave this island without spending a day on the heights. To its other attractions may be added the peculiar character of the air, which is singularly well suited to cases of bronchties, where the soundness of the lungs can be guaranteed. Donkeys 6 car. per day, guide 6 car.

The Albanian mountains, form a most splendid view on approaching Corfu. On arrival there one may land at once without any trouble. Spanish, English, and Austrian silver money taken. Excellent roads all over the country, and plenty of horses and car-riages to be hired. The view from the top of the Citadel is magnificent, and there is a delightful evening walk along the shore past the village of Castrades, through olive and orange groves to the One-Gun-Battery, where fable and tradition say Ulysses' ship was wrecked, and transformed into the chapel-crowned inlet underneath the spectator's eye. An excursion to Pantaleone, a mountain pass 16 miles inland; there the view is superb. A drive to the village of Benitza, 8 miles distant; and a sea excursion to Govino, the old Venetian harbour; thence to ipso, with its ancient olive trees; and on to Karagol, the extremity of the bay, would each and all well repay a visit. A Greek boat costs about 12s. a-day, with four rowers. To visit the harbours on the opposite coast of Albania it is necessary to take a guardiano to avoid a quarantine of twenty-four hours on return. This costs 2s. 6d. a-day besides the expenses of the man.

Madeira is situated in 32° 37' N. latitude, and in | 17° longitude W. of Greenwich. It is distant 240 miles from Teneriffe, 360 miles from the Coast of Africa, and nearly 300 miles from the Isle of Ferro. Its greatest length is 381 English miles, its greatest breadth 12 geographical miles, and its circumterence 96 geographical miles.

Captain Marryatt writes, "I do not know a spot on the globe which so much astonishes and delights, upon first arrival, as the Island of Madelra. Perhaps he has left England in the gloomy close of the autumn, or the frigid concentration of an English winter. In a week he again views that terra firms which he had quitted with regret, and which, in his sufferings, he would have given half that he possessed to regain. When he lands upon the Island what a change! Winter has become summer; the naked trees which he left are exchanged for the most luxuriant and varied tolinge; snow and frost for warmth and splendour; the scenery of the temperate zone for the profusion and magnificence of the tropics; a bright blue sky; a glowing sun; hills covered with vines; a deep blue sea; a picturesque costume-all meet and delight the eye, just at the procise moment when, to have been landed, even upon abarren island, would have been considered a luxury.

The population of Funchal, the capital, is about 25,300 persons, numbering amongst them about 100 English families resident on the Island. The salubrity of the climate, the superior hotel and boarding-house accommodation, combined with the efficiency of the medical staff, have gained for this "fair Isle of the Seas," a world-wide reputation -the influx of visitors and invalids during the winter season, from all parts of the world, beingvery great.

Malta,-Hotels.-

MORRELLA HOTEL.

IMPERIAL HOTEL, recommended for attention. civility, and moderate charges.

Malta is distant 160 miles from Cape Passaro. the Southern point of Sicily, and 200 miles from the African coast, 220 French leagues from Marseilles, and 180 from Athens (the Pirceus).

Malta is of an irregular oval figure, about sixteen miles in length, by eight or nine in breadth, and is composed of calcareous rocks, which slope like an inclined plane, from the level of the sea towards the south and cost, where they attain the height of nearly 200 yards.

Gardens are numerous in Malta, especially towards the east. They are generally ornamented with orange and lemon trees, to which the greatest attention is paid. Beer are also to be found here in great abundance; the honey is delicious, and remains always liquid. There are numerous asses of strong breed. The sheep are very prolific, and There are about six or number about 12.000. seven thousand beeves maintained here; also, five or six thousand horses of all ruces. Besides the food produced from the soil, there are several hundred boats employed in the fisheries for the daily supply of the markets. The climate of Malta is delightful, the four seasons are regularly defined, and the air is very salubrious and healthy. The Maltese are of a mixed race, principally Italian and Arable; and their language, like themselves, is an Italian-Arable dialect, intelligible to the nations of the opposite African shore. The mercantile and higher classes speak pure Italian; English is only spoken in Valetta. The Maltese are a robust, an active, and a temperate people; but owing to a want of employment are still very poor, wasting their energies in idleness. Their condition, however, has become greatly improved since they became British subjects, new sources of industry being opened up to them, and some of them have become the best sailors in the Mediterranean.

Articles of almost every description can be obtained off. B. Hood and Co., see advertisement, and of book. Bookseller and Publisher, G. Murs, 247, Strada Reale, where travellers will find all necessary Guide Books and information connected with the Island or the continuance of their voyage.

I'MONEY .- The money is that of England, but a commission of 5 per cent is charged on exchanging English Bank notes, therefore gold should be taken in preference to notes. The Maltese sendo, 11s. 8d. English, is divided into 12tari of 20 grains each; also South American dollars of the value of 43. 2d.

The chief town of Malta is Valetta, which is built upon a tongue of land extending into a bay, and forming a splendid harlour on each side, the projecting points of which are occu-pied by forts and towers, the city itself and suburbs being surrounded by impregnable fortifications, parts of which are cut out of the solid rock. The streets of Valetta are narrow and steep; but it contains some splendld buildings, which still attest the magnificence and devotion of its former masters, the Knights of St. John, to whom the island was gifted by Charles V. after they had lost Rhodes: in 1798 they were dispossessed by the Civita Vecchia, or the old town, is situated in the centre of the Island, and is called Medina by the natives. Its situation is so high that, on a clear day, the whole island and the coasts of Sicily and Africa may be seen at the distance of about 60 miles. The catacombs are very extensive, and of great celebrity. Near the western part of the north coast is the Calle di San Psulo, or haven, where St. Paul is said to have tarried after his shipwreck, though some writers consider the island of Meleda on the Dalmatian coast to be that on which the apostle was east.

THE LEVANT.

Smyrna,-Hotel.-DES DEUX AUGUSTE .- Landlord, Mr. A. Millo.

This city is the richest and most flourishing in the Levant, possesses a population of about 130,000, and from its position at the head of the Gulf of the same name, carries on a most important traffic with all parts of the world, which with its communications with the interior, has rendered it the emporium of the Levant. It contains some wellbuilt houses, belonging chiefly to the Franks, which form spretty quarter of the town, but the streets generally, except those which are covered, are narrow and dirty. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the slope of a hill, on the top of vans. For Steamers, see page 207.

which is a ruinous castle. The Frank quarter is principally inhabited by English, French, Dutch, and Italian merchante, with their families and servants, whose persons and property are exempt from Turkish rule; and in civil, commercial, or criminal matters, they recognise no other judges than their own consuls. In the magnificent casino, are found all the principal periodical publications of Europe, and in the theatre, Italian comedies are played by an amateur company. There is a Greek college; and a gazette is published in French.

Smyrna is eight days' journey from Constantino-ple by land, and 25 days from Aleppo by the Cara-

- Athens. -- Hotels.--

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE.-Good but rather dear. Landlords, Mr. Elias Polichronopulis, and M. Yahis Adamopolis-the latter acts as Dragoman.

HOTEL DES ETRANGERS .- Good and reasonable, and situated near the palace. Proprietors, Diemetrio Pomeni, and Dyonise Dragone. This ancient city, once the most flourishing of the Grecian republics, celebrated for its feats of arms, its learning, and the perfection to which the fine arts, more especially architecture, sculpture, and painting, attained under the influence of its gonial climate and sunny skies, is now reviving mid the ruins of its former grandeur, as the capital of fadod Greece. It is situated in a plain within an amphitheatre of hills, about five miles from the north-eastern part of the coast of the Gulf of Egina. It has been almost entirely re-built-since 1834 many improvements have been made, and new and more modern edifices erected, but still a conadderable portion of the town consists of narrow tersets, with poor-looking houses. The population amounts to about 20,000, the greater number of whom are Greeks. The principal objects of attraction in Athens, are to be found in its antiquities. The Acropolis or citadel, built on a rocky eminence rising abruptly from the plane, and enclosing within its walls the remains of the Parthenon, as well as a beautiful temple of the lonic order, nearly entire. Several vestiges still remain of the splendid gateway, called the Propylom, which once adorned the entrance to the Acropolis, which was at its west end. In the lower town is a temple in the Doric style, formerly dedicated to the demigod Theseus, which has been converted into a museum. The ruins of the temple of the Olympian Jupiter; the tribunal of the Arcopagus; and other ancient structures are to be seen. The principal public buildings of Athens are, the king's palace, the royal stables, the mint, a military hospital, and a barrack.

Porto Leone (the ancient Pircous), one of the ports of Athens, is distant from the city about five miles, and between them there is an excellent. road, and coaches running at all hours.

3.150 feet above the level of the sea. A village in the valley of the same name, at the foot of Mon's Blanc, distant about fifty miles from Geneva. Diligences in the season: fares, 14 francs. Several days may be well devoted to explore the wonders of this celebrated region. The Montanvert, which can be ascended on mules, and commands a view of the Mer de Glace, ought to be the first excursion. It is an elevated pasture on the summit of a mountain under the Aiguilles de Charmoz. Half way up the ascent is an agreeable resting-place, at the fountain Caillet, beside which Florian is said to have com-menced his tale of Claudine. From this are seen to advantage the valleys of the Breven and of the Aiguilles Rouges. At the summit of Montanvert is a small building where refreshments, &c., may be had. The height of Montanvert above the valley of Chamounix is 2,565 feet. The Clacier do Bossons, which may be seen the same day, at the other end of the valley, is remarkable for the purity of the ice, and for the picturesque formation of the blocks of ice resembling a ruined temple of pyramids and arches. The Breven, on the op-posite side of the valley, 8,000 feet above the sea, affords the most magnificent view of the whole runge of Mont Blanc, with its numerous peaks covered with snow, and the glaciers pouring down into the valley. The Flegore, on the same side, commands the same view at a less elevation, and may be accomplished in half a day. The active tourist would be well repaid by a day's excursion to the Jardin, across the Mcr de Glace, 9,100 feet above the sea-a small portion of green earth, for a region of snow and ice, commanding a view of the recesses of this wonderful range of snowy peaks. From Chamountx to Martinny, by the passes of the Tete Noire or the Col de Balme, about nine librurs would be required; these roads are principleable for males only. numbers of scarcely petceptible openings, from which, at regular intervals, and with a husing sound, little explosions of gas burst forth; whilst, at the same time, a white and very delicate marly slime swells out and flows in a sluggish steam.

Bronte is a small town placed at a considerable elevation above the sea. Bronte gave the fitte of Duke to the celebrated Lord Nelson, but his estate to which the title was attached has been entirely destroyed by cruptions of Ætna, at whose base it is stuated. A finely flavoured wine is produced here, but is not much exported.

Catania, a large archiepiscopal city, with wide and straight streets, and a good harbour stands at the foot of Mount Etna. Though having suffered much from earthquakes, it yet preserves the remains of an amphitheatre, larger than the remains of the colosseum at Rome. It contains a University. a Lyceum, a Public Library, a Maseum, and other literary in titutions. The wik stuffs of Catania rival the best in the kingdom. Its population is about 42,000. The drive from Catania to Messina is one of the most beautiful in the world in scenery, far surpassing that of the Rhinc. An excellent road, close to the shore of the Mediterranean; and high up on the right are numerous towns, cities, villages, and castles, some on the very summits of the mountain, as travellers going to the scene of the present emption of Atna, near Zaffarana, should stop at the village of Ginerre, 30 m.les south of Messina, where they take mules Girg onti, an irregularly built and spiscopal city on the south-west coast, is situate on a hill 1,100 feet above the sea, not far from the shore, where it has a harbour. It has some fortifications, and about 16,000 or 17,000 inhabitants. In its neighborthood are objects calculated to excite the traveller's warnest interest, viz.: the remains of Agrigentun, consisting of the Temple of Concord, the Temple of Juno, and the rulus of the Temples of Ceres, Proscribin, Herenica, Apollo, Dian, Cestor and Pollus, Esculapius, and the Olympian Jupiter. The last was never finished, but was constructed with enormous columns 120 feet high. The pier of the harbour of Girgenti has been built from the rulus of these magnificent temples.

Marsala is a large scaport town, about twenty miles south by west of Trapani, has a large College, and 33,000 iniabitants. Its harbour is encumbered with sand; but its celebrated wines form an important article of export. There are here six wine establishments, four British, and two Stellan. Three of the British are on a large scale, and have from $4,800 to 20,000 pipes annual deposit. The world secondly established, only requires time to be equally extensive. The wines only came into repute since 1802, when Admiral Lord Nelson latros duced them for the use of the British fleet.

Messina.—Horel Victoria and de North Clean and comfortable and charges moderate, and large and fine city, and also an Episcopa. See. Contains a commercial and industripus population of 90,000 souls. It possesses one of the finest harbours in the kingdom, and one of of the best in Europe. The city has been rebuilt by an cartinquake. It has a citadel, and is otherwise stongly fortified; and its environs are the most densely inhalated and the best cultivated part of the island. The harbour is large, and the surrounding scenery exquisite. Mount Etna is about 50 miles south of Messina, and 30 north of Catania.

The Anglo-Italian Company's vessels also touch at Messina and Palermo.

Palermo.—(With Map in Special Edition.)—

THE TRINACRIA -- by Ragusco.

Palerian is a large and fine archiepiscopal city agreeably situa ed on the northern coast, commanding a beautiful sea view, and in a luxuriantly fertile and well cultivated plain called La Conca d'Oro, (the golden shell), which is enclosed on three sides by mountains, and opens on the north to a spacious bay. The houses are all flat-topped, and have balconies with glass doors instead of windows. The streets are well laid out, and nearly all terminate at the principal entrances. Several fine pablic buildings, seven squares, and fine waks; the best of which is the Marina, lying along the shore; a university, several literary establishments, on active commerce, with 150,000 inhubitants, entitle Palermo to rank among the principal cities of Eurore.

Steamers to Messina and Naples, also to Malta, Marseilles, and Liverpool.

Sciacca is a little scaport town, 32 miles went of Girgenti, built on a green hill, anides a profusion of Cachus, off which at a distance of 30 miles; a volcane from tree from the sea to a considerable height in 1833, and soon after disappeared leaving only blank in its place.

Syracuse, a fortified episcopal city on the cust court, with 16,000 inhabitants. A splendid Natural Harbeur, a Royal College, two Seminaries. a Labrary, and Museum, stand amidst the ruins of the ancient Syracusa, which cover a space of twenty, miles in circumference; and of whose five magnification cent populous districts the island of Ortygia is theonly one now inhabited. Its harbour, one of the finest in the Mediterranean, was long believed to be so choked with soul as only to admit chebooks: and brigantines, until Lord Nelson proved otherwise in 1798, when he sailed into it with his ships of war and frigates, and found excellent anchorage. The celebrated fountain of Arcthusa, which flows through the town in a stream four feet deep, has become turbid and muddy, and is used as a washing stream.

Taormina, 30 miles south of Messina. A small town in a beautiful situation on the coast.

Contains a Reman theatre cut in the rock, a maximachia, a cistern, and an aqueduct worth secting. It maintained a siege of cighty years' duration against the Saracenes. Directly above Taornina is Mola, a village of 400 inhabitants, built on the vary top of a lofty rock, perpendicular on three sides. Ten miles south is Mascali, a little village on the right of the road, beautifully located and arrequired by hills and mountains. A large and rather cheerful town, with a celebrated cathedral, much sculpture in freestone both inside and outside, and has a beautiful lantern, and some large chapels in the aisles, one particularly so, and richly ornamented. It is much injured by small houses being attached to it externally. Handsome Grand Place used for markets and bullfights. Mira flores, three miles from Burgos; the Cartuja, with its beautiful chapel and unrivalled tombs, raised by Isabella to her parents Juan II. and Isabella of Castile. There are two bridges over a small river. Correo takes 22, and the dilizence 28 hours to Madrid.

Cadiz. HOTELS:-Posada Inglesia, and also Bella Vista, Wall's Inn, 161, Calle San Servando, all poor.

A large fortified town, almost entirely surrounded by the sea. It has a very pleasant club or casino, and good clean streets. The musee contains only very poor pictures. It has also interesting fish markets, and a very fine view from the signal tower in the centre of the town. Rain water kept in tanks is the only supply, and smells bad

City generally uninteresting, but the Cathedral, which is of Moorish architecture, is one of the most wonderful in Spain. Some of the Diligences stop here. Those from Seville to Madrid stop for breakfast at the Hotel, and the traveller may hasten to the Cathedral and see it in the time allowed. The Correo from Madrid to Seville passes through Cordova in the night.

CONVEYANCE. Railway to Soville, see page 172. Gibraltar. Hotel:—Club-house Hotel.

Exchange news-room accessible. All along the coast of Spain most disagrecable to land and embark, all being done by boats, and Gibraltar as bad as any. Wondrous fortifications: permission easily got to visit the gallerles, from the signal tower of which there is a magnificent view; as also from the many other batteries. The harbour, with the coaling steamers, is interesting; as likewise the markets, with many strange varieties of fish. Oranges and other fruits very plentitul. Rain water only used here. One extensive and brautiful promonade, and a great variety of dresses, Moorish, Spanish, and British.

At Gibralter the coinage is different from other towns in Spain, a real being equal to 4d., and 12 equivalent to a deliar.

Malaga, very fine Prado with noble old trees, sountains, &c. In the Capilla de los reyes attached to the Cathedral, are the magnificent tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella, of Juana and Philip; below are their plain coffins which may be seen at the close of the afternoon service. Handsome churches, and beautiful envirous, with lofty snowy mountains about 20 miles off. The great charm and point of interest is the Alhambra, which is now, though too late, being zealously kept in repair. It is open in the forencon, and from 4 to 7 p.m., a guide and also a fee to the conservator is necessary for the first visit, but not afterwards; besides its internal architectural beauties, the views from it are fine and very interesting, commanding our Duke of Wellington's estate, the gipsy town, &c.

The Route from Gibraliar by Ronda is very grand, but is three days mule journey and not without danger; by mules from Malaga two long days; by diligence from Malaga 20 hours going and 16 hours returning, and though bad is perhaps preferable. Here as at Malaga, Madrid, Seville, and Cadiz, the peculiar style of Spanish femule beauty is striking.

Diligence to Cordova twice daily in about 30 hours.

Irun .- No good inn.

A small town near the French frontier, where passports are visé and luggage examined.

Madrid. - Stat. - 202,000. Horels: -All bad. The Fonda de la Vizcaina. is central, pretty good (perhaps the best) but dearish. The Fonda de las Penninsulares is where most foreigners go; both have table d'hôtes and telerable Val de Penas wines. La Iberia, Café Suizo. In the province of New Castille, and the capital of the kingdom, which it was declared by Philip II , from its being supposed to be in the centre of Spain. It is built in an uninviting locality, on some sandy hills upon the left bank of the Manzanares; but the view from the Queen's Palace of he Guadarrama range is very fine. Round the city the country is quite desert, except in the valley of the Manzanares, where there are some orchards and woods. The city is about 8 miles in circuit, and contains upwards of 8000 houses, with 146 churches and other religious buildings, 18 hospitals, 13 colleges, 15 academies, 15 public libraries, 6 prisons, 15 granite gates, 85 squares and plazas, 33 fountains, and 50 public wells, which supply the city with a little excellent water brought from the mountains, 30 miles distant. The modern part of the city is fine, having good houses, and straight streets paved with flint, and lined with foot-pavements. The Calle de Alcala is one of the finest streets in Europe, and is probably the only very fine street in Madrid. The Puerto del Sol is a large open area, where eight of the principal streets meet, and in which there is a great thoroughfare. Many of the convents, which gave such a gleony aspect to the streets of Madrid, in common with the other large towns of Spain, have lately been A fine old town, mands 3000 feet higher than | removed. On the south side of the palace is the royal armonry, which contains the greatest treasure of historical weapons in the world. There are three public walks: the Prado, 2 miles long, from north to south, on the east of the city, with rows of trees and several fountains; the Pases de las Delicias. along the Manzanares, on the west side of the city and the Buen Retiro gardens to the east, beyond the Prado. There are three theatres, several scientific and literary institutions; among which are the Royal Spanish Academy, containing museum of Natural History, and a few very fine pictures, the Royal Academy of History, and the Estudios Reales de San Isidro, a kind of university, which has sixteen professors. The two largest libraries are, the Royal Library, containing 200,000 volumes, some valuable manuscripts, and a rare collection of coins, illustrative of Spanish history; and the Library of San Isidro, containing 60,000 volumes. The Museo is a magnificent gallery of 2000 pictures, of which 46 are Murillo's, 10, Raffeello's, 62, Rubens', 64, Velasquez', 34, Tintoretto's, and 43, Titlan's, and contains some sculpture; to obtain admission a fee only is necessary; the New Museum was opened on the Dos de Maio, 1842, by Espartero, and has also some works of art. Bull-fights are held every Sunday and Monday during Summer, which are frequented by most classes of the population, but chiefly by young men, and are doubtless unfavourable in their influence on Spanish society.

This is the capital of the province of Seville, and an archbishop's sec, lying on the banks of the Gua lalquiver, 45 miles from the Atlantic, and 212 S.S. W. from Madrid. Seville is adorned with many fine public buildings, the most noteworthy of which are, the cathedral, supposed by some to be the largest church in the world, next to St. Peter's at Rome, partly Roman, and partly Gothic in style: it possesses a large organ of 5100 pipes, and a Moorish steeple of curious workmanship, consisting of three towers with galleries and balconies, surmounted by a giralda or weathercock, and it is said to be 350 feet high, which be sure to ascend; a fine public square, in the midst of which is a beautiful fountain; the splendid palace of the Archbishop; the royal palace called the Alcazar, some parts of which are as fine as the Alhambra, one mile in extent, and flanked by large square towers. built with stones brought from the aucient temple of Hercules; the Exchange, a square building of the Tuscan order, each side of which is 100 feet long. and three stories high, where the records of the Spanish navigators are kept; the tobacco manufactory a large building with twenty courts, erected in 1757, at a cost of £330,000. There is also a large foundry and artillery depot. The university contains nine colleges; and there are 120 richly endowed Seville contains a charming cassing Hospitals. English and French papers, &c.; the Cass del Ayuntamento (town house); fine old Moorish building ; a beautiful modern palace of the Duke de Montpensier, some choice Murillosin the musée, and good paintings in the convent of La Caridad. The river Guadalquiver is nearly equal to the Thames here, and much superior to the Clyde, while the traffic on it is small. Formerly, Seville had an immense commerce, having been the principal entrepôt of the South American trade; but its principal trade now-s-days consists of the export of oranges. The river is crossed by an iron bridge, and on the other side is the suburb of Triano. where was the house of the Inquisition. The neighbouring country is very fertile, producing wine.com

CONTINENTAL ROUTES.

Bring desirous of making BRADSHAW'S CONTINENTAL RAILWAY GUIDE every way suitable for the instruction and amusement of Travellers, as well as with a view of pointing out to them Routes of the most approved and agreeable character, we have determined to give in our future Special Editions brief but interesting particulars in reference to the Routes most useful to be followed in traveiling through the various countries. We commence with-

ROUTE 1.

A Route through Switzerland.

We may first premise that the route given underneath, applies to travellers entering Switzerland rom Freiburg-In-Breisgau, at Schaffhausen, and leaving it at Basle.

FREIBURG-IN-BREISGAU TO SCHAFFHAUSEN, BY THE HOLLENTHAL . - The distance from the former to the latter place is about 50, or perhaps 52, English miles; and the mode of conveyance is by diligence, which performs the journey direct in about ten or twelve hours. The route is accomplished through the charming valley of the Hollenthal, or Infernal Valley, which presents the appearance, at its opening, of a flat and fertile plain, enclosed amid sloping and sylvan hills. Nearing the ascent, its original width becomes slowly contracted; and at about 42 miles from Schaffhausen, assumes a magnificently beautiful shade of romantic grandeur. Its woods rich in foliage, cover the steep sides, from which project out sharpened fragments of rock rugged and naked, having running at their base the Dreisam, whose banks are verdant with turf, and studded with mills. The scenery here will impress the mind of the tourist as partaking of a majestic wildness, blended with a picturesque beauty; STEIG and HIESCHAPRONG are the spots most remarkable for the exhibition of this wild and rugged grandeur. On the journey we pass Buac, remarkable from Moreau's retreat, in 1796. Ninetyfour years previous to this Marshal Villars was deterred from attempting this pass, saying that he was not dare-devil enough. On our way we meet STEIG, a post station, where the traveller may obtain good accommodation, on reason this terms. Here a steep alone of the road leads the tourist out of the Hollensteig; and on leaving it, he parts with the finest At this juncture an extra horse is reacenery. At this juncture an extra horse is re-quired for he ascent of the Hollensteig, for which if. lake, must be paid. Opening in the distance is hours in the transit. A very fair new carriage.

elevated position of that part of the country. Passing Lenzkirch, and Bondorf, (nineteen miles from which is the magnificent Benedictine Abbey of St. Blaize,) we arrive at the top of the ascent, whence may be had a magnificent view of the Lake of Constance. Close by is the Castle of Hohenlupfen; and a little further on, after passing Stublingen. we cross a stream, and journeying on a distance of 114 miles, we enter Schaffillusex.—For a description of which, see page 353.

SCHAPFH LUSEN TO ZURICH, BY EGLISAU. - Distance, twenty-eight miles; the mode of conveyance is by diligence, which makes the journey in about four to six hours. Hearing the roar of the Rhine Fall, and traversing a small portion of the Baden territory, we arrive at EGLISAU. -Situated on the Rhine, about 13 miles from Schaffhausen, and containing about 1700 inhabitants. The scenery of the passage of the Rhine at this place is very romantic. The water flows between hills covered with trees, and is crossed by an embowered wooden bridge. We next meet, at a distance of about four miles, Bulace, a town of 5,000 inhal itants, having some good inna. From here a mignificent view of the Alps, with their tops crowned by eternal snows, may be had. The descent to Zurich is very picturesque and romantic, parsing through beautifully laid out gardens and vineyards, interspersed with beautiful villus and cottages. About two miles to the right is the hill of Weid, whence a rich view of the town and neighbourhood may be enjoyed. After this, nothing worth special notice presents itself." until our arrival at Zunicu, described at page

ZURICH TO LUCKRING, ACROSS THE ALBIS, WIA HAUSEN.-Distance, 33 English miles,-The lourney is made by diligence, occupying about eight hours in the transit A very fair new carriage-

Though the road is very zigzag and circuitous, yet the ascent can be accomplished per carriage with two horses. All along the route a very beautiful view of the Alpine chain, and of the greater portion of Switzerland, can be enjoyed. After skirting the Lake for a short distance, it crosses the Sihl, and wends to the inn of the Albis, where the tourist can get well accommodated, and obtain a magnificent prospect. Above the inn about one mile, is a height commanding an excellent wlew of the entire Zürlehsee. Situated at the foot is the vale of Sihl, which is beautiful in its wooded slopes and picturesque scenery, and remarkable as having been the favourite sanctum of the pastoral poet Gessner. On the south is seen the Lake of Turl; not far from which is the Church of Kappel, where Zwingli died. Farther off is the Lake of Zug, behind which rise aloft in sublime grandeur Mounts Pilatus and Righi. At this point the horizon, reflecting the snowy chain of the Alps from Sentes to the Jungfrau, presents a remarkably brilliant appearance. Attaching the summit, 2,500 feet above the sea and 1,000 feet above the lake, we descond, touching on the right the small Lake of Yurl. After traversing the new road along the westorn slope of the Albis, we arrive at HAUSEN. Near this place is Albisbrunn - a Water-cure establishment—where general travellers can board and lodge for 6 or 7fr. a day. From here the Bernese Alps can be seen to advantage.

HAUSEN.—A village of 6,000 inhabitants, painfully remarkable as being the scene of a sanguinary conflict, in which brother met brother in hostile combat, and, in the name of religion, sacrificed each other in remorseless fury. Here Zwingil fell on the battle-field. A monument is now creeted on the spot where he fell, bearing on its entablature a Latin and German inscription. We next arrive at

RIFFERSCHWIL—Lucern to Knonau, 10 English miles; Knonau to St. Wolfgang, 63 miles. A good road to Zug, the Righl, St. Wolfgang, 63 sliker-brucke, Brucke, Dicrikon, and Ebikon; whence passing the monument of the Swiss guards, we enter

LUCREME—described at page 350.—From Lucerne the tourist may proceed per steamer to FLURLEM, distance about twenty-four English miles; the voyage is made in about three hours; see Alphabetical list of steamers. The fare varies from 1 franc to 4 francs, and the best generally touches at Weggis. The journey, though short, will interest. The lake, very interesting in its natural proportions, is also singularly so by its historical recollections. Its shores witnessed the memorable events that guaranteed freedom to Switzerland and built anto Liberty a home and a sanctuarry.

Leaving Lucerne—starting place near to the Hof Brücke—we soon hall Meggenhorn, and sail along farough undulating hills, rich in verdure, and studded with picturesque villas and cottages—a scene beaufial in itself, but shadowed into a dark grandeur by Mount Phartus. Further up, near the Bay of Rusmacht, to the right, is the Castle of Neu Habbburg. At the ether side of the bay appears the stupendous mass of the Righi, whose sides are studded with forests, at the base of which He fields, gardens, and cottages. Athwart the promotion of Tanzenburg the village of Weggie is seen; there tourists anxious to ascend the Righi disembark. To facilitate the tourist in his ascent, we here notice the ASCENT TO THE RIGHT FROM WEGGIS .- The ascent presents many features of inducement not generally found surrounding other pleasure trips. The ease of the ascent, and the facility for obtaining accommodation at every stage, combined with the sublimity of the scene from the summit, render the excursion desirable and delightful. The visit should be made in order; and for this purpose the traveller should set out early, as, if he do not, it will be impossible for him to reach Staffel or Culon in time to witness the sun set-one of the most glorious scenes ever written on the picture page of nature ; as any one who has ever beheld from the Righi the gorgeous luminary, bathed in floods of light and lustre, sinking calmly and silently, yet regally and grandly, into the golden ocean of his western dominions, can attest. All the interesting objects can be visited in a day, and are particularised below for the convenience of the traveller. A mulc-path leads up the ascent, commanding a constant view of the lake. It first passes the Heiligen Kreutz, after which we next come to the Cold Baths, where we find a wooden inn, a small Chapel of the Virgin, and the Spring of the Sisters' Fountain. The first crucifix on the Kussnacht side is met at Leeboden, and a walk or ride through a succession of rich pasturage, intersected by beautiful and romantic paths, brings the tourist to the Righi Staffel, an elevated plain or platform chosen for viewing the effects of sunset. There the traveller can rest and enjoy the unrivalled scenery before him, after which he finds a very good inn, where he can get comfortable accommodation. Half-au-hour's walk further on brings him to Kulm, the most celebrated summit, where is also a large and good Hotel. From the Kulm is the best view. The Kesishodenboch is famed in the ascent to the Culm. Another path branches off from Leeboden towards the right, which leads the tourist to pass the following interesting objects:-the Lieterli, the Kawseli, and the Kaltenbud or Schwesterbrunnen. From the north side very good views are obtainable of the Lake of Zug and of the town of Arth. On the west Lucerne can be distinctly seen; whilst on the south the objects seen are the Lakes of Alpnach and Saren, the Stanzer and Buochserhorn Mountains, behind which are The Alps, Berne, Unterwalden, and Uri-an unbroken reef-with their glaciers, embracing the Engelberger, Rothstock, and the Bristerscoek, central between which and the Scelisber runs the road of St. Gothard. On the east, the Alpine chain is seen to stretch along the horizon.

Hesuning our journey towards Fluellen, the steamer proceeds through the Nosea, immediately after passing which, we find ourselves shut out by high mountains. Running through the oral basis called the Gulf of Buochs, we touch at Beckenreld, dersan, and Brunnen, opposite which we chaige our entire ocurse and sail along the Bay of tiel, for Grutil, a short mile or two from which it Tall' Chapel. After this, we arrive at FLUELIEN-described at page 347.-From Fluel- through a delightful valley, at either side of which len we proceed to visit the l'ass of St. Gothard, per Altorf; Burglen, birth-place of William Tell; Amsteg, where there are good inns; and Wasen, a village of about 6000 inhabitants, on the left bank of the Ruys. Close by here is a toll, where each tourist is charged a small sum, equal to about one halfpenny English, and each carriage from 11 to 2 frs. The first part of the way to the St. Gothard is rich in beautiful scenery; but from Wasen, up towards the Goschenen, there is an aspoct of savage grandeur, not at all diminished by the narrow ravine of the Schellinen, circled for nearly four miles by stupendous rocks of granite.

THE DEVIL'S BEIDGE.-The stern and savage grandeur of this portion of the Pass far excels that of all the rest. The fentful gorge shoots out a lofty cataract, the fall of which is awfully majestic; its sheets of water rolling down in sublime grandeur, lash the opposite sides in broken fury, and lave with foam the surrounding space, until again dashed back and broken into spray. Two bridges span the torrent. The Devil's Bridge and the defile of Schollinen were the scenes of an obstinate contest during the campaign of 1799, when, on the 14th of August, the French columns, under Lecourbe and Loison, drove the Austrians up the valley of the Reuss. Just above the bridge, the road passes through a tunnel cut through the rock, called "Hole of the Emerging from this, the traveller finds himself in the beautiful valley of the Urseren, which forms a deep contrast to the savage gorge just left behind. About one mile further brings us to Andermatt .- A small village with about 700 inhabitants, and the chief place of the valley, 4.450 feet above the level of the sea. cheese, and splended trout can be had here. Behind Andermatt a bridle-path leads over the Oberalp. and by its take to Disentis, in the Grisons.

Taking a direct road from Andermatt, we arrive at Hospital. From here a mule-path over the Furca leads to the glacier of the Rhone, (a journey of about six hours,) whence the Hospico of the Grimsel can be reached in about two hours.

From Hospital the journey to the Grimsel can be made in about six hours. A splendid panoramic view of the Grimsel, and of the adjacent peaks and laciers, can be enjoyed from the summit of the Sidelhorn, on the right of the path to the Furca.

FROM GRIMSEL TO THE GRINDELWALD, MIG MEY-BINGEN - Distance, forty-one English miles. -Leaving Grimsel, we pass through a forest of fir and arrive at Handek, where we can find comfortable refreshment. This spot is situated a few yards' distance from the Falls of the Asr—the noblest cateract in Switzerland. From here a short walk of about an hour brings us to GUTTANEN.-A small and retired village. seding on, we enter a ravine created by the expansion of the Im Boden; and going further, we enter the hasin valley of Upper Rasii. Meeting the vale of Hail, and crossing the Asr, we arrive at Mar-Eiseky described at page 352 From this place to Orindetwald the distance is about 21 English miles, and the journey is accomplished in about sure. The journey is made at first by a path is heard resounding the cadence of beautiful waterfalls. Passing the Baths of Rosenlaul, where we find a few rade tuba serving as boths, the waters of which are mineral, we reach the Glacier of Rosenlaui, white as snow, and then the Scheideck, the ascent of which is rather easy. From here we reach Grindelwald in about three or four hours.

From Grindelwald we move on, across the Wengern Alps, to Lauterbrunnen-a village containing about 1400 inhabitants. The houses are all wooden. and broadly scattered over the banks of the torrent. It is 2450 feet above the level of the sea, and buried, as it were, among precipices. The Staubbach fall of water is worth seeing. It is about one mile from the inn, and is one of the loftiest in Europe. Visiters should not leave here without exploring the upper valley of Lauterbrumen. Very little of interest is to be met with on the route to interlachen-described at page 350.

INTERLACHEN TO THUN .-- A good carriage-road exists by the southern shere of the lake. Thejourney by water is preferable. A diligence conveys the tourists to Neuhaus, where the steamer takes them up for Thun. On the voyage up the lake we see the village of Merligen, at the rear of which is the Juster Thal. Sailing by the rocky promontory called the "Nose," we proceed to pass the Castle of Spietz, founded, it is said, by Attila, As we get late Thun, we find the banks on the south side studded with picturesque villas and romantically-planned gardens-whilst on its northern side are uninteresting hamlets and rugged scenery.

THUN - described at page 353. - The distance from Thun to Berne is about 17 English miles, and the journey is made by diligence or cotturier, which costs 17 or 18 frs., unless it be a return one. when 11 or 12 frs. suffice. The road is an excellent one, and on a clear day commands a very fine view of the Alps. The scenery of the valley of the Assis also beautiful, and will delight the tourist. The principal place met on the route is the little village of Munsingen, only remarkable as having been the spot where the oligarchical rule was overturned in 1849, and a new constitution adopted. The Stockhorn is also passed, and presents an agreeable

Brane-described at page 346 We leave Berne through the Gate of Mora, and proceeding through a very fertile though rather commonplace country, we arrive at Neuericck. Here we cross the stream separating the two cantons, Berns and Freiburg. We get into the new road at this point, after crossing the bridge. The way leads along the bank of the river, through beautiful scenery. Before cutering Freiburg, the view is impressive in the extreme. Its picturesque beauty is deeply reflective of soleum and romantic gran-deur, as, rounding the hill leading into the valley of the Saarine, the venerable battlements, capped with innumerable towers, burst upon the vision, revealing the deep garge of the opposite side. Close to the summit of the hill is the large old building once the Jesuits' Pensional; near it the Jesuite College, the Tower, and Church of St. Nicholes which the traveller enters

FREIBURG-described at page 347,-We leave this place by diligence, and proceed through a fairly interesting country, until we arrive at

BULLE, about 15 miles from Vevay .- Bulle is a very industrious town, containing 1600 inhabitants. It is half way between Freiburg and Vevay. From Bulle we proceed again by diligence along the road skirting the west base of the Moleson, and passing Chatel St. Denis, remarkable for its picturesque beauty and elevated castle on the left bank of the Vevayse. A very good road leads us, by an easy descent, to

VEVAY-described at page 353. - From Vevay to Martigny, by Montreux, Villeneuve, Aigle, and Bex. the donrney is made by diligence. Leaving Vevay, the first object of interest met with is the Tour de Peibz - a small town, built in 1239 by Count Peter of Savoy. It contains the ruins of a fortified castle, and is about 1 mile from Vevay und 21 from

CLARENS.—This spot must ever be associated with sentiment and song, as described by Rousseau in Nouvelle Heloise. From here a splendid view of the lake and valley of the Rhone, and of the opposite shore, can be had. Our own Byron has also immortalised it in a poem, in a part of which he sings-

Twas not for fiction chose Rousseau this spot. Peopling it with affections; but he found It was the scene which passion must allot To the mind's purified beings."

· Here juiting rocks, towering ruggedly from the banks of the lake, supplant the gorgeous scenery of hills and vine-clad undulations that characterise and adorn its banks all through from Geneva.

Montreux.-Here there are one or two good tuns. The climate, owing to the sheltered position of the place, is healthy and mild, rendering the Village a delightful winter quarter for invalids unable to cross the Alps. From the eminence on which it is built very good views can be commanded; and under the rock, on which the parish church is erected, there is a magnificent grotto "adorned with incrustations of mosses, stalactites, "and other concretions, called Confette di Tivoli. Two miles beyond Montreux is the celebrated Castle of Chillon. It communicates with the road by a wooden bridge, and stands solitary and alone . -a striking monument of fendal despotism. It is s building of the thirteenth century, and owes its origin to Amedeus IV. of Savoy. Byron has consecrated it as a part of history for ever, in his cele-brated poem, "The Prisoner of Chillon," in which he thus apostrophises it :-

"Chillon! Thy prison is a holy place. And thy sad floor an altar; for 'twas trod Intil his very steps have left a trace.

White as it ste cold pavement were a sod,
By Bounivard! May none those marks efface! For they appeal from Tyranny to God." Visite the It is built on the eastern extremity beyond which is seen the Suspension Bridge, over of the Lake of Geneva, and contains about 1500 inhabitants. Here the road leaves the borders of the lake, and enters the valley of the Rhoue. diligence or railway takes us on, passing l'Aigle, to liex .- A village on the road to the Simplon, containing about 4000 inhabitants, and only remarkable for its salt mines and works; situated in the valley of La Gryonne, about three miles from Lex, from which there is an excellent carriage-road through picturesque and delightful scenery, to the mines. Pensions here per day, 4fr. 50c. Bridge of St. Maurice.—This bridge connects the cantons of Vand and Vallais. Immediately beyond it, on the left bank of the Rhone, is the old town itself, embedded among mountains.

St. MAURICE contains about 11,000 inhabitants. and derives its name from the traditional surmise that, by order of Maximilian, the Theban Legion under St. Maurice were put to death in 302 because they would not apostatize from the ('hristian faith. The tourist who visits St. Maurice should make it a point to see the Abbey, a building of the fourth century. Its objects of attraction are the Museum of Ancient Art-a vase of Saracen execution, presented by Charlemagne—a golden crozier of a spirelike form, exquisitely carved-and a second one, presented by Bertha, Queen of Burgundy.

Leaving Sr. Maurice, we can see the Bath-House of Savoy. It is built on the right bank of the Rhone, over a sulphureous spring. We also see rising far above the road the Hermitage of our Lady of the Rock. Passing on for about seven miles, we see the celebrated waterfall of the Sallenches, the fall of which is about 120 feet. Crossing the stream of the Trient, as it descends from the Tête Noire, and meeting the Castle of La Batie

MARTIGNY- described at page 351 .- The distance from Martigny to Chamounix is about twenty-three or twenty-four miles, and may be accomplished in from nine to eleven hours by mule or foot. road commands a very good view of Mont Blanc. The path from Martigny leads over the Forciaz. The hamlet of Trient lies to the left far deep in the valley, beautifully situated among meadows. From here the journey begins to be accomplished through the forest of the Forciaz, emerging up the valley of the Trient, and crossing the pulverised excrescences of the winter floods, opposite the forest pointing to the Col de Balme. After climbing up a fatiguing ascent, the traveller enters on the pasturages and farm-houses of Herbageres. From here the ascent is rether slow and facile to the top; where bursts upon the astonished vision one of the most glorious scenes ever painted by the hand of Almighty intelligence on the large volume of nature. Mont Blanc, reposing in the vale of Chamounix, surrounded by the needle-peaked La Tour, l'Argentière, Verte, de Dru, Charmoz, and Midi, each of which is separated by its own polished glaciers, reflecting back the mighty proportions of their giant monarch, appears like a model Atlas bearing heaven on his shoulders. At his feet lies the vale, and at its extreme point the Col de Vosa. To the right are the Algailles Rouges, whilst beyond them, enclosing the valley, stretches the Brevent, to the rear of which is see the Buet. The scone, after being viewed, will remain impressed on the mind for ever. Its gorgeous grandeur, rugged majesty, and builliant scenery, can never be forgotten. Descending, we pass the source of the Arve, and traverse the fine pasturage of Charamilian to the village of La Tour, a little below which the path meets the road to Chamounix by the Tête Noire. To reach Chamonix by the Tête Noire pass, one of the most strikingly beautiful in Switzerland, we leave the preceding route at the village of frient, and crossing the river Trient, turn to the right, through a magnificent pine forest (Sayins); the river rushing madly over the rocks between the road and the precipitious Mont de bel Olseau, which nearly overhangs it. distance of one league, we arrive at the excellent mountain Iun, de la Tête Noire, situated on the angle of a precipice, some 1200 feet above the meeting of the waters Trient and Eau Noir. Here we must look at the village of Finshauts, just across the deep gorge, 6000 feet high, on the side of the mountain, after which it is called, and watered by tive or six cataract rills, which in the distance look like eliver cords. On the sides of the hills, whereever it was possible, the rocks have been converted into fraitful fields, by means of walls and terraces filled with earth. Leaving the hotel, we pass through the Roc Perce, a short tunnel, and then again we see the deep gorge of the Eau Noir, below us 1000 fect, and the verdant and beautiful Mont Loriaz dbove. We then pass on to la porte Chaletard - all that now remains of the ancient fortress, built to defend this frontier pass. Soon after we see the cascade de la Barberine, 300 feet high, from Mont Taunevergis; and then passing by the village of Valorsine, the Aiguille de l'Orient, and Mont Buet; were join the Col de Balme route at the village of Argentierres, the frontier custom house of the kingdom of Sardinia.

CHAMOUNIX-described at page 346 .-- The distance from here to Geneva is about 52 English miles, and the journey is performed by mule or charg-banc to St. Martin, thence by diligence to Geneva, and the time occupied is nine or ten hours. Leaving the village, we proceed about a league and crossing the Arve below the Glacier of Bossons, we follow the road to the right bank of the stream for about a mile, when, if it so suits, we can turn off and visit the Cascade du Dard, and the ruins of the Pelérins, recently destroyed by an eboulement. Passing numerous torrents, we traverse a valley, arrive at Les Montets through some meadows and leading out of the village of Les Ouches. Montets, Mont Blanc appears brillient in the extreme. Crossing Pont Pelissier, we reach

SERVOZ-We emerge from here through a forest to the road, and proceed through Chefe to the valley of the Arre, a little at this side of St. Martin, Proceeding across the bridge of St. Martin, we reach SALÉRWERE—A small town about 36 or 37 miles from Geneva, containing 2100 inhabitants. From the bridge we enjoy one of the best Alpine risws of Mount Blanc. On coming within a short distance of Magian, the road nears Nant d'Arpenaz, whe of the highest waterfails in Savoy. Outside the Mortine, supporting the snow-capped summit of the Magian, where the precipices retire a little to the Back. The scene, after being viewed, will releft; and at the summit of the mountain, 900 feet main impressed on the mind for ever. It gorgeous above the valley, is the Grotto of Balm, approached grandeur, rugged majesty, and brilliant scenery, by a mule-path. Proceeding on through a narrow can never be forgotten. Descending, we pass the valley we reach

CLUSES—A small village containing about 2006 inhabitants, and famous for its watchmaking trade. It was burned lown in 1843, but has since been rebuilt. Crossing the Arve by a stone bridge, we leave Cluses and pass the villages of Vangter and Scionzier, shortly after arriving at Bonneville—A small place containing about 2000 inhabitants.

NANGY .- A small village.

CHESSE.— Before arriving here, and on reaching Annemasse, the tourist's passport is examined, and if found rariet, no trouble is eigen in reference to the baggage. Passing for some miles through a road lined with neat gardens and cottages, we arrive at.

GENEVA.—See page 348.—From here we set out for Lausanne. The journey can be made by diligence or steamer daily. Leaving Geneva, we pass throughes country studded with pictureaque vilias and neatly laid out gardens. There is acarely one spot in Europe presents so many attractive features, is reference to situation and beauty, as the shores of the lake. Passing Versoix, now an inconsiderable village, we arrive at COPPET.—A small village containing about 700 inhabitants, and possessing no objects of interest, save its chateau, once the residence of Madame de Stael.

NYON.—A town containing about 3000 Inhabitants, built on an eminence, but possessing no objects worthy of notice.

ROLLE.—A small village surrounded by hills studded with vineyards.

Morors.—From here to Lausanne the journey may be made by railway. A small town, with $600 inhabitants. Adjoining its Fort is the venerable old Castle of Wufflens, said to have been built by Queen Bertha. Before entering Lausanne, the view of the town is very beautiful indeed. As the antrance of the suburbs is the village of outchy, where we find an inn, in which Lord Byron wrote the "Prisoner of Chillon," finishing the poem is two days, in June 1816, being detained at the inn by severe weather. Passing through the Promenade of Montbenon, we enter

Journeying through the small plain of Taverney, we pass through a magnificent defile, and see the Birs foaming at the bottom, overshadowed by cliffs and firs: after which we arrive at MOUTIERS .- The village contains about 1,250 inhabitants, and derives its name from an aucient minister of St. Germanus.

Coursenderin.—Passing Delémont and St. Jacob, we enter

Basks, whence we proceed home through France.

ROUTE 2.

Martigny to Milan, by Sion, Brieg, Domo d'Ossola, and the Passage of the Simplon.

(Distance 179 English miles.)

PASSPORTS.-Tourists Intending to cross the Simplon should have their passports vise by the Sardinian Minister at Geneva or Lausanne, unless British subjects with Foreign-Office passports; and in all cases by the Austrian Authorities in the last country in which they have resided.

CONVEYANCES. — Diligences run daily to Milan, making the journey in 58 or 60 hours, and making

Briog a sleeping-place.
Quitting Martigny, we proceed for a short time through sterile rocks and mountains. Passing Reddos, the aspect of the country altogether changes -the luxuriant pasturages, rich vineyards, picturesque villages with churches, and the ruins of ancient castles, &c., now mot with, presenting a deep contrast to the barren ruggedness just left behind. And, as we approach Sion through the valley of the Rhone, we behold nothing but scenes on which the eye loves to rest and memory to linger. The low grounds intersected with rivers, the adjacent mountains studded with villas and chastelywrought buildings, and the extreme horizon bounded by the Alpine heights-all form a group scene deeply touch ng.

Sion .- Is the ch'ef town of Vallals, with a population of three thousand souls. It stands on the declivities of three hills, and possesses three extensive easies, built on each declivity. The third easie, called Tourbillon, contained portraits of the bishops of Sion from the year 300; it is now in ruins. Here we find several Roman antiquities, one of which is a half-effaced inscription to the memory of Augustus, near the door of the cathe-dial. The landscape painter will find the castles of Sion and Montargia seated on rocks above the town to the right, special objects of interest. The Hispital is worth a wait. Leaving Sion, we proand throws a beautiful country, rich in rural BIENNE TO BASLE .- Conveyance by railway, also | beauty, and fruitful of vineyards and pasture-lands . irrigated by the Rhone.

Sierre.—A pretty little village. The people here, and indeed throughout the Vallais, speak German. Quitting Sierre, we cross the Rhone, traverse the forest of Fuiges, and pass Leuk, nine miles above which are the Baths, worth seeing-the gorge of the Dala opening behind it. Travellers in carriages usually turn off here to visit the Baths, and ascend the lofty and sterile Mount Gemmi.

TOURTEMAGNE .- Remarkable only for the cascade behind it. The approach to this place presents us with a view of the entire Alpine chain, connecting the Simplon and St. Gothard. From here wo drive to Visr .- It is seated on the banks of the Vispa river as large as the Rhone. It was once the residence of very many noble families, whose stately palaces are now in ruins. It is now a miserable village. From here we proceed to Brieg, passing Glys, where the ascent of the Simplon begins. From Visp to Lermatt, 30 mile, mule-path.

Visce, on Viesen, very near to Visp, from whence the traveller may diverge to visit the Eggishorn and the Alersch Glacier, and obtain one o the finest views in the Alps.

BRIEG.-Is a small town, containing about eight hundred inhabitants, and is the usual restingplace for travellers crossing the Simplon. only buildings worth notice are the Chateau of Baron Stockalper and the Jesuits' College. At this town the Simplon road leaves the valley of the Rhone. The distance from Brieg to Domo d'Ossola is about fourteen leagues or forty-two English miles. It takes seven hours to reach the Simplon. and three or four to Domo d'Ossola. Before describing the ascent, it may be well to observe that the route over the Simplon was planned by the Emperor Napoleon in 1801, immediately after the sanguinary battle of Marengo. It was constructed at the united expense of France and Italy. On the side of the Haut Vallais, the work was carried on by M. Céard, representing France; and by Giovanni Fabroni on the part of Italy. Commenced on the Italian side in 1800, and on the Swiss side, in 1801, the work occupied six years in completion, giving employment to over 30,000 men. This road is the only one over the Alps, where human skill and labour have succeeded in hewing out a practicable passage for waggens and artillery. Between Brieg and Sesto, it passes over 611 bridges, besides the colossal constructions of masonry, consisting of ten galleries of solid stone. and twenty houses of refuge. It is twenty-five feet broad. It cost £5000 per mile.

From Bases to the left is the road to the Rhone Glacier, and footpath to the Hospital on the St. Gothard-road, and to Meyringen, by the Grimsel Beresal .-- It consists of two buildings connected by a roof. Passing this refuge, we see a splendid variety of Alpine flowers growing amid verdant lawns of turf; and crossing the bridges of Orsback and Saltine, (close to the bottom is a magnificent cascade,) we enter a grotto, leaving on our left the Kaltwasser glacier, from which falls four cascades, whose waters dash themselves into the chasms below. Following out our ascent, we reach an eminence over which nature seems mourning in desolate abandonment. No tree, no shrub, no green spot greets the vision; all is melancholy and awful desolution. Close to this desolate spot is the glacier grotto, to the right of which is the Hospice, inhabited by monky belonging to Mount St. Bernard. Here there is no stabling or fodder for horses, but travellers are very comfortably accommodated.

An extensive valley of considerable width occuples the sammit of the Simplen; all about is devoid of picturesque interest. A gentle descent brings us to the seventh refuge, situated about three miles from the village of the Simplon.-Travellers should take care not to be imposed on by representations to the effect of there being no horses. A wooden sabot should also be procured, to save the cross drag of the carriage, as the descent is steep and rapid. As we descend, on the right are lofty barren rocks, and roaring torrents on the left. Nine leagues from Brieg and five from Domo d'Ossola, we reach the Galleric d'Algaby, the first excavation on the Italian side. The road passes through this gallery; and sloping gradually, enters the Gorge of Gondo-the grandest but yet most awfully savage in the Alps. Crossing the Doveria by a wooden bridge, we next pass over the Francinodi waterfall; and after wending through several zigzag turnings, we arrive at Gondo, and leave the Vallais. This village consists of a few miserable hats congregated round a tower seven stories high. A short walk down the right of the torrent leads us to the gold mine of Zurichbergen. We enter Italy a short time before our arrival at the village of ISELLA.—Here the passports and luggage of travellers are examined. This part of the road, for nearly eight miles, was destroyed by the tempests in 1834 and 1839. The road altogether, on the Sardinian side of the Pasa is in very bad repair. At this point of the journey the scenery assumes a different aspect. In place of naked rog-gedness it puts on green foliage, and shrouds the road with the shade of the sombre fir, that clothes the tips of the mountains. The last gallery of the pass is traversed previous to meeting Crevola, at Dono D'Ossora. -- A small Italian town, remarkable for its grotesque appearance and its idle lazzaroni. only. From here the ascent of the Simplen occuples seven or eight hours, and twelve or thirteen from here to Milan.

Vogogxa.-Is a small village, with the valley of Anzasca, leading up to Monte Rosa, opening up before it; a scene worthy the tourisi's special notice.

ORNAVASCA .- Near here are the white marble quarries, from which stone for the Milan Cathedral was procured. At Gravellons we cross a large bridge, and following the road leading up its left-bank, we arrive, in a couple of hours, at the lake of Orta, one of the most beautiful on the Italian border. Lake Maggiore, and Isola Madre-the most northern of the Borromean Islands-burst on the vision here with great effect. Not far beyond this place will be found the rose granite quarries; the colour is produced, it is said, by the influence of the felspar in it, which mineral abounds here in elegant flesh-coloured crystals.

BAVENO,-Close to the lake. Diligences from here to Milan in 9 hours.

BOATS .- Parties wishing to visit the Borromean Islands, will here find boats at the following rate:-For two hours, with two rowers, 5 fr., and 1 fr. per hour after; an hour once commenced is counted as full Asses may also be hired here at 4 frs. each, t ascend the Mont Monterone, towering in the rear of the village, and commanding a magnificent panoranic view of the Alpa. The top is 4,360 feet above the level of the sea. The descent may be made by the opposite side to Orta, accomplishing it in three hours, and returning to Omegna in about two hours' walk.

CUSTOM-HOUSE OFFICERS are constantly met with along the western shore of the lake as far as Sesto. At Sesto search is made on travellers landing of embarking for Austria or Switzerland. The release of baggage costs & fr.

The Borrowean Islands. - We embark at Baveno on the lake Manhiore for these islands. Travellers proceeding to Milan by carriage, should send it round to meet them at Stresa. Each morning the steamer navigating the lake, passes near the islands on sout age to Sesto, and touches there again on its return in the afternoon. This enables the tourist to see them; and if he will leave Baveno early, he can reach Besto.

PALENZA.—The steamer calls here for passengers every morning at about half past 8 o'clock, and a boat plies between here and Baveno.

LAGO MAGGIORE. - This lake, on which these

9 broad, and towards its centre is about eighty fathoms deep. It presents an enchanting picture. Forest trees, olives, and vineyards, interspersed with picturesque hamlets adorn and ornament its banks; whilst from out its placid bosom rise three small islands, two of which contain beautiful palaces and gardens-the property of the Borromean family. Passing Isola del Pescatori, Isola Bella is met with. This island is looked upon as the most beautiful of the three. It is a magnificent garden, consisting of ten terraces, the lowest of which rests on piers shooting into the lake, studded with beautiful sculpture, lined with cypresses, and rising like a pyramid, one above the other. A very great variety of fruits and flowers grows on them, such as the orange, citron, myrtle, &c. The Palace is worth seeing, and contains many very excellent paintings. We also find a very good inn on the island.

The Isola Madre rears a good many rare plants. and it will be found worth a visit.

After visiting the islands, the tourists embark for Sesto. Before reaching Arona we meet, a short mile distant, approached through a beautiful country, the magnificent statue of Charles Borromeo, wrought in bronze, by Zonelli, and measuring, with Pedestal, 106 ft. in height. The statue is erected on a hill overlooking Arona - A small old town, containing about 4,400 inhabitants, built on the margin of the lake, and having the Simplon road running through a part of it. At the lower end of the lake a splendid view of the snowy Monte Rosa is enjoyed; and a ferry-boat carries us over the Tecino into the Austrian-Lombardo territory met with at SESTO CALENDE.-Here passports are strictly examined; and no traveller is permitted to pass the frontier, without his passport is provided with the visa of an Austrian minister. If he have not that, he has to return to Turin or Berne to procure it. The town is built on the left bank of the Tecino, shortly below the place it leaves the lake, and contains only one structure worthy of notice, the church of St. Donato, a building of the middle ages. From here we pursue our route to Milan through the great Lombardo plain, a level route made between gardens and fruit trees; the country along is fertile and rich in the extreme.

GALLEBATI, CASCINA DELLE CORDE, and RIIO. ontside which is a beautiful church, we enter Milan through the STRASBURG TO FREIBURG, by Railway from KEHL. in 34 hours.

At Freiburg, travellers should ascend the Schlesberg, a little hill about a quarter of an hour's walk from the Neustell, and which commands a beautiful view of the valley of the Treisam, having the hills of the Black Forest in the distance.

FREIBURG to SCHAPPHAUSEN, through the Hollen-TUAL and BLACK FOREST (51 miles). Lilwagen in 11 hours.

Though the distance is only fifty-one miles, yet the road is so hilly that eleven hours are required. The Hollenthal, a magnificent defile, through which the waters of the Treisam force their way to join the Rhine, ought to be visited by every lover of picturesque scenery. An omnibus leaves Ficiburg every morning, in the season, for Steig, at the extremity of the Pass, returning in the afternoon or evening. The road to Schaffhausen, after climbing out of the Hollenthal by a very long and steep hill, passes through the Black For st by Lenzkirch, Boudorf, and Stuhlingen; it is a picturesque route, though inferior in scenery to the Hollenthal. Shortly after leaving Stuhlingen the road crosses the Wulach, a small stream which scearates Baden from Switzerland.

SCHAPPHAUSEN.

Steamers daily to Constance up the Rhine-a beautiful sail-in 6 hours. Eilwagen daily, along the south side of the river, in 41 hours.

The road to Constance is carried along the Swiss, i.e., south side of the Rhine, and presents many beautiful views of the river, whose banks are here and there richly wooded; also of the Unter See, or Lower Lake of Constance. Steckborn is the only considerable place on the route. At Constance Buden is re-entered.

CONSTANCE.-This is an ancient and apparently decayed city, situated at the point where the Rhine flows out of the Lake. It is chiefy noted for the Council held here 1414-1418, by which John Huss and Jerome of Prague were condemned to death as heretics, and burnt, in violation of the safe con-The attention of visitors to Paris should be di- duct given to them by the Emperor Sigismund. The Hall where the council was held is shown: Huss's bible and other relics of him; also, in the Cathedral, the flag upon which he stood to receive sentence of excommunication. The place of martyrdom is in the suburb of Bruhl, a little distance outside the city. The Ithine is crossed at Constance by a curious, long, covered wooden bridge. The navigation of Lake Constance is accomplished by sever or eight steamers, which keep up a communication two or three times a day with the principal places upon its banks. The traffic upon Lake Constance has received a considerable impetus from the formation of a port at Friedrich-hafen, the southern terminus of the Wurteinberg railway, and by the completion of the Bavarian railway to Lindau, by which it is brought into communication with the system of railways in that kingdom, as well as with those of northern Germany. The northern banks of the lake are flat, but the southern side presents a series of picture-que views, having the mountains of Appensell and St. Gall, together with those of the Tyrol, in the back ground.

Constance to Lindau, by Steamer on the Lake, in 5 hours.

Lindau.—The Bavarian frontier town is built on an island in the north-eastern corner of the lake, and connected with the mainland by a long wooden bridge. It is a place of great antiquity, having formerly been a Rorean station. A fragment still exists of a wall, called the "Heldenmaner," attributed to that people. This town suffered greatly during the thrity years' war, having, in common with many other parts of the terminate of the Elector of Bavaria—their most formula he opponent—been devastated by the Sweles, At pre-ent, Lindau has a population of upwards of 3000, the majority of whom are Frotestants.

A pleasant excursion of 65 miles may be made from here to Bicgenz. The road lies along the shores of the lake, and at Loschau crosses the Austrian frontier. Birgenz is a good starting-point for an excursion into the Tyrol, as Innsbruck-am be reached from here in about 23 days' posting, or by a daily diligence through relighter and Landeck. Travellers should not omit to ascend the "Gebhardsberg"—a hill behind Birgenz—the aummit of which may be reached in about twenty minutes, and commands a magnificent view, embracing the whole expause of Lake Constance, the snow-capped mountains and glacters of Appenzell, together with the lofty peaks of the Rhenane or Tytolese Alps.

LINDAU to AUGSBURG. By rallway.

There is nothing remarkable on the route to Kempten; the country is, however, pleasantly diversified, beinghere and there richly wooded. Occasional views are obtained of the snowy mountain ranges in Switzerland and the Tyrol. Large forests abound in these parts of Bavaria.

Kempten was formerly an imperial city; it is on the iller, and has upwards of 6000 inhabitants; it is believed to be an old Roman station.

The railway from Kempten to Augsburg requires 3 hours, -the curves being very frequent, and the gradients difficult, a great speed cannot be attained. The only important place passed is Kaufbeuern, once an imperial city, and at present containing about 4000 inhabitants.

Acosouse.—The Hotel "Prei Mohren," was onmerly the mansion of the Fuggers, the increhant princes of Augsburg; and the apartment is still preserved and shown, in which Count Authony Fugger entertained the Emperor Charles V. on his return from the campaign against Tunis; on which occasion he destroyed in after of cinnamon, the Emperor's bond for a large amount, which he held as security for the funds supplied by him to enable Charles to undertake the campaign.
Augsburg has been the seat of many important diets of the empire. The Aligencine Zeitung, the leading German newspaper, is published here by istant Cotta.

Augsburg to Munich, Railway (39 miles) in 2 hours.

The Bavarian railways having only one line of rails, and the trains having to wait at certain stations for others to pass, considerable delays frequently occur. The country between Augsburg and Munich is flat, and the scenery only enlivened by occasional distant glimpses of the mountains in the Tyrol. Shouly before reaching Munich, the royal palace of Nyinphenburg is passed.

MONICH.—See page 320. The colossal statue of Bavaria, by Schwanthaler, a female figure in broaze, 61½ ft. high, of most beautiful proportions, advantageously placed on a slope which rises gently froze the west side of the Theresan Wires, is the finest work of art in Europe. The many other broaze statues, in various parts of the city, are well worthy of observation.

The English garden on the northern side of the city, a plot of land four miles long, and through which the waters of the lear are conveyed, is beautifully laid out, and forms a delightful promenade.

Returned to Augsburg

AUGEBURG to ULM

The Railway: now finished from Augsburg to Ulm. The country is undulating, and is some parts richly wooded. The roat passes turough Tusmarshausen, Buryau, and Gunzburg, dirty Bavarian cities of little or no interest. From the later the road is carried nearly parallel with, though not in sight of, the Danube to Ulm, where it crosses that there which here forms the boundary between Bavaria and Wurtemberg.

ULM is now being strongly fortified by the German confederation, to defend the valley of the Danube against France. It was formerly an imperial city, and enjoyed an extensive commerce; but at present contains only about 1,600 inhabitants. Large quantities of snalls are fattened in this neighbourhood, and exported to Austria, where they are considered a great delicacy, and much consumed during Lent. The emperor Maximilian I., in order to refute the accusation brought against him by the citizens of Ulm, that he had drank too much wine to be able to attend to public business, climbed to the top of the tower of the cathedral, (316 English feet nigh,) and there balanced himself on one foot, swinging the other round in the air, which foolhardy feat is recorded by an inscription. Ulm was surrendered to the French without resistance, by the Austrian General, Mack, in 1805, when 30,000 of his troops were made prisoners of war.

ULM to STUTTOART. Railway, in 4 hours.

Passing through a picturesque country, being carried along the side of the Swabian Alps, and affording many beautiful views of the valleys of the Fils and Neckar, one of the most striking of which is at Geislingen, a considerable town situated at the mouth of a deep defile, one side of which is richly clothed with foliage, while the other presents a series of gigantic rocks. The curves in the line of railway afford many different views of the gorge, at the bottom of which is seen the narrow stream of the Fils making its way to mingle its waters with those of the Neckar, to which point the railway follows its course. Before reaching Goppingen, a town of 5000 inhabitants, on the Fils, the Hohenstaufenberg, a conical hill about two miles to the right of the line, should be noticed; on it stood the castle of the noble family of Hohenstaufen, which for upwards of a century (1140 to 1250) furnished emperors to Germany. The railway then passes Plochingen, at the junction of the Fils and Neckar, and follows the valley of the latter by Esslingen (described at page 313 of Guide) to Cannstadt, an ancient Roman station, and now much frequented by the inhabitants of Stuttgart on account of its mineral waters, which are believed to be beneficial in disorders arising from indigestion, and thence to Stuttgart.

The Russian, or rather Greck, chapel, alluded to at page 318, is erected on the spot where formerly stood the feudal castle of Wurtemburg, the cradle or Stammechloss of the powerful dukes, the ancestors of the present reigning family.

STUTTGART.—A pleasant, clean city. The railway station is in the Schloss Gasse, close to the palace, and quite in the centre of the town. The palace gardens, which extend upwards of two miles atong the Valley of the Nesen to the elegant Grecian villa of Rosenstein, are open to the public, and form a very pleasant promenade. The orange trees are remarkably fine. There are several handsome public buildings here, among which may be specified the old and new Palaces; the interior court of the latter is curious. But here, as well as in most other Gorman capitals, it is paintal to see the duracrous barracks and great display of military.

STUTTGART to HEILBRONN. Railway, in 2 hours.

Chiefly along the banks of the Neckar and Ens, many pleasing views of which are presented passing Ludwigsburg, a city with 7000 inhabitants, once intended for the capital of Wurtemburg; then winding round the base of Hohensperg, an isolated hill with a fortress on its summit, now used as a prison, it reaches Bieflichelm station, from which railway joins the Balen line at Bruchsal; then crossing the Euz by a curious lattice bridge, reaches the valley of the Neckar, the course of which it follows very closely, being carried on an embankment rather above the level of the stream, by Besighelm and Lauffen to Helbronn.

HEILBRONN contains upwards of 10,000 inhabitants, almost entirely protestants; it is pleasuntly situated on the right bank of the Neckar. There is a covered wooden bridge across the stream, similar to those seen in Switzerland. Its chief architectural ornament is the church of St. Killian, whose tower, upwards of 220 feet high, is very beautiful. The holy spring, "der Heilige Brunnen," from which the city derives its name, is near the church. About three miles east of Heilbronn are the runs of Weinsberg, called "Welbers Treue," woman's fidelity, to commemorate an occurrence in the wars between the Guelphs and Ghibelines, when Conrad III., having taken the castle, and intending to put all the garrison to the sword, permitted the women to leave the place in safety, along with whatever they could carry; the women accordingly marched out of the castle, each bearing her husband or her lover on her shoulders.

HEILBRONN to HEIDELBERG. Steamer, in 6 hours.

The descent of the Neckar can be made in 6 hours, but the return requires nearly 12, the current being strong. Steamers ply twice a-day in sunmer. Refreshments can be had on board; but the cuisine is only indifferent. The route is most pleasant and interesting; the scenery is almost everywhere lovely; and though occasionally tame, many parts will bear comparison with the finest parts of the Rhine, though on a smaller scale.

The most remarkable places are (right) Juxtfield, visited on account of its brine buths, and with Falensen salt-works in the neighbourhood; (left) Wimpfen, beautifully situated on the top of the steep and richly wooded bank of the river—a very aucient town, with a beautiful gothic church, whose three spires form very prominent objects; (left) Heinsheim, a village of Baden, prettly situated at the foot of the ruined castle of Ehrenberg, one of the most beautiful on the Neckar; (right) Gundelsheim, with the Castle of Horneck, formerly, attronghold of the Teutonic knights; (right) Ruins of Hornberg, picturesquely situated, and overgrown with ivy; (left) Obligheim, where the river is crossed by a bidge of boats; (left) Memeburg, an ancient castle in ruins, believed to have been destroyed during the thirty years war; (right) Zwingenberg, formerly an extensive feudal fortress, defended by eight towers, five of which still runnin; it belongs to the Margrave of Badless, who readded here a portion of very year; (right) Ehrbacks, a very ancient village, and in the neighbourhood the Katzenbuchel, the highest mountain in the Odenwald ; (right) Hirschhorn, with its walls and towers in ruins; (right) Neckarsteinach, the most charming of all the scenes on the banks of this picturesque stream—the four castles of Vorderburg, Mittelburg, Hinterburg, and Schadeck, rising one above another, and, in close proximity, form a toute ensemble not soon to be forgotten. They were formerly inhabited by the family of Landschaden. The highest of them, called by the peasantry the "Swallow's Nest," is situated on the verge of a steep and inaccessible precipiee, and presents a good specimen of a fastness of the robber knight of the middle ages. (Left) Neckargemand, at the mouth of the Elseuz; (left) the Wolfsbrunnen, about two miles above Heidelberg, from which it is a pleasant walk along the banks of the river. In returning, a road, carried on the top of the high land, conducts to the castle of Heidelberg. Wolfsbrunnen is famous for its trout, which are preserved in reservoirs, and attain an enormous size. It is a favourite resort of the students from the university. (Left) lieidelberg.

Heidelberg to Frankfort, by Railway, in 3 hours. Frankfort to Cologne, by Railway and Rhine Steamer, in 94 hours.

Cologne to Brussels, by Railway, in 7 hours. Brussels to London, via Calais, in 13 hours.

ROUTE 4.

Zurich to Coire, by the Lakes of Zurich and Wallenstadt.

CONVEXANCE.—Steamers thrice dally to Rapperschwyl, and once dally to Schmerikon, whence diligences take us on to Wesen, where we embark again for Walleustadt; from here by coach to Coire: (Chur, German). Places through should be engaged at Zurich.

Fares,—Zurich to Wallenstadt, 9 fr. 50 c.; to Schmerikon, 2 fr. 65 c.

We embark and sail along the Lake of Zurich, described at page 355.

In our voyage we meet many villages, only remarkable for their flourishing industry. We particularise a few of them, first premising that the high ridge seen rising on the west of Zurich, and stretching along the lake for a dozen or more miles, is the Albie.

Kussnacht. A small village with 300 inhabitants.

WADENSCHWYL.—A sweet little town, remarkable for its many silk factories, and containing a population of about 5000. A fine old easile, once the residence of the balliff Uberamiman, but now possessed by a private individual.

RUSCHLIKON.—To the rear of this are the baths of Nydelbad. Passing Mellen and Thalwyl, we arrive at Horous.—Passengers wishing to visit Right via Zug, must disembark here.

RICHTERSWIL.—Situated on the frontier line of the two cantons of Zurich and Schwytz. Pilgrinus for the famous shrine of the Black Virgin at Einstelden disembark here. Here also is one of the largest cotton factories in Switzerland.

STAFA.—A village with four thousand inhabitants, remarkable as being the residence of Giothe. Nearing Rapporschwyl, the Isle of Aufnat forms a remarkable feature and ornament of the landscape. It is celebrated as being the scene of the refuge and death of Uric Vorsilutten.

RAPERSCHWIL.—Situated on a neck of land advancing into the Lake of Zurich, eighteen miles south-east of Zurich. Its bridge traverses, the lake for a distance of nearly five thousand feet. It is twelve feet broad, and is built of loose planks, not nailed, and without railing. The toil charged is enormous, being nearly 2s. 6d. English, for a char-à-banc. The original bridge was built by Leopold of Austria in 1358, and the present one is a construction of 819.

SCHMERIKON.—Is located at the eastern extremity of the Lake of Zurich; at it the road leaves its margin

Uznach.—A small town of nine hundred inhabitants. Here the road to St. Gall tunns of: and close by at Oberkitch, are the brown coal mines. Leaving Uzuach, we perceive the valley of Glaus with its snowy nountains; passing through which, we arrive at WEREN.—A little village containing about six hundred inhabitants, situated at the extreme point of the Lake of Wallenstadt. The journey is made through a pretty country.

WESEN to GLARUS, 10 miles.

WESEN to WALLENSTADT, by steam up the Lake of Wallenstadt. -The voyage is accomplished in about two hours, and the fare is 1s. 6d. We pass through stupendous cliffs of lime stone for the northern shore. The southern side presents an aspect of verdure and cultivation. At the foot of the picturesque peak of the Sieben Churfirsten is the village.

WALLENSTADT.—A considerable village, with about eight or nine hundred inhabitants. Leaving: Wallenstadt, we meet with some beautiful scenery in the valley of the Scaz, and reach Saroana.—A small town, situated on an eminence close to the junction of the St. Gall and Zurich roads to Coire, and containing about eight, hundred inhabitants. From Ragatz, where the hoff Ragatz is an excellent inn, the excursion to the baths of Pfeffers should on no account be omitted.

The distance is about four miles, and a most delightful walk it is by the river side over an excellent char road. Entering the valley of the Rhiuswe pass Ragatz Zizera, and arrive at

ROUTE 5.

Coire to Splugen, by the Via Mala.

Conveyance.-Diligence daily, occupying about seven hours in the Journey.

RIGHEAU.—A small town, bulk where the two Rhines unite. This place is remarkable as laving been the scene of Louis Phillippe's (late King of the Fiench) professional labours as an naher. He arrived here in 1793, with a pack on his back and a staff in his hand; and, preceeding to the school-house—once the family clutaeau of the Planta—presented a letter of introduction to the principal, M. Jost, who engaged him under the assumed name of Chabot. He was then Duke de Chartres; and for six or ten months gave lessons in French, history, and mathematics. He was beloved by both scholars and master; and whilst residing here, heard of his father's death by the guillotine, and of his mother's transportation.

From here the road to the Splugen proceeds along the Henter-Rhein, on the right of which may be seen the Gallows; and on the left bink of the Rhine, turther on, is seen the castle of Rhoetzuns, standing on the top of a lofty rock. A great portion of the Rheinthal, called the Valley of Domleschg, is studded with old castles, and is remarkable as being the emporium of various languages and diversified religious.

As we approach Katzis, on the other side of the Rhine, a magnificent view through the Valley of Oberhlabstein may be had; and this, in its extraordinary beauty, is greatly added to by the snow Mount Albuia closing the vista before us in the distance.

Tgues.—A very small village, beautifully ocated at the mouth of the Via Mala gorge. It contains about 700 inhabitants. A little beyond Thuis the Nolla is crossed by a very beautiful bridge.

The VIA MALA opens short of half a mile above Thusis, and extends about 4½ miles. It is one of the most awfully savage and fearfully tremendous deflies in Switzerland. Language is barren in conveying anything like a precise idea of the colossal dimensions of this gorge—passing through precipices oftentimes 1650 feet high, and not more than ten or twelve yards in width. The road is on the whole pretty good, and is protected by a parapet wall; and is conveyed across the Rhine by three bridges.

The middle bridge is approached by a small gallery, and is about 400 feet high. The road is here half hewn out of the precipice, forming almost a subterranean passage. Close to the third bridge we pass a very fine structure, enter the valley of Schams, and passing the village of Zillis, arrive at ANDEER.—The chief village of Schams contains about five hundred inhubitants. If the tourists wish, they can explore the Val Ferrara. It is to the lost of the road, and is represented as being far more wild sind errible than the Vla Mala. a fing about five hours to explore it. The road having crossed the mouth of the Val Ferrars and the stream of the Aversa, it ascends into the gorge of the Rofia, where the Rhine descends in the form of a cataract. The scencry about is very fine. Soon after the new road, leaving the bridge, runs through a small gallery cut in the rock, and crossing the left bank of the Rhine, arrives at

Splugen to Bellinzona, by the Bernardine Pass.

(Distance, 46 English miles.)

ConvEYANCE by diligence daily.

The road, leaving the Splugen bridge to the left, proceeds up the valley of Henter-Ithein. The scenery along the bank by Nufannen is wild and barren.

HINTER-RIEEL—A small village, about 176 feet over the Splugen. From here we proceed by the Pass of the Bernardine. The road leaves the Rhine at Hinter-Rhein, which it crosss by a chridge, and ascending the steep slope of the mountain, gives a very fine view, over the head of the lithing on the left, and of the stupendous mass of the Moschel Horn on the right. The Pass hungs on the left black peak of the Mittag Horn. The summit of this Pass is about 7115 feet above the sea, and about 2400 above the village of Splugen. At its point we find a very good though plain inn. Proceeding a little down the mountain, we pass the Moesa over a handsome bidge, called after Victor Emmanuel, King of Sardinia. The carriage-road here is roofed in for some distance to protect it from the avalanches.

St. Bernardize.—The first and highest village met with in the valley of Miscoco. Here there is a mineral spring; and our descent to the lower valley is made through beautiful and romantic sconery.

Misocco.—A small village with about 1000 inhabitants. Its castle and churchyard will repay a visit. The scenery all about is very beautiful. Proceeding through the valley of Misocco, after passing Cama, Roveredo, and St. Vittore, we arrive at Bellinzona, described at page 346.

ROUTE 7.

Berne to Thun, (see Route I, page 381.) Thun to Vevay, by the Simmenthal, Saanen, Chateau d'Oex & Gruyeres, and Pass of the Dent de Jaman.

A splendid road leads through the Simmenthal, and a diligence runs in summer. The journey through the valley is readered delightful by the beautiful and charming scenary with which its and water, enlivened by picturesque villages and homesteads. We enter the Simmenthal between the Stockhorn on the right and the Niesen on the left. From Thun we approach it through the road extending along the margin and by the banks of the Kander, to the spot where it meets the Simmen, a short distance from the castle of Wimmis, passed on our left.

EBLENBACH is a couple of miles further on, with the Stockhorn rising immediately behind it WEISSENBERG. - The Baths of Weissenberg are distant 21 miles. Conveyance by mule or chair, to be procured at the inn here. The path to the Baths wends along a romantic and picturesque defile. The Bath-house is constructed of wood; expense of baths and living, 9 or 10 fr. a day.

BOLTINGEN .- A small village built to the south of the castle of Simmeneck, 2600 feet above the level of the sca. A steep ascent presents itself, but is avoided by the wind of the road, which, as it were, radiates round it. Above us is the ruins of the castle of Lanbeck. Enjoying the scene of splendour presented by the gorge of Lanbeck, and crossing the river thrice, we reach Zweisimmen- A village of wooden houses, containing about 1300 inhabitants; and is built where the great and lesser Simmen join. Here the road to Bulle and Vevay, verging towards the S.W., leaves the Simmenthal; and crossing the Saanen Moser, leads into SAANPN - The principal village of the Valley of the Upper Sarme; remarkable as being all in pasture, and possessing a population exclusively engaged in pastoral occupation, and famous for the manufacture of cheese, known as "Gruyères." From here is made the ascent of the Sanztscu l'ass. The road, on leaving, is rugged and steep. We leave Berne, and enter the Canton of Vaud about a mile below Samen.

ROUGEMONT .-- A small village of no note.

CHATEAU D'OEX .- A small village of 700 inhabitants. It is 3030 feet above the sea, and was rebuilt after a terrible configuration. Crossing the Same we traverse the narrow pass of La Tine amid mountains, rocks, and pines. The road, though rather narrow, is accessible to carriages. 101 hours will suffice to accomplish the journey from here to Vevay, with a carriage and pair of stout horses.

Montsovon .- A small but pretty village situated in the Canton of Freiburg. A horse-path over the Pass of Dent de Jaman, brings the traveller to Vevay in 6 hours. The views and scenery are charming. The carriage road leading from Mont-bovon to Vevay, descends into the valley of the same. After making a long détour, it passes round the base of the Moleson, (6181 feet), and wending under the bills, passes by abounds, commanding brilliant landscapes of wood ; crowned with a castle, which is very remarkable, and an object worthy a visit. The district in which the town is situated is renowned for its cheeses. The old chapel of St. Theodule is also worth a visit. Within it is a monument and effigy of a Count of Gruyere, remarkable for their antiquity. Bulle to Vevay, see Route 1, page 381.

ROUTE 8. Martigny to Aosta, Pass of the St. Bernard.

The distance from Martigny to the Hospica is about 27 miles, which can be traversed in a walk of about eight or ten hours, and thence to Aosta in about seven or eight.

Chars take the travellers from Martigny (see Route 1.) to Liddes, whence the ascent to the Hospice is accomplished on mules. We pass through the Bourg Martigny, and cross to the left bank of the Drance. From here the road follows the course of the river as far as the villages of Valette and Bouvernier. The road again crossing and re-crossing the river, and continuing its course by the right bank along the Valley of the Drance, it proceeds up the left bank to St. Branchier - a miserable village situated at the foot of Mount Catogne-where the two branches of the Drance unite. A little above this place, very beautiful views in the Val d'Entremont may be enloyed, differing, in no way however, from the general character of Alpine scenery.

Chairnes .- A path from here leads to Issunt and the Val de Ferret. As we leave the village behind us, the scenery met with is rugged and wild, though not to any great extent. Nor is the landscape remarkable for anything worth notice. until we enter at the forest of St. Pierre, and enter Liddes .-- A char from here to Martigny costs 12 fra.; and mules from thence to the Hospice. 6 fra.

Sr. Pierre.-A small and wretched village, venerable by its antiquity. Not far from here is a magnificent cascade, in the Val Orsey. Beyond St. Pierre the path passes through a larch forest, far below which, in the distance, can be seen the course of the Drance. We enter the plain called the Sommet de Prou, as being the most elevated. point of the pesturage of Prou. Above this plain. is the Glacier of Menon, topped by the lofty peak of Mont Velan-the highest part of the Great St. Bernard. Shortly after, the Hopital is reached; this appears incorporated with the skies, and is elevated 8200 feet above the level of the sea. The Convent of St. Bernard is the point of separation between the waters that flow into the Adriatic Sea and those that flow to the Mediterranean. The Hospics of the Great St. Bernard has acquired a world-wide fame for the hospitality of its inmates. It is a stone building, massive and strong, built on the loftlest point of the Pass, exposed in its north-east and south-week faining about 400 inhabitants. Its position is sides to every storm, but sheltered on the north to very picturesque, being built on the face of a hill, west by Mont Chenelletaz and Mont Most. Tue chief building has seventy or eighty beds for the use of travellers, and is capable of affording shelter to over 300. Some days 600 or 700 receive aid and succour. Independent of this building, there is on the other side of the way a house of refuge, called the Hotel de St. Louis, in which ludies are chiefly accommodated. On the ground floor are the stabling, store-rooms, &c. Above these are the sleeping-rooms, the church, and refectory. A flight of steps between the two corridors leads to the drawingroom, where visiters are received by the brethren. The reception-room is clastely furnished, and ornamented with paintings, &c., presented by visitors in token of their gratitude to the brethren. The cabinet attached to this room is interesting and attractive; it contains a number of the plants, insects, and minerals indigenous to the Alps. It also contains a great many relics of the Temple of Jupiter. which, tradition states, once stood on the Pass, close to the Hospice. The figures of bronze, arms, metals, and coins, will deeply interest the antiquarian. The chapel of the Hospice is a very handsome one, and contains a monument erected by Napoleon to the memory of General Dessaix, slain at Marengo. This monastery was founded in the tenth century by St. Bernard -- a member of the noble family of Menthon, in Savoy-who was a canon and archdeacon of Aosta. He governed the convent for forty years, and died in 100s. All the documents, &c., likely to throw light on the circumstances of its foundation, were destroyed by the terrible conflagration of 1552. The monks of the community are regular canons of St. Augustine. Ten or twelve usually live at the convent. Their duty is to assist travellers in the dangers to which they are here continually exposed from the storm and the avalanche, in the discharge of which duty these devoted men often lose their lives. Scarcely a traveller over passes without paying a visit to the Mobour -- in which are deposited the bodies of the unclaimed dead who perish on the mountains. The scene it presents is awful and melancholy, yet faithful and true. The ashes of mouldering huma-nity, the bleached bones, the calcined particles of what was once life and vigour-all present a spectacle that awakens in the bosom of the spectator thoughts of the most serious considerations. Death, as it were, lives before him in all its terror: the scene opens up the portals of two states-he sees what he is, and what he will be. At one end are the remains of those who are dried up and withered. Close by are skeletons, partly preserved and partly in a state of decomposition; and all round are the broken fragments of human nature in all the plenitude of its dissolution, pointing out to the spectator his being-his end. The house in which these bodies are placed is rather a low building, situate a few yards from the east extreme point of the convent.

The visitor can scarcely leave without seeing the dogs of the Hospice. They are a noble breed, said to be a cross between the Newfoundland and the Pyroan. They are powerful, of great muscular strength, and very astonishing in their rational fatcilingence. Very many of them have perished with the guides. One-of them, called "Barry," is reported to have saved fourteen individuals. His skin is stuffed, and may be seen at the Museum of Berne. Leaving the Hospice, we proceed down-wards to the Val d'Aosta. Our road lies between the Lake and the Plain of Jupiter. Passing first a short defile, the scene towards Italy reveals itself. showing us the large basin of the Vacheric. Tarning shortly to the right, and sweeping round the basin, we descend to the plain. A very fine view may be had on looking cut from the gorge on Mont Mort, towards Vacherie. After this, we arrive by a rapid descent at St. Remy. From here to St. Oyen we pass no picturesque scenery. At this place the passports are rigidly examined; and unless perfectly correct, the traveller is not per-mitted to pass. The baggage is closely examined at Etroubies, where also is crossed the branch of the Buttier. From here the road goes down to the village of Gignod. Beautiful indeed, and rich in all the glories of picturesque grandear, is the scenery of the country we now pass through. The Val d'Aosta, with its trellised vine and luxurient vegetation relieved by the back ground, filled with the beautiful forms reflected by the snowy tops of the mountains above the Val de Cogne-render interesting and delightful our entrance into AOSTA .-- A city built at the confluence of the Buttier and the Doire, in a valley rich and beautiful. It contains about seven thousand inhabitants, and is remarkable for its antiquities and historical recollections, and for the beautiful scenery surrounding it on every side. Formerly called Civitas Augusti, or the City of Augustus, it fills a large space in the page of antiquity. Known under the name of Cordele, its history dates further back than its conquest by Terentius Varro. Its foundation is set down as being 406 years earlier than that of Rome by Romulus, and as having occurred 1158 B.c. Twenty years before Christ, its inhabitants were reduced to captivity by the Emperor Augustus. He gave his own name to it on its being rebuilt, and established there a large number of the Pretorian cohorts. Its greatness at that time cannot be doubted. The mouldering ruins and broken fragments of its stupendous buildings, now withering into clay, sufficiently attest its antique greatness. Its triumphal arches with their façades, its broken bridges, the ruins of its amphitheatre. Prætorian palaces and towers-are living attestations of its having been under the dominion of, and erceted by, the Emperor who swayed Rome's mighty sceptre, and wore her imperial purple when she counted the empires of the earth, her pasture-lands and vineyards, and her slave-roll the broad register of the human race. It gave one archbishop to England-Anselm, the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the eleventh century, who was born there. The Cathedral likewise deserves a visit.

Berne to Lausanne, by Morat and Avenches.

(Distance, 57 English Miles.)

CONVEYANCE.—Diligence daily, making the journey in ten or eleven hours. As we go on the Alps are seen on our left, and we cross the Saarine at GUMINEN-A short distance from which the road enters the Canton of Freyburg.

MORAT, (Murten, German).—Situated on the east side of the Lake of Morat, and contains about 1,900 inhabitants. Its streets are narrow, and it is surrounded by feudal fortiesses. It is only remarkable for the sanguinary battle of 1476. The hill of Munchwyler gives the best view of the scene of the battle, and of the lake. Five miles beyond Morat is AVECHES—Situated on the south-west angle of the area formerly occupied by the Aventicum, enpital of ancient Helvetta. The town is surrounded by walls, and contains a population of 1,000. The antiquarian will here find much food for study and contemplation. His research will be anaply compensated by exploring the mouldering fragments of the broken walls and battlements, and other records of the regions of Vespasian and Titus, as well as of the hestile invasions of Alemanni and Attila. A Corinthian redumn, 37 feet high, is seen on the left of the road as we enter the town. The eastle is a building of the seventh century.

PAYENE.—A small town, no ways remarkable. The church contains a remarkable relic, said to be Queen Bertha's saddle. This church also contains her tomb. Ascending the valley of the Broye, we reach Moupon.-A town containing about 1,600 inhabitants.

CAROUGE.—To the left is the road to Vevay. The road from here is very hilly, and requires extransorses to accomplish it. At our arrival on the summit of the Jorat from the southern side, a very beautiful view opens up before us, disclosing Lake Leman, &c.

LAUSANNE-described at page 350.

ROUTE 10.

Lyons to Pont de Beauvoisin, by Les Echelles, Chambery, and the Pass of Mont Cenis, to Turin.

LTONE to PONT DE BEAUVOISIN.
CONVEYANCE by diligence or courier every day.

PONT BEAUVOISIN.—A frontier village of France, situated on the banks of the Guiers Vif, which is crossed by a bridge having French and Sardinian custom-houses at either side, where passports and baggage are severally examined. The road from this place is at first flat, but becomes an ascent after a couple of miles are passed. At the height of the ascent, we find splendid views opening up before us. Beneath us lies the sanny field of France. Soon after, we enter the magnificent gorne of La Chaille. The road is constructed of solid masonry. Extending along the edge of the precipice, ruggest supendous cliffs, many hundred feet high, hue the other side; whilst in the depths below rushes the innestment torrent.

Les Echetles.—A village situated on the Gulers, being the starting point of a road leading to the Grand Chartreuse. We next enter the valley, and pays through the great tunnel cut through the face of the mountain, a most extraordinary work, 25 feet high and 1000 feet long. We follow our route through a rocky ravire.

St. Thisaud de Coux.—A waterfall not far from here has been written of by Rousseau as "La plus helle que je vis de ma vie."

CHAMBERT—described at page 346. From here some very pleasant excursions can be made, particularly those to the baths of Aix and the Lac du Bourget.

Railway to Aix and St. Innocent, also to St. Jean de Maurichne.

The Deet de Nivolet and Les Chametres— Our road proceeds through the valleys of the Arc and Issire. On the right we see Mont Grenier, 5700 feet high. The Château Bayard stands on the left bank of the river, a few miles below.

MONTMFILLAN.—Situated on the left bank of the Isére, where the four roads:—that of the Mont Cenla, that of the Tarentuse, and those of the little St. Bernard and Grenoble meet. Several hamisome country seats, forming a handsome suburb, are around here. At this point the valley of the Isére divides itself into two large plains. Crossing the Isére, we ascend a hill, and can enjoy a magnificent view of the Arc and Isére. The hamle: of Maltaverne is the next place met with. This place commands a very good view of the Isére. The rivers Arque and Isére ioin between Maltaverne in the proposite side of the Isére. AIGUERELLE- Situated at the foot of Mont Cenis. The country about is very unhealthy, the rivers at their junction forming very pectilential marshes, which generate makada, &c. Issuing from Aiguebelle, he pesses under a triumphal arch; and passing a number of poor hamlets, reaches

La Grande Maison.—A short distance beyond La Chumbre, on the east, a large valley, called la Madeleine, opens a road to Mousten, the chief place in the valley of the Tarantaise, stuated on the high way from the little St. Bornard to Italy. Crossing the bridge of the Hermillon, and following the base of the mountain of Rocheray, we reach

ST JEAN DE MAURIEUME.—It is the chief place he the valley, and has a very good suburb. The viney, yards of St. Julien produce some good wines. By yond the town we cross the Arvan, and a little further ou, the Arc, after which we arrive at the Michal

Sr. Michel.—A very picturesque little town, surrounded by orchards and meadows.

MODANE —A town famous for its cultivation of hemp, and remarkable as being the last scene of "Sterne's sentimental journey." In this part of the valley the bed of the Arc is much confined, and has to flow through a narrow gorge. The road here has been cut for about a league through the mountain. Beyond is the fort Lussellon, having the gorge of the Arc as a fosse. The Pent du Dlable is a very striking object.

VENEX.—The mountains about here are very necresting, from the singularity of their appearance. They are without a human residence, and their summits abound in dens of bears. Chamois, mannots, and phensants are also to be found there. The path of the Col de Vanoiso meets our road at Termignon.

LANS LE ROURS.—A large village situated at the foot of Mont Cenis, inhabited by porters and muletoers. On leaving the village, a very large barrack is passed on the left. The road crossing the Arc, begins its ascent to Mont Cenis. Travellers for the uscent abandon the valley of Maurienno.

MONT CENTS. - This remarkable mountain is one of the chief routes from France and Switzerland into Italy. It is situated partly in Savoy and partly in Pledmont. We are enabled to accomplish the journey from valley to valley in one day-that is, from Lanslebourg, on the Savoyard, to Susa, on the Italian side-a distance of about sixteen leagues. Many historians assert that it was by this mountain Hannibal penetrated into Italy. There are houses of refuge erected all along the Pass; and we pass 23 of them between Lauslebourg and Susa. They are occupied by cantonniers, who keep the road in order, and render travellers any assistance they may need. The first remarkable spot met with is La Ramasse. When the snow has filled all the hollows in winter, travellers from Italy descend from the summit to Lanslebourg in a sledge with almost inconceivable rapidlity, accomplishing the descent in about seven minutes, the sledge being guided by a peasant. The perpendicular descent is 2000 feet. The most elevated point of the road is called Point Culminant, which is commanded by very excellent views of the five peaks of Roche Melon, Roche Michel, Roncho, Corne Reusse, and Vanese. A spacious platform or plain extends from here to the Grande Croix; and the road is so guided as to avoid some dangerous avalanches. Les Tavernettes is next met with. It is a little below the Point Culminant, and not far within the entrance to the plain. At this place there is a station of cantonniers, under the control and direction of regular officers, to whom the tourists can complain against their drivers or post-boys for unnecessary delay, &c. At the seventeenth refuge a toll of b france per horse is charged. From here a short distance brings us to the culminating point of the pass, viz., 6,780 feet above the level of the sea. Continuing to traverse the plain, we reach the post-house where wescan get a plain but substantial repast. The road is magnificent; and is another monument of the enterprise and genius of Napoleon. We soon after reach the Hospice—a long range of buildings, near the extremity of the Lake, six leagues from Lans-le-Bourg. It was originally founded by Charlemagne, and re-established by Napoleon. It contains 1012 betas, and 1000 or 2000 more could be accommodated on the loft. There is a barrack connected with it, now occupied by a troop of carbineers, who examine the passports of tourists. The Hospice, properly so called, is inhabited by monks, who exercise hospitality towards all travellers. Travellers ought to be particular in having their passports countersigned, as, unless they do so, they would be stopped at Chambery or Turin. The gorge of the little Mont Cenis is seen on the opposite side of the lake. Further on, we meet the bridge of La Rouch—a torrent following the direction of a new road.

Grande Cross.—A group of taverns. Here we cross the La Rouch, and find terminated the Mont Cenis The road wending above the plain of St Nicholas, opens through a perpendicular granting rock of considerable clevation. Arches of masonry are to be seen along the road, constructed to pretest travellers from the rocks, which very often fall. The scenery of the plain is wild and terrific. We obtain a commanding view of the hills of Charmont before we roach MOLARET- the first Piedmontese village met with. Near it is a small inn.

Stsa.—A small town with about 2000 inhabitants, situated at the point where the reads over St. Genévre and Mont Cenis meet. It is a very old town, but noways remarkable. Outside the town is a triumphal arch, erected in honour of Augustus eight years before the Christian ena. Passing Bruzzole, St. Ambrogio, and Rivoli, we arrive at

ROUTE 11.

A Three Weeks Tour in Switzerland.

By J. K., JUNE.

BASLE .-- HOTELS &C., see page 343.

Basic To Zurich—By isliway. For a party of three or four, in fine weather, it is much more pleasant to take a carriage from Basic to Baden: it is needful in such case to start from one and a half to two hours sooner. On attaining the summit of the eminence, before descending to Brings, on the Aar, the traveller gets the first view of the Alps of the Oberland. The whole ride is an extremely interesting one.

ZURICH .-- HOTELS, &c., see page 354.

ZURICH TO THE RIGHT AND LUCERNE. - The steamer leaves Zurich at 8 o'clock in the morning for:

Horgen, on the south shore of the lake. Passengers ! can book on board the steamer for the whole route, as far as Arth, fare, 5 frs. Omnibuses wait the arrival of the steamer at Horgen, to convey the passengers to Zug. A good table d'hôte is always ready at the hotel at Zng for the passengers. The steamer then conveys them across the beautifully green lake of Zug to Arth, where the ascent of the Righi commences. The ascent from this side, and descent to Weggis, we recommend in preference to the opposite route. In crossing the lake, you have the Right rising majestically before you -- Mount Pilatus in the distance to your right, and the Rosberg to the left. At Arth, horses may be procured for the ascent- or at Goldan, one mile further on. It is well, if the weather be fine, and a probability of much company, to telegraph for your beds before you leave Zurich. There are few finer scenes in Switzerland than the ascent of the Eighi from Aith and Goldau After passing the latter, you ascend steadily for some time on the verge of a steep descent, with fine views of the lake of Zug below you to the right, and of the Rossberg on the opposite side of the valley. The place whence the great fall occurred that destroyed the former village of Goldau, is plainly seen. Directly behind you are two remarkable mountains called the Mitres, in the Canton of Schwytz. The path soon diverges to the left; and after a very long, arduous, and precipitous climb through the forest, whose shade from the sun is most welcome, a more easy path is attained on the right side of a deep valley, or mountain gorge, the sides of which are clothed with beautiful pine-forests, interspersed with cascades from the rocks above. Ascending still further, you reach the small hospice inhabited by a few Capuchin monks, and the chapel of Marie-zum-Schnee. At this point the snowy peaks of the Alps first appear in the east; and, as you ascend higher and higher, your view gradually extends to the south, each fresh extent of view increasing in splendour, till, on attaining the summit, the grandest panorama in Switzerland rewards your toll. After remaining on the summit to see the setting sun, you are ready for the refreshment provided at the Culm hotel, which is good and reasonable, considering the difficuty of bringing every thing from the valley. The ascent of the Righi from Arth occupies about 34 hours. After being roused by the Alpine horn, to see the sunrise, if so fortunate as to have it fine, you descend to Weggis, occupying about 24 hours, on Lake Lucerne. This descent is extremely The view of the lake, at an immense depth below you, with Mount Pllatus beyond, and the mountains of the Oberland in the distance, must delight the most fastidious. From Weggis to Lucerne by steamer, or row-boat if preferred.

LUCEBNE.-HOTELS, &c., see page 350,

Steamer twice a-day in summer from Lucerne to Finelien and back, calling at Weggis, Beckenreid, &c., &c., and passing the Field of Grutli and Tell's Chapel, in the Bay of Uri. Travellers who are intending to go by Alterf and the St. Gothard Pass, leave the steamer at Fluellen.

At Lucerne the curious covered bridges, and the

are well worthy of inspection. For further description of Lucerne, see page 350.

THE BRUNG PASS.—To Beckenreld by first boat in the morning, thence by diligence at 7.30 a.m., or by a hired vehicle to Lungern; or by a rowboat to Alphach; if there is a party, this mode is not only pleasanter, but cheaper. The charge is not only pleasanter, but cheaper. The charge is 14 franc for the boat, 2 francs each to three rowers, and a trifle for trankgelt. From Alphach to Luncern by hired vehicles, passing through the vale of Sarnen and past the lake of that name, and the Lake of Langern. There are printed tariffs of charges for vehicles, &c., in most parts of the Oberland.

Very intelligent guides may be procured at Lungern; and for a party, especially if it be their first visit, it will be found not only to add greatly to their comfort, but to be ee monical to engage one. They are for the most part extremely civil, and save those who employ them from many auxieties. The cost is 6 francs per day, and 6 france for each day required to take them home, when they are discharged, besides trinkgelt. For this they provide for themselves, and look faithfully after your interests There is a very comfortable country Inn at Lungern, plain but good provisions, and very cheap, all but the wine, which should be brought from Lucerno At Lungern the Pass of the Brunig commences, and can only be done on foot or on horseback. Horses can be hired at Lungern. If thie, it is a delightful walk-the scenery grand, yet beautiful -the forests fine, and vegetation most luxurant. After emerging from the Pass into the vale of Meyringen, the roads diverge. The right hand leads to Brienz and Interlachen, the left to Meyringen, either of which may be reached the same day casely. The view, on entering the valley, is extremely grand. Opposite to you rises the Faul-horn, and to the left are seen the casendes of the Reichenbach; and looking up the valley of the Sheideck may be seen the Wetterhorn and the Glacier of Roseniam.

From the hills behind Meyringen there are some cascades well worthy the traveller's attention. One, called the Alpach, is frequently of immense volume, endangering the existence of the village.

THE PASS OF THE SHEIDECK .-- To be done on foot or horseback. An early start is desirable. This is one of the grandest excursions in the Oberland. The first part is very steep, passing close to the splendid cascades of the Reichenbach, afterwards along the valley, on each side of which are most wild and magnificent crags, clothed at the base with splendid pine-forests, the lower parts of the valley being filled with most luxuriant vegetation. Before you is the Wetterhorn and the Glacier of Rosenlaul. After proceeding a few niles, you can diverge from the path to the left, and by a sharp half-hour's clumb reach the foot of the Glacler. After climbing a little way on to it, you may then pass into a cave inside it, with semi-transparent ice for the roof; and below you, in a deep gorge, at a depth enough to make the nervous giddy, rushes the torrest from the Glacier Leaving the Glacier. monument to the Swiss Guards, by Thorwoldsen, the old path is soon regained; and then, passing the Alpine rhododendron and many other rare and beautiful plants, growing in great profusion, you pursue the main valley, till you attain the châlet at the summit of the Pass.

While the horses are taking their needed rest here, the time will be well spent in examining the botany of the locality; and probably the traveller will be also gratified by an avalanche from the Wetterhorn, which is towering immediately above him.

The descent to Grindelwald is steep and toilsome. A visit must be paid to the Upper Glazier of Grindelwald in passing, which will well repay the trouble, and the traveller will not be sorry to arrive at GRINDELWALD. -- Hotel L'Ours, and Hotel de l'Aigle.

The view of the Lower Glacier of Grindelwald from the horel is very fine. On the left of it stands the Mettemberg; on the right the Great Eigher, the Monch, and the Jungfran. Behind you, to the north, is the Faulhorn; and to your right the carriage-road to Interlachen, through the Lebekenthat, one of the four levely vallies of the Oberland.

THE WENGERN ALP .-- This is another splendid excursion, but only performable on foot or horseback, or by chalse-a-porteur.

Crossing the stream that flows from the Glacier, the traveller ascends the opposite side of the valley, leaving the road to Interlachen to his right, and traversing along the precipitous base of the Great Eigher, and passing both it and the Mouch, arrives at the summit. The views at every point of the ascent are very fine. The bird's-eye view, as it were, of the many scattered hamlets that form the village, and the constantly changing views of the magnificent range of mountains - are a source of excitement, that almost make the traveller forget the fatigue of the ascent. At the summit, the Jungfrau, in all its majesty, is suddenly brought before him. Descending for half a mile along the side of the opposite mountain, the chalet is reached, where good refreshment may be obtained. The traveller will most likely, whilst here, see one or more avalanches fall from the Jungiran, and will no doubt be disappointed at their apparent insignificance; but may form some more correct idea of their size from the noise caused by them, as it is echoed and re-school among the mountain peaks. The descent thence is steady and pretty good, till approaching close to the valley of Lanterbrunnen, when it becomes ex-ecodingly steep and travellers will find it safer to After viewing the Staubbach Falls, Interlachen may be reached the same evening.

INTERLACHEN.-- HOTELS, &c., see page 350. This is a nice point for a few days' rest, after rough mountain-climbing. From it many pleasant excursions can be made, viz., to Grindelwald and back, to the Sheideck, up the vale of Lauter-brunnen, and to the Staubbach, to the village Thurren, to the falls of Schmadribach, &c., &c., all so well remembered by the admirers of Longfellow,over the Wengern Alp, or along the Lake of Brienz, to the Giesbach Falls. For the latter excursion, a steamer leaves interlushen at 11 a.m. (which is abort of power, and generally in bad repair). It calls at the Giesbach, leaves the sight-seers, and proceeds to Brienz; and returning at 2, calls again at the Falls, to take the visiters back to Interlachen, few of whom will have failed, after seeing these splendid cascades, to have seen and bought some of the beautiful wood-carving which is here, at Brientz and at Meyringen, to be purchased in great variety, and at a very reasonable rate.

Interlaction to Leukerbad.—The Gemmi Pass. This may be done in one day; but is rather too hard work, unless the days be long, as daylight is absolutely needful for the last six hours.

A vehicle may be hired to Fruigen, or Kandersteg, and the horses there taken out, and ridden the rest of the journey. Travellers should start not later than 5 a.m. Or by steamer to Thun, and thence by vehicle to Frutigen. There is a diligence daily at 2.30 p.m., from Thun.

FRUTIGEN.

The Hotels at Frutigen are good; and it is there-fore better to rest all night here than at Kandersteg, if you make a two days' journey of it. A vehicle may be hired here to proceed to Kandersteg, or your own retained over night. Kandersteg the carriage-road ends: the rest has to be done on foot or horseback, or chaise-à-porteur. The best plan is to engage your horses at Frutigen. On leaving Kandersteg, the steep ascent commences almost immediately; and after two and a half to three hours' climbing, you reach the small châlet, where the refreshment provided is very welcome. This l'ass is noted for its extreme wildness. For miles along the top, the track is through a district almost destitute of vegetation. It passes over the lowest point of the range of the Blumlis Alp. The grandest part, however, is the descent down the face, as it were, of precipitous cliffs, but along which a horse-path has been most ably and ingenously constructed.

The passage from Kandersteg to Leukerbad, at the foot of the Genmi, may be done easily in from six to seven hours. The view, immediately prior to this steep descent, (and which is from the greatest elevation attained in the day's journey.) is very grand. At your feet, at a depth of some 3000 feet, lies the village of Leukerbad; and yet so near, that it would seem that you could throw a stone on to it. Looking down the valley of the Dala, and across the valley of the Rhone, the chain of mountains, of which Mont Rosa is the chief, stands before you in all its magnificence. Mont Rosa itself is not however visible.

LEUKERBAD .- HOTEL :-

Hotel des Alpes, and Hotel de France. The tourist will be pleased and interested with this romantic apot, shut in on all sides but the south by rocks and mountains of the grandest kind, whose perpendicular sales appear to dely all attempts to climb them; and yet it is by a very ingenious road, cut in the surface of these precipies, that the Pass of Gemmi is accomplished. The village is a favourite resort for people with various kinds of allments, who come to buthe in the hot baths. These are supplied by aprings of water considerably above 100 degrees of Fahrenheit. The water in the baths is kept from 96 to 99 degrees. The mode of taking the baths is very striking to the Englishman. In a long from are four large tanks, some ten or twelve feet square, filled with people in thick would not sometime to be some bath. The usual allowance is a month's course, beginning by more moderate quantities; but when in full operation, the allowance is four hours in the morning, and four hours in the afternoon. A voit to these baths should by no means be missed.

LEUREBBAD TO MARTIGNY.—By diligence daily from l'Hotel des Alpes, at 8 a.m., Sion at 3 p.m. and at Martigny at 7 p.m. The charge for a two-horse vehicle, with relays of horses, at Sierre, Sion, Riddes, and containing four persons, including the driver and the toll or "peage," on the excelent road from Leukerbad to Leuk, is 66 francs-viz, to Sierre 22 francs, guide 3 francs, "peage," 6 francs; to Riddes 10 francs, guide 14 franc; to Martigny 10 francs, guide 14 franc-for one horse to Sierre, and two horses the rest: total, 60 francs; if one horse all through, LO francs.

In ascending from Martigny to Leukorbad, it is considered most interesting to take a mule at Sierro for the rest of the way, and so ascend the right bank of the Dala, passing along some wonderful terraces cut in the rock. The whole Pass up the Dala is one of extreme wildness and beauty. In descending the valley to Martigny, it is botter to keep the regular road. The grandeur of the valley will be as well appreciated, and more comfortably, from the excellent road through Leuk, without the change of conveyance.

MARTIGNY TO CHAMOUNI-by the Tête Now, or Col du Balme.

Mules may be had for either route: each mule, 12 francs; each guide, 12 francs: mules cannot be had without a guide or attendant; but one guide will do for any number of mules. A chaise-a-porteur and six men, cost 72 francs—with eight men, 96 francs.

The ascent commences within one mile of the town, where the road to the St. Bernard branches off, and is one continued steep, unbrokes ascent, till you attain the summit of the Forelaz. Mero the path for the Col du Balme diverges to the lest, that to the Tête Noir to the right. The attraction to the Col du Balme consists in the splendid view, if fine, of the whole of the Mont Blanc range, the moment you attain that spot, after crossing the inches the continue of trient; but to any one going for the first time, especially if any doubt exist as to the clearnass of Mont Blanc from clouds, we would recommend the Tête Noir: you descend, in this case, down the vale of Trient, till you join the Val d'Orsne Be sure not to allow the mule-driver to stop to dine at the village in the vale of Trient, but to go no to the hotel at the Tête Noir, where, instead of passing an hour in a very tame hollow, you spend it in the most beautiful spot in Switzerland, and not half an hour's rule from the former place. This Pass is constructed round the face of the mountain, forming the angle between the two valleys, but at an immense precipitous height above the streams. Having come down the Trient valley, you now ascend the Val d'Orsine, along this splendid gallery ; continuing on, you arrive at length at a point where the path is again on a level, and then crossing the boundary of Sardinia, you gradually ascend till reaching the highest part of the road, called the Montets. Before reaching this spot, if fine, the Col du Balme is seen towering before you, and then Mont Blanc itself, and the different Alguilles forming the Mont Blane range. The descent is through Argentiere (where the passport is rise), passing the gladers of Tour, Argentiere and do Bois, and so on into the valley of Chamouni.

CHAMOUNE.—Several good Hotels.—Excursions to the Mor de Glace and Montanvert, to the Flegere, and to the Glacier of Bosson, are all easily made; more adventurous people are not satisfied without visiting the Jardin and ascending the Breven; and others, for whose intrepidity more can be said than for their prudence, must needs ascend Le Mont Blane itself.

Be sure not to allow the mule-driver to stop to from Neutchâtel to Bienne, by diligence, pass dine at the village in the value of Trient, but to go as to the hotel at the Tête Noir, where, instead of Isle of St. Pierre, where Rousseau resided top:

some time; then passing through Blenne, and ascending the Juras through a beautiful country, you arrive at the summit, where there is a curious natural arch over the road, on which are some Roman inscriptions. From this point the descent down the Munster Thal commences, and it is a very appropriate close of a ramble through this delightful country. The road passes through two splendid gorges in the rock, the stratification of which is must remarkable. There is an excellent hotel at Bellerive, immediately after passing the last of the gorges referred to. From Bellerive, the road, which, like all roads in Switzerland, is excellent, follows the windings of the river along a beautiful wooded valley almost to Basle, or the rail-read may be taken from Bienne to Bale.

ROUTE 12. Geneva to Chamouny.

GENEVA—See page 348.—Distance, 50 English miles. The journey is performed as far as St. Martin by diligence in eight or nine hours, and by light carriage in four-and-a-half hours, thence to Chamouny.

A charge of 51 francs is made by the Sardinian postmaster for permission to use vetturino horses between Geneva and Sallenches.

A light carriage for four can be had for 40 francs, to go from Geneva to Sallenches or St. Martin, from whence a lighter carriage can be had to carry two or three persons to Chamonny.

We depart from Geneva by the Grande Place, and pass, for some miles of our journey, through a picture-sque country studded with neat yillas, &c., up to our arrival at CHEANE—A large village situated on the Scime.

At this point the eye reast upon some magnifeent views—the Voirons on the left, Mount Saleve and the range of the Jura on the right. Departing hence we cross the stream which separates the Genevese Canton from the Sardinian States, and arrive at

Anemasse, the Sardinian custom-house station, where, if the passport be en reight, the travellor is treated with great courtesy, and his baggage permitted to pass unsearched. Beyond this place the road leads up the valley of the Arve; and we effect the passage of the Menog over a pretty and lofty bridge. Passing over an elevated plain, we arrive at

NANOY—close to which village, on the right, are some ruins, comprising those of the Chateau of Faucigny. Our road preceeds on close by the Mole, a beautiful mountain surmounted by an obelisk. Passing through some beautiful scenery, we proceed through an avenue of trees, and enter

BONNEVILLE, --- Inn: Couronne.

The chief village of the Province of Fancigny, with 1806 inhabitants. It is an excellent mid-day halt. A column, ninety-five feet high, erected to honour the memory of Carlo Felice, stands at the end of the stone, kpidge, and is surmounted by a statue of the king. Crossing this bridge, we follow between the base of the Mole Mountain and the Mount Brezon, which on the right bounds the valley of the Arve, now fortile and agreeable. Passing through the villages of Vaugier and Scionzier, our road continues immediately under the Brezon, until it crosses the Arve on a stone bridge, and enters CLUSES.—Inns: Parfaite Union & Ecu de France.

A very old town, nearly consumed in 1843, but now nearly rebuilt, in a remote position from the mouth of the gorge. It has a population of 1800; a large number of these are celebrated as watchmakers, in which capacity very many of the inhabitants of this place have founded establishments in Strasburg, Lyons, Augsburg, &c.

Departing from Cluses, our road is carried through the defile and beneath grand Alpine precipices. The valley now narrows, and in some places the precipices overhang the traveller. scenery through which we now pass is wild an. beautiful. Though a very agreeable visit might be made to the Grotto of Bahne, 800 feet above the valley, and seen shortly before arriving at Maglan; yet persons intending to go on to Chamouny, had better waste no time here, but be off to St. Martin or Sallenches. A couple of hours might be devoted to seeing the cave or grotto. At La Balme we find mules for the ascent, and can get limonade gazeuse at the hamlet. The depth of the grotto is more than 1800 feet. The peaks of Mont Douron, seen on the other side of the valley, present a very striking ap-

Adjoining the road, at a few yards distance from La Balme, a magnificent spring issues out of an embrochure; and the lovers of pure beverage will be deeply gratified by partaking of its refreshing waters.

Malan.—On the right of the Arve, situated beneath lofty mountains, we see this straggling village of about 1800 inhabitants, who bear much the same migratory character as the people of Cluses, and are just as remarkable for their foreign establishments. Proceeding beyond this place the valley widens, though the scenery is unvaried; and our road touches on the Nant d'Arpenaz, one of the highest waterfalls in Savoy. The stream is like a sig-zag cascade, and crossing the road beneath a bridge, falls into the Arve. Travellers exposte from Geneva will be pestered with lide vagrants offering them minerals for sale, guides, &c., vending echoes by firing pistols, &c., but they should discountenance such imposition.

The valley now loses much of its former narrowness; and from Sallenches up to the base of the Douron, we see before us rich and verdant fields. Direct above us rise, 8000 feet above the sea, the peaks of the Varens, as we enter St. Martin, and soon after find ourselves in the yard of the Hotel Crossing the bridge, situated de Mont Blanc. about 100 yards from the inn, our road leads on to Sallenches. From off this bridge we enjoy a delightful and magnificent view of Mont Blanc-a view so pointed, so clear, and so gratitying, that to enjoy it is worth the entire journey from England. The peak, in a straight line, is twelve miles distant from here; yet its stupendous mass is shadowed forth with a clearness so vivid, brilliant, and commanding, that the eye calculates on its immediate presence in all the grandeur of its mountain maiesty. Forcias, in its pine-clad armour and green helmet, is seen; and, towering above these, the Alguille de Goûté, the Dome de Goûté, and the summit of the highest mountain in Europe, supported by the ridges of Alguilles, the intersecting spaces being studded with glaciers.

SALLENCHES.—Inns: Bellevue and d'Angleterre. A small town with a population of 2000. It is situated on the ruins of the former town, entirely consumed on Good Friday in 1840. Here chars, mules, and guides can be hired for Chamouny at the following tates: clar, 12 francs; with two horses, 18 francs; and position, 2 francs.

From here to Chamouny occupies about five hours; the roads are steep and rough, and only accessible for light chars.

Parties who desire to visit Chamouny, and return by Geneva on foot, had better proceed from St. Martin to Chêde, Servoz, and Chamouny, by the right bank of the Arve, returning by the Col de Forclax, and the baths of St. Gervils, to Chêde.

An agreeable drive may be taken from Sallenches to the baths, about two miles off. As we close upon the baths, our road turns abruptly to the right, and cuters the gorge of the Bon Nant—a small stream ascending from the Bon-homme. The baths and the lodging-houses or pavilions, are altuated on a little spot at the extremity of the glen, which cannot be left unless by returning to the entrance, where we find two roads branching off—one leading up a steep ascent to St. Gervais, a picturesque and sweet village in the Val Montjoie, and passing the hamlets of Bionnay and Tresse, as it leads to Contamines and the pass of the Bon-homme. The road leads to Chède across the valley of the Arve by Parsy.

Above St. Martin and Sallenches the valley of the Arve spreads itself out before us; and all along to Servez, magnificent views greet the eye of the traveller.

Close by Chêde there is a beautiful cascade on the left, which is generally visited by travellers who leave for Chamouny early in the morning. At Chêde our road ascends in a steep curve above the plain of the Arve; and after attaining a considerable height, passes on the left the Lac du Chêde, now filled with mud and stones. Our road next makes a deep curve along the bed of a wild torrent, from which there is a path to SERVOZ, where refreshments can be had for man and horse, and guides hired for the Buet, one of the panorama-commanding ascents, from which a splendid view of Mont Blanc may be enjoyed. From its summit, to 10,500 feet above the level of the sea, a vast extent of horizon stretches before us, bounded by the mountains of St. Gothard on the east, and by the ranges extending into Dauphiny on the west. We get a partial glimpse of the lakes of Geneva and of Annecy, whilst before us are the range of Jura bounding that portion of the horizon. The Buet can be best ascended from the Servoz side. It is, however, a very dangerous ascent; and no fraveller should attempt its ascent without a good guide. The usual course to follow, is to stop at some chalet up the mountain, and start early next morning for the summit from which descend by the Val Orsine, and reach Chamouny in the evening.

On leaving Servoz our road crosses the torrent of the Dioza, and follows close to the base of the Breven. Near the Pont Polissier, which the road crosses, are the ruins of the castle of St. Michael. The Les Montets, a steep and stony ascent, next interposes itself in our way, and we find ourselves on the upper storey, as it were, of the valley of the Arve. Here we are in close proximity to the mountain monarch, but cannot see his head, which is concealed by the stupendous Dome de Goute. We now proceed through some beautiful meadows to Les Ouches, the first village met with in the valley. Two miles up above this place we meet the first of the white lines of glaciers which begin to be seen from Les Montets, extending themselves into the valley. It is called Tacongy, but is a a mere cipher to the ones extending themselves all round. As we proceed on, numerous torrents are passed, and the hamlet of Bossons is reached, near which is the glacier of the same name. The brilliancy of its ice, and fantastic forms of its pinnacle, sixty or seventy feet high, renders it a beautiful object, and worthy of a close inspection

The remarkable Cascades des l'elerins can be visited from the path which turns off two miles below Chamouny. The Aive is crossed a little bit above the Glacier of Bossons, and our road follows its right bank. The Glacier du Bois is seen at the

EXCURSIONS FROM CHAMOUNY.

ASERT OF MONT BLANC.— Who that has ever visited Chamouny has not feit the piquancy of the excitement and delight of foreign travel? the more sensible, because of being unalloyed with the dross of official interference.

He looks from his hotel window, and sees the bustle consequent on numerous arrivals and departures. Guides gibbering forth their adventures in one corner, and tourists speculating on their plans for the morrow in another, keep up a continual croaking, quite in accordance with the various speculations hazarded. And, taking his eyes from off that point, he looks forth to see

"Abové him, the Alps!
The pulaces of Nature! whose vast walls
Have pinnacled in clouds their snowy scalps,
And throned Leernity in tey halls
Of cold sublimity; where forms and falls
The avalancho—the thunderbolt of snow!
All that expands the spirit, yet appals,
Gather around these summits, as to show
How Earth may pierce to Heaven, yet leave Vain man below!

The tour of Mont Blanc can be made with the greatest advantage from Chamonny over the Col de Bon Homme to Cormayeur in the Val d'Aosta, where Mont Blanc is seen in grander proportions and mightier lineaments than from the north side; and from thence by the Col de Ferret, or Great St. Bernard to Martigny, returning by the Tête Nois-pass to Chamouny. The guide taken at Chamouny is not allowed to proceed further than Martigny, where a local guide must be engaged for the remainder of the journey. Should the journey be ended at Martigny, the guide returning to Chamouny can only demand one day's pay.

MONTANUERT.—A pleasant excursion can be made, to this place. The excursion is generally undertaken for the purpose of making a visit to the Mer de Glace; the stupendous range of glaciers ending in Glacier du Bois, and the source of the Arveron, in the valley of Chamouny. The ascent is accomplished by a nulle path in 2½ hours, and the descent in 2 hours.

We first cross the Meadows and the Arve by a path traversing the valley to the foot of the Montanvert. Here the path leads up a beautiful forest of pines, meeting at intervals very steep ascents. Large masses of rock, and uprooted trees, appearing now and again, mark the direction of the avalanches that have fallen at different periods. Half-way up the ascent we find a very pleasant and agreeable resting place, at a fountain called Calllet, beside which, it is asserted, Florian commenced his tale of Claudine. From here we have a magnificent view of the Breven and the Aiguilles Rouges. About a league further on is a ravine, formed by avalanches. Mounting towards the top, we see looking down upon us, from above the remotest heights of the pine tops the Aiguille de Dru, a gigantic obelisk of granite. On the summit, at the Montanvert, we find an excellent inn, called the Pavillon, and good accommodation.

A short but steep descent leads to the Mer de Glace, or Sea of Ice, so called from its resemblance to the waves of the sea after a storm; the path passes by the Rocher des Anglais, or Rock of the English—several mountains environ the Mer de Glace. The appearance of this vast tey sea is wonderful to contemplate, and across it are some of the most majestic of those plunacled mountains that add so much grandeur, and forms such a striking peculiarity in the scenery of Chamouny. On the north-east is the Aiguille de Dru, which is the north-east is the Aiguille de Chârmozz, and on the left of the former is the Aiguille de Bochard; a forest of pinnaclea, rising up between these, as it were to perforate the akles, appearing to hold up the giant of them all—called the Aiguille Verte.

Parties not proposing to cross the Mer de Glace should descend upon it and walk on it for 80 or 100 yards, as it is only by so doing they can clearly recognise its brilliancy of hue and deep pure colour of blue.

The Jardin.—A visit from the Mer de Glace to the Jardin, forms one of the finest excursions in the entire range of the Alps. Persons wishing to enjoy it thoroughly should make the Pavlion their resiting place for the night, where they will find comfortable sleeping accommodation. The chiet object of this excursion, is to enable the tourist to penetrate into the remote della and embosomed valleys of Mont Blanc, in order that its seems of gavage splitting and wildernesses of rugged horrors might be more fully entered upon. No one should attempt the passage without a guide, who can carry provisions to the Jardin, the Mont Breven, the Chapeau, and to any other places where refreshment might prove necessary. Bread, cold meat, and wine, are the best to be taken.

We follow the south-west side of the Mer de Glace. and after ascending either of the two passages called Les Ponts, the tourist descends to the edge of the glacier, and continues his course for some time along its moraine. Here is a very pure fountain, issuing through a natural arch in the rock. The path at length reaches the point where the Glaciers de Tacul and de Lechaud unite. the latter, we perceive four parallel and protracted heaps of rubbish on the Mer de Glace. After traversing the latter for two hours, the tourist arrives at the foot of the Talefre. The view of the Glacier de Talefre is here very sublime and awful. To attain the summit, we must ascend the rock called the Couvercle, which shoots up into the inaccessible Aiguille de Talefre. The necessity for here scrambling with both hands and feet, has gained for the passage the name of Egralets, or Petits Dégrès. It is, however, more difficult than dangerous. The plain of the Aiguille de Talefre affords an agreeable resting-place. Amid the laybrinth of granite blocks at the foot of this glacier is a rock, called the Pierra de Bérenger, which affords shelter to those surprised by bad weather. In the midst of the ice and snow is a flat rock, which, at the close of August, is covered with a layer of greensward, diversified with a variety of beautiful Alpine plants. This is the Jardin of this palace of nature, and its beauty can only be exceeded by the splendid sublimity of the surrounding objects. The journey from Montanvert to the Jardin can be performed in twelve hours, including two or three hours to rest.

Beyond the Jardin, is a place called Les Courtes, very difficult and dangerous of access, where minerals, &c., are collected.

In descending, we can avoid the Egralets by taking a direction across the glacier, a long and steep descent, which leads to the Glacier de Lechand, abruptly terminated by the Aiguillo de Lechand and the Grand and Feitt Jorase. It requires nearly five hours to walk from Montanvert to the Jardine, and six hours to return thence to Chamounty.

The Flegers will also prove a delightful excursion, and enable one to onjoy an admirable view of the great monarch, of whom the poet sings-

"Mont Blane is the monarch of mountains! They crowned him long ago: On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds, With a diadem of snow."

Ladies will find this an exceedingly agreeable spot to view the monater mountain. The accent can be accomplished by mules all the way up, and it is one of the best in the valley.

In case the traveller has not much time to devote to the excursions about Chamouny, the two first worthy of visit are the Montanvert and Flegère.

The Breven also forms a favourite excursion, and, though many ladies perform the ascent, yet it is a very fatiguing one. Returning from it to Chamouny, the journey can be varied by taking the west side of the Breven, above the valley of Dioza, close by the lake, and then descending by the Chalets of Calaveiran, towards the village of Chapeau, whence a path leads down to Les Ouches, in the valley of Chanouny.

Source of the Arveron.—If we would avoid a separate excursion, we should immediately descend from the summit of Montanvert to the source of the Arveron, which issues from the Glacler des Bois. The descent is along a hollow, wrought by avalanches, and called La Filia. It is very steep, but not dangerous, and may be undertaken on foot

The Chapeau.—Those unwilling to encounter the ascent of the Montanvert, will find it the east course to proceed to the Chapeau, a slight entinence, commanding a tolerably good view of the Mer de Glace, and of the Aiguilles of Charrooz and le Bletière, humedlately under Mont Blanc. It derives its chief interest from the close proximity in which it lies to the vicinity of the innunerable pyrandes into which the glacier shoots up, at the point where it separates their from the soa of ice. It is also a very convenient station for witnessing the descent of the blocks of ice, and hearing the termendous noise wherewith it is accomplished.

THE ASCENT OF MONT BLANC.—Of late years the feat of ask ending this mighty mountain has become quite as common and fashlonable as it was before rare and exceptional. The adventure—a darling one enough in its way—requires the aid of half a dozen guides.

Mont Blanc, every schoolboy knows, is the highest mountain in Europe. It is situated between the valleys of Chamouny and Entreves. It has three principal summits; the most westerly is called the Dome du Couté, that in the middle the Grand Mont Blanc, and the most easterly the Tacul. It requires two days for the dangerous excursion from Chamouny to Mont Blanc-the first from the former place to that called Les Grands Mulets, where the shelter of a rock can be obtained; the second from this spot to the summit and back; Those who make the attempt from the mountain of La Côre, proceed from the Prieure to the village of Bossons, turn saide on the right near the foot of the glacier, and proceed to the hamlet Du Mont. A little further begins the ascent, which follows the bank of the torrent that issues from the Glacier de Taconay. Mules can proceed to the distance of two miles from the Prieure; but the remainder must be performed on foot.

Though it may be very gratifying to make this ascent, yet it is highly dangerous, and should scarcely be attempted, as it must be considered as bardly justifiable to endanger, not only one's own life, but the lives of the guides—poor men who risk their existence through necessary, and for, after all, a very triding consideration. And the traveller, safely seated in his hotel at Chamouny, can, if he choose to inquire, hear some curious details; and, it may be, interesting stories in reference to the hair's-breadth escapes, &c., of those whose morbid love of notoriety awakened in their bosoms the determination of making the ascent of Mont Blane.

ROUTE 13.

Pass of the Julier, from Coire up the Valley of Oberhalbstein, to the Baths of St. Montz, in the Engadine and Samadan.

Conveyance by diligence daily, Sundays excepted, as far as Samaden, in 15 hours.

Departing from Coire, we leave the entrance of the Schalfk, that on our left, and pass the unimportant villages of Malix, Churwalden, and Parpan, whence we pass over a wild and rugged moor to LENZ .- Inn : Krono.

From this place a path leads to the Albula, and another by carriage read to the Julier. On quitting Leaz we hear nothing spoken but Romansch, German not being understood unless at inns. We cross the Albula before reaching TIPPENKASTEN, a small and protty village, situated in a deep hollow at the opening of the valley leading up to the base of the Julier and Septimer, distant about 20 miles. It is beautiful and picture-easing, and may be said to concentrate in itself the combined beautics of the enth e pass, being profusely ornamented with castellated ruin, the mouldering battlements of which are finely attractive and deeply interesting. On our entering the Oberhalbstein or valley, we see on the left the path leading to the Albula. Departing from Tiefenkasten, the road directs its course through a gorge called the Stain, respiendent in gorgeous and brilliant scenery, scarcely inferior to that of the Via Mala.

As we approach Turzen, cheerless and bleak scenery, not at all lessened by the squalid sepect of the inhabitants, meets the eye. From here we pass up a fetiguing and steep accent, replete with picturesque scenery, which invests our pathway to Molins (Mühln), where we find an excellent hotel. The village is a small one, agreeably situated in a small amplitheatre, and embosomed in the most captivating scenary of the Oberhalbstein. From here we proceed over the stream of the Taller, which we recross at the villages of Sanr and Marmela, from whence we arrive at the point where branches the two passes of the Julier and Septimer, at the village of

a Capachin friar, who will probably be hospitable to a traveller.

A path leads from the Septimer into the Val Bregagila, taking two hours to reach the summit from fivio, a piace located in a kind of secluded reservoir, hemmed in on all sides by high mountains. Not a trace of vegetation, not a single green spot, on which the eye could rest, is here to be met with. All is barien and inhospitable; so much so, that no tree nor shrub ever grows there, and the inhabitants are obliged to burn sheep dung for fact. At its height, 5,630 feet above the sea, a vegetable can scarcely mpen.

The JULIER Pass is 6.830 feet above the level of the sea, and it requires two hours to ascend to the summit from Stalla. The scenery is very mediocre in its character, but the ascent is safe, and the mount perfectly free from avalanches. On arriving at the top we see Julius' columns, two granite piers or milestones, through which the road passes. Though they are very rude and without an inscription, yet they possess an interest from the supposition that they were set up by Augustus, on the occasion of his causing a Roman highway to be carried over the passes of the Maioja and Julier from Chravenna. In 1323 a carriage-road was constructed across this pass to St. Moritz, but with very few beneficial 1esults. We make our way by a very easy ascent into the Engadine, to St. Mosrrz. - Inns: Obere Gasthof, Mittlere, and Untere Gasthof.

A small but thriving village, situated on the west and south slopes of a charming hill, and containing a population of about 180. This place is now acquiring a very high repute as a watering-place, in consequence of a very powerful chalybeate spring, which rises at a spot 20 minutes' walk from the village at the foot of Mount Rosege, on the right bank of the river lsere, in a swampy prairie, The spring is covered by a kurhaus, and the water used in the baths is heated. This spring was first spoken of by Paracelsus, in 1539. The village overhangs the river, and embraces a fine prospect of the several verdant lakes formed by it in its onward course. It is surrounded by a pasture country, the chmate being too severe to pennit of even the growth of barley. The forests of larch seen about present an agreeable and diversified aspect in the landscape; and to the lovers of angling the little lake close by the village will afford capital sport in trout fishing, from the ist of May to the end of October, when it freezes, and is covered with ice until the ensuing summer.

Excursions can be made from here to the Lugni See, the source of the Isere, up the valley to the great Bernins glacier, and down the valley to the pass of Finstermins.

SAMADIN.

ROUTE 14.—FILISUR, WEISSENSTEIN.

ROUTE 14.

Coire to Ponte in the Engadine, by Weissenstein and the Albula Pass.

Distance, 48 Eng. miles; accomplished in 15 hours.

As far as Lenz, the route leads through a bridle path, and is all the same as the preceding one, up to that point where it takes an easterly direction round the shoulder of the mountain, and passes the village of Bilenz to ascend the Albula, after leaving liefenkasten on the right. As we proceed, we see on the left, towering above us, perched on an almost inaccessible rock, the Castle of Belfort. Three miles from this point we find the baths of the Alvenne situated on the right bank of the Albula, the stream of which we follow, ascending in a south-eastern direction to FILISUR-A beautiful village, approaching nearer the character of a town in its size, situated on the right bank of the Albula, remarkable for its white and clean appearance, as also for its striking resem-blance to the Engadine. The inhabitants of Filisor are particularly skilful as pastry cooks, in which capacity they very often find employment in various parts of Europe. Close by are the ruins of Schloss Greifensten; and two miles above it are the silver mines of Bonacelsa, now no longer worked; and four miles thence we enter the narrow ravine of the Berguner-stein, remarkable for its striking likeness in scenery and outline to the Via Mala. Its outlet is exceedingly grand, more than 1000 feet, the path being hewn through a rock beneath. while, at the distance of 600 feet, the Albula roars and thunders its founding waters.

BEBAUN (Rom., Bergogn.)—A small village delightfully imbedded in the mountains, and imbbited by muletters and carpers, speaking the Remansch, and professing the Protestant faith. From here a steen road leads to the chaft, an into Weissenstein, which is 4900 feet above the level of the sea, adjoining a small lake, which supplies excellent red trout. The lake is overshadowed by frightful precipiees, and presents a cheerless aspect. Our path upwards from here borders the north side of the lake. Close by are easily discernible the traces of a Roman road. A savage and rugged ravine, named Trummer-thal, filled with pleees of rocks swept from the heights above by the avalanches, leads to

The top of the PASS OF THE ALBULA, 6890 feet above the level of the sea, and marked by a cross. Sau and mournful is the scene of desolation all round. Close by is a small lake and on the north of the path rises the two peacs of the Albula-Crap-Alv, or White Rock, 7960 feet, and P12 Err, 8770 feet high. At times the descent into the Ober Engadine is dangerous to travellers, from the fall of avalanches.

PONT, or PUNT .- Inn: Couronne.

ROUTE 15.

The Engadine and St. Moritz to Nanders and the Pass of Finstermunz.

Distance, 52 English miles; accomplished in 18 hours.

The Engadine, or valley of the higher Isere, is traversed by a char road, very bad in the lower part, but pretty good on the higher portion of the valley, which is one of the highest inhabited among the Alps, its elevation being 5600 feet above the sea at Sils, and 3234 feet at Martinsbruck, the former of which is the highest, and the latter the lowest village. Its atmosphere is ungenial and severe, it having nine mouths of winter and three of cold weather; and yet, in no other valley among the Alps, do we find such large and populous villages. Massive graciers separate it from Italy on the south; and it has at least twenty tributary valleys. The inhabitants of the Engadine are comfortable and wealthy; there poverty is rate, and menticancy unknown; the houses are neat, elegantly fitted up, and tastefully decorated, and painted with a brilhant whitewash. All this will strike our mind as wonderful in the extreme, when, looking at the barrenness of the soil, and inclemency of the climate, the only grain grown being but stunted crops of tye, barley, and potatoes, of which even the natives do not take any care. Their meadows are let to the Bermagesque shepherds; and their harvests are saved in by the Tyrolese haymakers, who repair thither annually in the season, and yet they are all millionaires in floring. This weelth is accumulated in all the great cities of Europe, whither they emigrate at an early age, and in nearly all of which they are to be found exercising their art as pastrycooks, confectioners, chocolate venders, &c., in which callings they realise considerable wealth. They return to end their days in their native valley. They are all Protestants, and are is remarkable for their morality and other virtues.

Though the inns are generally but in the Engadine, yet the wine is good, and pastry excellent; and many of the inhabitants will be found intelligent and agreeable. The universal language spoken is the Ladin—adtalect of the Romansch; but several of the returned patissiers speak French, Italian, and English.

Below St. Moritz, the river leaving the lake forms a preity fall. Our road now passes through the villages of Celerina and Samaden. The latter has a population of 500, and is one of the richest in the Upper Engadine. Here the inn kept by Dr. Wettarten is good. Opposite the village we see opening up before us the road to Bernina, (see eart Ronte) ranning up the valley of Pontesina. An Elivägen leaves here daily for Coire. The path from the Albuia (see preceding Rouse seems late the valley beyond Hevers

Powr or Pure (see last Route), hes at the base of the Albula, with the ruins of the castle of Gardoval banging over the latter village. This castle has connected with its destruction a rather amgular story, to the effect, that in the days of serfdom it was owned by a licentions and brutalized seigneur, who supported an army of lawless freebooters; and has the earth big are on the feir demohrer of Alam a farmer of the village of Camogaak, and sent his servants to demand that she should be sent to him. The father stitled his anger, promised obedience to his lord's command; and next morning, accompanied by his daughter dressed in bridal attre, and attended by a number of friends, presented himself at the castle, where he was met by its libertine master, who was about to clasp his victim to his bosom, when her father's dauger was plunged into his heart, at the same instant that his companions made themselves masters of the stronghold and slew the soldiery. The castle was reduced to ruins; and from that day the serfs of the Engadine were emancipated.

Zerz or Suoz, a small village of 600 inhabitants. Here we see the old tower, which is the only remnant of the Stammhaus, a castle once owned by the Planta family, who held the flef of the Engadine as early as 1139. We here find the climate assuming a milder aspect, which perhaps is occasioned by the shelter afforded to the place against the blasts of the Maloja.

Scaufs.—A pretty village, thickly populated, more so than any other in the valley. From here we find a path over the Scaletta Pass, 7,820 feet above the sea, to Davos. At Scanfs also terminates the good road of the Upper Engadine, which is divided from the Lower Engadine at the Ponte Alto, beneath the Casannaberg. The road here is rough and steep, and the country around poor and non-nicturesque.

CERNETZ OF ZERNETS .- Inns : Poste, Lion d'Or. A pretty large village, remarkable for its beautiful church and two feudal towers. From here 6 hours' hard walking brings us to the Miinster Thal, by the Buffalora Pars, the toad to which is a char one, and should not be traversed without a guide, and runs up the opposite valley of Forno. It descends at a little less than midway into a wild and desolate valley, where we find an unn, the only house between the two places. On reaching the top of the Pass, which we do after about 21 hours' walking from the inn, we can enjoy the delightful view of the Münster Thal, where we arrive after about one and a half hours' walking from the top, arriving in two hours more at Santa Maria. We can reach Bormio, at the base of the Grand Pass of the Stelvio, by the Val Ferno.

Refore reaching the villages Lavin, Zutz, and Ardetz, the road becomes very zig-zag, winding up and down in all directions, and making a very wide sweep from the river iscre, between Ardet: and Fettan.

TARASP—The only Roman Catholic village in the Engadhe, lies opposite Fettan. The inhabitants never enigrate like their neighbours of the other villages. An excellent mineral spring near the castle, by the margin of the river, makes Tarasp very attractive just now, and causes numerous hotels, &c., ?o spring up about it. The locality is a delightful one, and the people civil and obliging, and this should be made the resting-place for travellers going up or down the Engadine, who will find excellent accommodation at the irm, Albergo Congetti.

Schuols or Schulz.—A handsome village, having who supported an army of lawless freebooters; and be the cast his eye on the fair daughter of Adam, extensive tracts of corn land. In 1679, the first Romansch translation of the Bible was printed at Schuola. Close by Remus, where we find a long wooden bridge spanning the Wrannka Tobel gorge, is very picturesque scenery; and above the bridge we see the ruins of the castle of Chiamuff, destroyed in 1475 by the Austrians.

Approaching Martinsbruck, the picturesque loveiness of the valley of the lisers is delightful in the extreme. The lisers is crossed here, and the road takes its way in a circuitous turn up a wooded cominence, which forms the boundary between Switzerland and the Tyrol. Shortly before reaching Nanders, a mile or so off from the defile of finstermina, we enter the Austrian dominions.

NAUDERS,

ROUTE 16.

Pass of the Bernina, from Samaden in the Engadine to Tirano in the Valteline, by Pontresina and Puschiavo.

Distance, 321 English miles: accomplished in about ten hours; through a bridle path, accessible for churs at both extremities, and by no means difficult or attended with danger.

From St. Mortz to Madonna di Tirano the walk is eleven hours, and the Pass is fruitful in very many magnificent views.

Persons intending to pass from Tirano to Chiawenna, should be particularly careful to have an Austrian visa to their passports, otherwise they will have to turn back an entire day's journey.

At Pontresina, between St. Moritz and Madonna di Tirano, fair accommodation is to be had.

The Bernina separates the valleys of the Engadine and the Bregaglia on the north, and Valteline on the south. Their height varies, the lowest being 8000 feet, and the highest 12,000 feet high at their summits. It is crossed by many very difficult paths, the chief one of which is called the Bernina Pass.

Departing from Samaden, the road proceeds southwards, and by the right bank of the mountain stream, Flatz; ascends the valley Pontresina, from whence there is a footpath to St. Moritz, from which place Pontresina can be reached in the same time as by the char road.

PONTERSINA .- Inn : Aigle.

At this village travellers can hire horses and guides for the ascent of the Pass. Adjoining the road, about one hour's walk above Pontresina, we see the colossal Giacler of Mortiratsh, filling the anonth of a side valley, and crowned by a number of snowy peaks.

BERNINA.—A miscrable spot below the summit, and serving as a halting place for mules, &c.

Between the small lakes called the Black Leg and the White Leg, rises the culminating point, at a height of 7180 feet above the level of the sex

A path to the east braffenes off here to the Lago corn fields close to t Bianco, and crosses the neighbouring ridge of the Vorgebirge hills.

Romansch translation of the Bible was printed at | Camin Passes, La Rosa and Piscadella, watering Schuols. Close by Remus, where we find a long | the valley of Puschiavo.

Puschiavo .- Inn : Faucon-bad.

The chief town in the valicy, built in the Italian fashion, and containing a population of 1050 souls. It has standing above it the ruined castle of Oligetiand carries on a prosperous traffic in goods.

A short distance from here there is an excellent little lake, skirted by the road, and in it very good sport can be eujoyed by the lovers of angling, as it affords beautiful trout.

Bausio is the last Swiss village we meet.

MADONNA DI TIRANO. - From here a walk of eleven hours brings us by Cavaglia to St. Moritz.

ROUTE 17.

Route up the Rhine.

For the skeleton routes to the Rhine, its navigation, and other synoptical details, see page 297.

THE RHINE.-This river, over the entire aspect and character of which the supreme architect seems to have shed brilliant streaks of glorious scenery and picturesque grandeur, is no less remarkable for the combination of natural loveliness that characterizes its scenery, than for the historical traditions interwoven with every phare of its history, representing Roman conquests and defeats; feudal events full of chivalry and daring; and of the wars and negotiations of motorn days. Its banks pos-sess an interest, as having reposing beside them the bones and ashes of emperors and heroes. It takes its rise from three small springs flowing from three different mountains. Multitudes of torrents increase it until it fulls into the Lake of Constance, which it crosses with great impetuosity for about 18 miles, passing away from it between the villages of Styger and Eschenez. The picturesque grandeur of the Rhine first shadows forth its beautiful brilliancy at the magnificent cluster of mountains called the Siebengebirge, about 20 miles above Cologne. From this place, along the banks of the river as far as Mayence, are scenes of surpassing loveliness and romantic beauty; nor can the tourist, hurriedly passing up the stream in a steam-boat, have any idea of the natural beauty and grandeur of the scenery through which he passes. A mere trip up the Rhine, as English travellers generally. confine themselves to, is nothing. Below Bonn or Godesberg, the river scenery is scarcely worth a glance. In a word, it is impossible for the tourist to explore or appreciate the beauties of the kluine, unless he halt at intervals at Boam, Coblents. St. Goar, Bingen, or Rudesheim.

Coleens to Bonn, Rolandssce, and Natumio. See page 85—journey is made by reall in two hours, and by steam-boat in about four bours. The line passes through a beautiful country corn fields close to the Rhins and adjacent to as Vorgebirge bills.

KALSCHEUREN STATION.

BEUIL STATION—A small town with about 2100 inhabitants, opposite the Chateau, erected in 1728 by the Episcopal Elector, Clement Augusta. In it are several portraits of the German Princes. It was here the King of Prussia entertained our gracious severeign Queen Victoria in 1845, when she visited it during the Beethoven festival at Bonn.

WALDORF.-The remains of a Roman aqueduct, stretching along the course of the Erft, is here.

ROSSOOR STATION.—A brilliant view of the outline of the seven mountains beyond the Rhine may be had here.

Bonn—See page 302. Here the beauties of the Rhine begin to unfold themselves. They are written on every single character that meet the eye, and painted alike on the rugged rock, the stupendous cliff, the placid face of the waters, as on the venerable castles reflected on their smooth surface.

PITTERSDORF.—Here the steamer stops to take up passengers to or from Godesberg.

Godesberg .-- Is a small village near the Rhine, containing about 1000 inhabitants. The Druitscher Brunnen mineral spring and the baths are close by it. The eastle keep, on the top of the bill, is an interesting object; it is approached by a serpentine path, and is a building of the 13th century, erected by the Archbishops of Cologne, on the site of a Roman fort. It was taken and blown up by the Bavarians in 1583. A magnificent view of the Rhine can be enjoyed from the Donjon keep, which is 100 feet high. From Godesberg excursions can be made to the volcanic hill of Rodesberg, the seven mountains. The shortest way to reach them is by crossing to Konigswinter over the Rhine by ferry-boat. A very interesting and delightful excursion, of about one day's length, may be made from the foot of the Drachenfels, by ascending the left bank of the Rhine to Rolandsbeck, and again going down the river to Konigawinter. A tour up the Arve valley can also be profitably made; and with the excursion to the seven mountains, a visit can be made to the celebrated Cistercian Abbey of Heisterbach.

Kongswinter.—Is met on the left in ascending, a village of about 1600 inhabitants, situated at the foot of the Druchenfels, the ascent of which drom here can be made in about half an hour.

THE SEVEN MOUNTAINS are seen above, and are a beautiful opening to the magnificent scenery of the Rhine. They rise in towering majesty above its banks, and are seven in number, as follows:—Stromberg, 1,053 feet; Niederstressberg, 1,066 feet; Uelberg, 1,456 feet; Wolkenberg, 1,667 feet; Drachenfels, 1,661 feet; and Lowenberg and Hemmerich. On their respective summits are the results of an anique church, or castle. Drachenfels, or the Dragon-Rock, is the most remarkable, and derives double interest from baying beau the subject of Symm's miss.

"The castled erng of Drachenfels
Frowns o'er the wide and winding Rhine,
Whose breast of waters broudly swells
Between the banks which bear the vine;
And hills all rich with blosson'd trees,
And seatter'd cities crowning these,
Whose far white walls along them shine,
Have strew'd a scene, which I should see
With double loy wert thou with me."

The summit of this mountain can be arrived at ta little less time than an hour from Konigswinter. From its top a magnificent view may be enjoyed of the country and objects all round. In our ascent up we pass the quarry from which was taken the stone used in the erection of the Cologne Cathedral. Close to the top is a very good inn where the traveller will find comfortable accommodation. and enjoy a magnificent view of the sun-rise. should be stop over night and sleep there. From here the view extends down the river for about 20 miles, closed in by high and picturesque rocks, which impart a wild aspect to the scene, greatly relieved however by the villages and farm-houses filling up the foreground. The chief objects of attraction are the summits of the Seven Mountains, the Dungeon of Godesberg, the Volcanic Chain of the Elfel, and the Island of Nonenworth. On the summit of the Lowenberg are the ruins of the castle in which Melancthon and Bucer dweit for a short period with the Archbishop Herman Von Wold. Close to Meldem we find an extinct volcano, one of the most interesting on the Rhane, called the Rodesberg. Its crater is a quarter of a mile round, and 100 feet deep. A good prospect of the Rhine may be had from the arch and turrets of the Castle of Rolandseck, approached through the Eliasschluct Gorge. The road from Rolandseck to Bemagen is carried through a rock. It was began by the Bavarians, continued by the French, and perfected by the Prussians. To the right, beyond Remagen, are to be seen the Erpeler Lei basultic precipiers, 700 feet high. Here the traveller will have cause to be delighted at the successful effort, made by industry and skill, to turn a barren rock into a fruitful vineyard. The vines flourish in luxuriant grandenr, and are planted in baskets, placed in the crevices of the basalt, where they are preserved from being washed away by the rains.

Linz.—Is on the left bank of the river, in ascending, and contains about two thousand three hundred inhabitants. The tower standing near the Rhine Gate was built by one of the Archbishops of Cologne, as a defence against the burghers of Andernach. A splendid view! s enloye! from the Pfanikiche, in which there are some very intigesting monuments, and a couple of pictures, dated 1463. The battle of Leipzig is commemorated by a cross, 40 or 50 feet high, erected on the top of the Hummelsberg, a mount to the rear of Linz, promits which the Ahr slows into the Rhine. From its mouth we can see up the Ahr valley, discerning the black conical summit of the Landskrans.

Smale.—See pag 302.—The village of Niedersbreisig is to the right with Oberbreisig and its old church close by. To the right is also seen the Castle assistants are required. These are directed by of Rheineck, built for Professor Bethman Hollweg, pilots and the proprietor, who lives on board the of Bonn. It contains some paintings by Steinie, and from its garden a very fine view may be obtained.

BRORL .- A small town on the right, near the mouth of the stream and valley of the Brold. The . Paper Mill here is worth a visit; it has a collection of ; Intch pictures. This mill, and many others, are driven by the stream, and are employed in grinding tuff stone into cement. About five miles up the valley of the Ahr is the mineral spring, called Tonistein. From Brohl an agreeable excursion can be made to the Lake of Lauch. To the left are seen the broken walls of Hammerstein Castle, erected in the 12th century, and remarkable as having been the refuge of Henry IV, of England in 1105, who fled there to avoid the persecution of his son. It was destroyed in 1660; within it is a little old church, deeply interesting.

WEISSENTHURM .- (See page 303.) -- A little further on the road leaves the Rhine, and is not seen until we near Coblenz. To the left is Engers, a small village, with a remarkably-built Château; and above it are the ruins of a Roman bridge, built, it is said, thirty eight years s.c. The ruins are seen in the bed of the river.

MULHOFLE. -- A small village to the left, at the mouth of the river Sayn. A road leading from Engers, three miles distant, and from Coblenz, eight miles distant, to the village and château of Sayn, wends up the valley. At the rear of the village of Bindorf, close by, are the Cannon Foundry and Ironworks, as large as any of the great fromworks in Lugland. The Premonstrant Abbey at Sayn, founded in 1202, will interest deeply. At the extreme point of the valley is the castle of the Counts of isenburg. The valley is certainly a delightful one, containing summerhouses, &c. It forms a favourite object of summer visits to the people of Coblenz. The venerable and noble A bay of Rommersdorf is seen on the slope of a hill north of the valley, about two miles north of Sayn, and the same distance north-east of To the left is next seen the walls of the Engera. Castle of Ehrenbreitstein.

NEUENDORF. -- Here the rafts are formed. As the traveller will see these rafts, it may be interesting to observe, they are the produce of the forests covering the hills and mountains watered by the Rhine and its tributaries,-the Necker, the Murz, Main, and Moselle. After being thrown down from their lofty heights they are felled, and cast into some stream sufficient to float them. Thus is tree after tree bound together, and conveyed from stream to stream, until floating islands are formed, which are bound into one great fabric and navigated to Dortrecht, where it is sold. As the mass floats along, it presents the appearance of a little and venerable buildings, form the most prominent village. raft, in a house built expressly for him, superior in size, &c. to the others. The workpeople are accompanied by their wives and children, and knitting, sewing, &c. are carried on during the day. A very large quantity of provisions is consumed during the voyage; so much as 46,000 lbs of bread, 31,000 lbs. of meat, 600 tuns of beer, and 8 or 10 butts of wine. The timber is sold at the end of the voyage, and often produces as much as £25,000, and oftentimes £30,000. The duration of the voyage is generally from eight days to six weeks.

To the right, near Kesselheim, are the remains of the Chateau of Schönbornlust, the residence of the Bourbon princes during their exile from I rance at the French revolution. Near the confluence of the Moselle and Rhine, to the right, is the monument to General Marceau, who fell on the field of Altenkirchen, in endeavouring to check the retreat of Jordan. Passing under the works of the Fort Emperor Francis, the road crosses the Moselle by a stone bridge, and enters Coblenz. Described at page 303.

At Coblenz the direct road to the Brunnen of Nassau leaves the Rhine. A great part of it is uninteresting, whilst some of the finest scenery of the Rhine lies between Coblenz and Bingen; and hence, to those wishing to explore its beauties, the post-road by the right bank as far as Bingen. where it crosses the river Rheingan and turns off to Wiesbaden, is preferable. In this case an excursion to Ems ought to be made, and to the Castle of Nassau, eight miles further. The cost of a carriage to Ems is 44 dollars.

The tour of the Mosente to Treves can be made from Coblenz, returning on the river by steamer; or, it not all the way to Treves, a two days excursion might be made to Munster-Maifeld, the Castle of Elz, and the village of Alf-situated on the Moselle, at a point where the most beautiful scenery exists-and to the Baths of Bertrich.

A good day's excursion can be made by carriage, from Coblenz, by the Treves post-road, through Metternich to Lorinig, to Munster-Maifeld, to the hill above Elz, where we leave the carriage, going to Gondorf, crossing the Moselle by a ferry to Niederfell, where refreshment is taken. Elz can be seen, a walk made to Moselkern or to Hatzenport, where a boat takes us down the river to Gondorfor-Cobern, where we recross the river, meet our carriage, and return to Coblenz by the right bank of a new and bad carriage road.

COBLENZ TO MAYENCE-(Distance, 57 English miles.)-There are 5 or 6 steamers daily performing the up voyage in about six hours, and the down voyage in four. Above Coblenz the long ridges of the mountains begin to hem in the Rhine, which extends as far as Bingen, flowing through a contracted gorge. An unrivalled scenery here presents itself to the eye. The broken fragments of feudal castles, the mouldering ruins of their dismantled battlements, with the walled towns vision. Leaving Coblenz we pass Forts Alexander and Constantine, situated on the right bank; and see the fortified fort which surmounts the heights of Pfaffendorf, situated above a village of the same name. Proceeding on, we pass Horchhelm, which is the last Prussian village, and see opposite to it the Island of Oberweith, on which is built the country house of Count Pfaffenhofen. Three miles or above Coblenz we see one of the most interesting castles on the Rhine, beautiful in its picturesque, outline and commanding position, it may justly be-tyled the Prond Rock. It is called the castle of Stolzenfels, and was built by one of the archbishops of Treves. The wife of the Emperor Frederick II., and sister of Henry III., King of England, was received and lodged in this eastle in 1235. A very good carriage road leads up to it, and about it there are very pretty plantations and shrubberies; it will well repay a visit. Its principal objects of attracion are the Rittersaal, an apartment painted with frescoes by Stilke. The subjects are numerous, representing very many scenes from history. In another room there is some armoury; and in it are to be seen the swords of Tilly, Blucher, Napoleon, Murat, &c. Queen Victoria, accompanied by the King of Prussia, visited it in 1845. From here to Mayence, both banks of the Lahn, and the left bank of the Khine belong to Nassau. The church of St. John, a venerable ruin, is below the mouth of the Lahn. Its choir and columns are worth inspection. At a short distance from it, on the right ! hand bank of the Lahn, is the village of Nieder-Lahnstein, whence we cross to Stolzenfels by ferry. Railway from Lahnstein to Ems. For description of Ems see page 313.

BRAUBACH-A little town to the left, standing at the base of a lofty rock, on which stands the strong and feudal fortress-the Castle of Marksburg in it is shown the cell where Henry II. was confined. It is worth a visit; and a magnificent view can be enjoyed from off the summit, of the Donjon keep. The castle is distant about seven miles from I'ms, and is approached by a very passable road. Outside the town is a beautiful mineral spring of delicious water. Persons desirous of visiting Marksburg from the left bank of the Rhine, must cross the river at Nierderspay, where there is a ferry.

MARKSEURG .- (See page 305.

We next meet the three small villages, Mittlespay, l'eterspay, and Oberspay, adjoining each other. the Rhine bends terribly at this point, and does not again resume its original position until we pass Boppart To the left, about two-and-a-half miles beyond Branbach is the Dinkholder Brunnen, a (amous mineral spring, whilst the white walls of the castle of Liebeneck rise to the left above Ostborapay.

BOFFART.-(See page 305.)-To the rear of this place is a medical boarding-house for the water cure. There is another similar establishment near the river called the Mublbed.

Approaching Salzig on the right, the mountains and every object that bursts upon the astonished; recede a little from the banks, and give place to vision. Leaving Coblenz we pass Forts Alexander; corn-fields and meadows. We next see the mouldering battlements and rained towers of the castles of Sternberg and Liebenstein opposite, to the left of Salzig, seated on a lofty rock, clothed with vines. The traditions connected with their history make them interesting. They are called the brothers, from the fact of two brothers having resided in them. The brothers fell in love with the one lady, and became foes, and fell by each other's sword.

> EHRENTHAL.—(See page 305.)—Above this is the small village of Welmich, situated at the base of a mountain. At its top are the ruins of the Castle of Thurmberg, built by Kuno V., Falkenstein, Archbishop of Freves, in 1363. It was called the Mense, to di-tinguish it from the easte called the Cat, which is above St. Goarshausen. The view obtained here is beautiful, and deserves some little lingering o'er its scenery.

ST. GOAR. - (See page 205.) To the left, some delightful excursions and views may be had from the Nassau bank of the Rhine, and boats are always at hand to bring visiters over the river to

To the right, the next object of interest we meet is Schomberg, a ruined castle built on a rock, and once the dwelling of an illustrious family of the same name, from which spring Marshal Schomberg, the general of William the Third at the battle of the Boyne, in Ireland. Gutenfels is seen to the left, a ruined castle, situated above the fown of Caub. Tradition derives its name from that of a beautiful girl called Gaudar, a favourite of Richard, Emperor of Germany, and brother of Henry III. of England. The castle was in pretty good condition until 1307, when the roof and wood-work were sold by anction, and the fine old structure became a ruin.

CAUB .- (See page 305.) - A toll is paid here to the Duke of Nassau by all vessels navigating the Rhine. The Duke is the only chieffain who exacts this feudal impost, though a couple of centuries since vessels had to pay 32 tolls on their voyage of the Rhine. Opposite Caub, in the centre of the river, we see the fine old Castle of Pfalz, built in the 13th century by the Emperor Lewis. There Louis le Débonnaire retired to die. The castle can only be approached by a ladder.

LORCH. - (See page 306.) - Approaching Bingen and Assmanshausen, we see what may be truly styled the castellated lihine. These castellated rnins, the moss-covered stones, and prostrated halls, all speak forcibly of the past; and, whilst calling up in every one of their broken particles the memory of other days, cannot but remind the student, the historian, and the traveller of the happy change which has been effected from feudal i barbarism to civil and constitutional principles. As we proceed along, we are attracted by the whilst further up, on the same bank, is the Castle of Rheinstein, built on a projecting rock that rises from the bank of the river. Not far from here, between the road and the river, rises beautiful and grand the Gothle church, dedicated to St. Clement. All, or nearly all, these strongholds of fendal robbery were destroyed at the close of the 13th century, by a decree of the Diet of the Empire. The Castle of Rheinstein is seen to the left; the ruins have been partially restored, so as to serve as a summer retreat for Prince Frederick of Prussia. The interior is well worth a minute inspection, and travellers will find no difficulty in getting access to it, there being a servant constantly there. who will shew visiters round it.

BINGEN .- (See page 306.) - The heights above Rudesheim and Assmanshausen, called the Niederwald, form a favourite excursion, which can be made in three or four hours. A boat may be taken from Bingen, and descend the Rhine to the Castle of Rheinstein in about half an hour. By crossing the Nahe in the ferry, a mile will be saved. The Rhine can again be crossed to Assmanhausen, after inspecting the eastle. And then we descend for about one mile through the gully; behind the village we find a path leading from the right to the Jagd Schloss, where refreshments can be had. This excursion can be made in about an hour, and a few minutes more suffices to bring us to the Bezauberte libble, or Magic Cave. Here three magnificent landscapes of the Rhine may be enjoyed, one different from the other, and presenting the appearonce of a beautiful diorams. The Rossel, an artificial rain, on the very outpost of the precipice, is not far from the cave; overlooking the bolsterous eddies of the Bingenloch. Here the ruin of Ehrenfels is seen clinging to the outer surface of the rock. This is one of the most magnificent views of the Rhine. Here the waters present rather a curious appearance, exhibiting three different colours. In the centre, the Khine is a cicar g. cu; the Nahe, close to the left bank, a heavy brown: and the Maine, at the right bank, a dirty red. Though the Maine joins the Rhine more than 20 miles beyond Bingen, yet the waters, it is asserted, do not mingle until their arrival at the deep pool of the Luriei. The path now again sinks into the wood, and merges, after a mile, at the Temple, a round building seen to the right. It rests on pillars, constructed on the olde of the hill. A splendid prospect extending up the Rhine and across the hills of the Bergstrasse and Odenwald, can be enjoyed here. The eye and mind will linger unconsciously on its beauties. until, after drinking in all the inspiration excited by the glorious development of the wild, the romantic, and the picturesque scenery with which it abounds, it must be confessed that it is the "loveliest landdeape on earth." We descend from the Temple in about haif an howerto, Rudesheim, by a path in the inide of vineyards.

RUDESHEIM.-Tourists can make the exentsion to the Niederwald from here. Paths also lead from here to the Temple on the right, and on the left to Jagd Castle of Reichaustein, or Falkenburg, which Schloss, and to Rossel. A picturesque old tower is stands on our left, on a lofty jut of the rock; seen at the upper end of the town. The stupendous quadrangular castle of Brömserberg stands at the other extremity. . It is a building of the 12th century, and consists of three vaulted stories, resting on walls of from ten to sixteen feet thick. Its present proprictor, Count Ingelheim, has it preserved from decay so far as possible A lofty square tower stands close to it. The castle of Brömserhof is in the centre of the town, and is interesting because of the tradition interwoven with its history. The family residence of the noble family of Brömser of Rudesheim. one of its illustrious knights, on being made prisoner by the Saracens, vowed that, if he ever returned to his native castle, he would consecrate his only daughter to the church, by devoting her to the cloister. Gisela was a beautiful girl, and loved and was beloved by a noble knight. On her father's return, he ordered her to prepare for the cell, and on her refusal threatened her with his curse. to avoid her fate, threw herself from off the battlements into the Rhine during a violent storm. Her body was found next day by some fishermen. Up to the present the villagers and fishermen fancy they see the ghost-like form of Gisela hovering over the scene of her destruction, mingling her lamentations with the sighing of the winds. The greatness and feudal grandeur of other days has now departed from the Bromserhof, its antiquities, &c., having been transferred to Johannisberg, and its area metamorphosed into common dwelling-houses. Between Kempten and Rudesheim there is a ferry that conveys parties over the Rhine. Mainz and Wiesbaden can be reached by carriages always ready for hire. The railway is now finished from Rudesheim to Wiesbaden.

> The shortest road from Bingen to Mayence is by Ingelheim. Visitors to the Brunnen of Nassau cross the ferry to Rudesheim, and proceed by the beau-tiful road by the right bank of the Rhine. Halts should be made at Rudesheim to see the Niederwald; at Johannisberg to see the chateau and vineyard; at Hattenheim to dine, and see the old Convent of Eberbach, about two miles distant from the But before setting out, an understanding should be come to with the driver, to make these stops. Visitors to Schlangenbad face to the left, turning away from the Rhine at Eltville. Parties for Wiesbaden go on to Bieberich before leaving the khine, continuing by its side to Castel and May-The distance to Castel from Rudesheim is about fourteen or fifteen miles. A scene of surpas-sing loveliness is here formed, by the mountains substiling into gentle slopes, and the ridges of the Taunus recoding to the river. The next district possesses many traits of soft picturesque beauty, delicate and sweet, mingled with richness and brilliancy.

> GRISSERBERG.—(See page 306.)—The vineyards of Johannisberg, producing the most tensors of the Rhenish wine, was the property of the lots Prince Metternich. The house was built in 1715, and was considerably enlarged by its late owner. The view ! enjoyed from its terrace and balcony is very fine. At this place the Rhine finds its greatest breadth, of 2000 feet, stretching itself out to double the width which it does near Rudesheim. Its breadth at Cologne is 1,300 fect, and at Wesel 1.500. From here up to Mayence small islands are scattered in the centre of the channel. To the right we see Winkel, called Vini Cella, from the fact of Charlemagne's wine-cellar being here. A very remarkable church, a building of the 12th century, is seen at Mittellieim, near Winkel. Proceeding on, we see to the right Reichartshausen. Count Schonborn's Chateau, a little below the village of Hattenheim, which contains about 1,200 inhabitants. In this castle there is a very fine collection of paintings. Not far from this, higher up the river, is the hill of Strahlanberg, where grows the vine which produces the famous Markobrunner wine.

ERBACH .- A small village. An excursion can be made from here, or from Hattenheim, to the Cistercian Convent of Eberbach, formerly the most important monastic establishment on the Rhine, It stands in a beautiful position at the foot of the hills, surrounded by woods that shroud It like a garment. It is a building of the 12th century, and was founded by St. Bernard de Clairvanx, but now belongs to the Duke of Nassau, and is used as a prison. Its churches, which can be easily explored, are deeply interesting. Scattered among them are some very curious monuments; those of Katzenellenbagen and Von Stein (de Lapide) are worth notice, as are also the long Dormitory and Chapter House. Up the slope of the hill, close to the Convent, is the famous Steinberg vineyard, consisting of about 100 acres. A magnificent view of the surrounding scenery can be had from the Moss-house, on the Boss, a height close by here. The new building, about half a mile from the convent, is the lunatic asylum. On the opposite side of the Rhine can be seen Ingellicim. once the favourite residence of Charlemague, but now a miserable village.

ELTVILLE .- A small town, with about 2,300 inhabitants, remarkable for its situation and picturesque Gethic towers. In the suburbs are some pretty villas. The village of Kiedrich, with its very beautiful Gothic church, lies beyond the village, in a sweet valley. It is here the Grafenberg wine is produced. A wide path, seven miles in length, leads through the woods to Schlangenbad. Nieder Walluff is to the right. Rauenthal, famous for its wine, is four miles distant.

SCHIERSTEIN, a small village, containing 1.400 inhabitants, is seen to the right, and is remarkable as being the spot where the liheingau ends; as also for the picture gallery of M. liabel, which contains many paintings by the old masters. From here is a road to Schlangenbad, eight miles distant. Frauenstein with its splendid Linden-tree, the growth of centuries and the pride of the village, is four miles from Schierstein.

ed with Castel by a bridge of boats, 1,666 feet long. built across the Rhine; carriages passing this bridge are charged a very heavy toll. Travellers can proceed from here to Frankfort, by railway in one hour, and to Wiesbaden vid Biberich in about a quarter of an hour. Excursions can be made from Mayence to Frankfort and Wiesbaden by rallway, and on their way the château and garden of Biberich can be visited. Tourists so inclined can proceed by steam-boat from Mayence to Coblenz and Cologne twice each day to Hannheim, and Strasburg, and by rail to Ludwigsbafen, (opposite Mannheim) Metz, Paris, &c.

THE AHR VALLEY .-- REMAGEN TO AHRWEILER AND ALTENAUR. -- Distance from Remagen to Altenahr, 19 English miles; from Bonn to Altenahr, by carriage road, 18 Luglish miles. The route to and from Bonn, by Remagen, will occupy a long day. A conveyance starts daily from Bonn to Altenahar, accomplishing the journey in about five hours, and to Treves in about 20, or sometimes 18 hours. At Preussischer Hof. in Remagen, a one-horse carriage may be engaged to Altenahr and back, for 3 thalers. (See foreign money.) Passengers by steamer landing at money.) Passengers by steamer landing at Lintz, and crossing the Ithine at Kripp, may engage a carriage there, or go on at once from Sinzig. The scenery of this valley is not less beautiful nor less interesting than that of the Rhine, and tourists visiting that river will find themselves amply repaid by an excursion by the valley of Ahr. This carriage-road ascends the valley by the left bank of the stream, passing by Raden-dorf and Lorsdorf, and the busalt-capped hill of Landskrone. A splendid view may be enjoyed from off the hill. Near to the road-side there is a mineral spring.

AHEWEILER-Is a small town with 1360 inhabitants, situated twelve miles distant from Remagen by the direct just road, and ten by the road over the hill. This place is rich in vineyards, and is the centre of the wine trade in the valley, which produces yearly about 76,000 English gallons. Though the town itself is pretty, yet its objects of attraction are not many. However, the town gates, its beautiful gothic church, and the Ursuline numery, situated on the opposite side of the Ahr, will attract attention and repay a visit. The gate tower also is an object of interest. Leaving Ahrweiler we meet Walporzheim, where the Burgundy grave is cultivated.

ARBELEICHART.--Here the scenery is magnifi-cently wild and beautiful, rocky cliffs towering upwards in their rugged majesty, hem in the valley, which becomes greatly contracted here. The rains of a convent are seen to the right at Marienthal, and the road is shadowed by lofty precipices. To the rear of Dornau a path is found to lead over the hills to Altenahr, whilst the carriage road continues its course along the left bank of the Ahr. passing the beautiful village of Recho.

Before entering Altenahr a brilliant scene indeed around and above us to the height of 400 feet, having scated on their highest peak the ruins of the castle of Altenahr. Above Reimerzhofen a footpath leads to the cross, where the best and most distinct view in the valley may be had. Another path on the opposite side leads up to the castle or down to the town. Travelles should send on the carriage from this spot and walk up to the cross.

ALTEVARE.—Is a small village with about five hundred inhabitants. The place is a neat and clean little spot. A good view of the windings of the Ahr can be enjoyed from the hill on the west of the town. Travellers should return to the kibine by the sweet valley of Brohl, having first visited the Abbey of Lauch, twenty miles from the vale of Ahr. If we proceed on the road by way of Ahrenburg the castle of Kreuzberg and the church of Putzfeld form prominent objects of view.

ADENAU.—A small town with about 1300 inhabitants, situated under the mountain called Hohe Acht, 2434 feet above the sea, from which a magniticent view can be obtained. Not far from the town is the ruined castle of Nurberg.

THE RHINE.—MAYENCE to SCRASBOURG by WORMS, MANNITH, and SPIRES.—A little above Mayence we notice a singular change in the aspect of the sceney; indeed it may be said the Rhine loses all its beauty. The plain through which it flows is flat and unvaried, whilst the fall of the river is not more than twenty-two or twenty-three feet between Spires and Mannheim.

Conveyance - By railway.

Steamers proceed up the Rhine daily from Mayence to Maunheim. Steamers go from Mannheim to Strasbourg daily, accomplishing the journey in about twenty-one hours, stopping at Daxlanden or Leopoldshafen to drop passeugers for Carlsruhe.

From Strasbourg to Cologne in thirty hours, and from Mayence to Rotterdam in thirty hours.

OGGERSHEIM.—To the left the Neckar joins the Rhine about a quarter of a mile below Mannheim. A bridge of boats crosse the Rhine toto MANNUMM.—(See page 307.)—A visit ought to be made from this place to Schwetzingen, distant about nine or ten miles. Its gardens are very beautiful, and its château will repay a visit. From here there is a railway to Heddeberg, (see page 76,) 16 miles distant; and to Frankfort and Carlsruhe; and from Ludwigshafen to Spires; to Kaiserslautern, Homberg, and Bexbach. Steamers also go several times a day to Mayence and Coblenz, and to Strasburg daily. We proceed from Ludwigshafen to Spires by rail, and leaving the station we see, or the side of the Kaiserstuhi, the castle of Heidelberg in the distance.

MUTTERSTADT and ScHIFFERSTADT are passed and we enter

Spines.-An old and venerable town, situate on the right bank of the Rhine. It contains population of about 10,500. At one period tl number was 27,000. The history of Spires he been a varied and remarkable one. At or period the residence of Charlemagne, and oth German Emperors, it was the sea of the Di-and the Free City of the Empire. During t middle ages imperial files, court magnificence, as citizen violence were alternately the scenes to heard of in this city. In 1689 it was burnt by t French, and was not rebuilt until after the peace ltyswick, in 1697. The revolutionary army, un Custine, besieged the city in 1794, and took it af six different assaults. In 1816 it was ceded Bavaria, since which period it has been considera enlarged, and much of its old splendour restored. Cathedralwill be well worth the tourists' notice, I old and spacious building resisted all the efforts of French miners to blow it up. The present Bava authorities have done much towards its par restoration. It has been opened for public v ship since 1824, though it was a complete rui 1816. The Hall of Antiquities, at the northside, is worth especial notice. A broken wall . the Protestant Church is the only relic now maining of the Imperial Palace, in which held twenty-nine diets. From here a good leads to Landau, and to the Castle of Trifels, prison-house of Richard Cour-de-Lion.

Calais.—Nee p. 249.—Quitting this station, the railway almost makes the circuit of the town, and passes through a country as low and flat as it is undiversible by any beauties of sylvan scenery, and passing St. Herre station, arrives at Ardres. A small festified place, situated on a canal, trom which it takes its mame, and memorable as being the vicinity of the spot, close to which, in 1520, the famous meeting took place between Henry VIII. of England and Francis I. of France. The place of meeting was called the Field of the Cloth of Gold, and is situated to the west, midway between this station and Guisnes. The next stations arrived at are places of no importance, nor is there any thing remarkable in the Scenery up to our arrival at St. Omer. - See page 268.

Departing hence, we puss Eblinghem station, and Hazebrouck, whence there is a branch line to Dunkirk. Leaving here, our journey is unmarked by any particularity of character.

We pass the stations of Strazecle, Bailleul, Steenwerck, Armentieres, and Percuchies, unmediately later which the train stops at Lille—See page 255.—Railway hence to Ghent and Brussels. Departing from Lille, we stop at the stations, Seckin, Carvin, and Leforét, before arriving at Douai--See page 252, -- From herethere is a rail-way to Valenciennes and Brussels by Mons.

Vitry and Rosux being passed, the rallway arrives at

London to Paris, via Boulogne.

This route is an agreeable one. The journey from London to Folkestone is performed through a beautiful country; the sea passage across is expeditious, and the steamboats excellent.

A steam-boat communication exists between London and Boulogue direct.

For information as to the course to be purposed.

om landing at Boulogne in reference to luggage, &c., see page xxx.

It may, however, be well to observe, that at Boulogne the baggage is not exempted from inspection, even though declared as direct for Paris.

The Railway station is opposite the harbour; and the passenger receives two lickets, one for his fare (which he should always have ready to show), the other for his luggage. At the sound of the bell he should leave the walting-room and proceed to the carriage. The distance from Houlegne to Paris is 170 English miles.

Departing from Boulogue terminus, the rallway turns a little to the west of the post road, and makes a lengthened detony, going close to the river Llane, the high grounds overhanging which form a very prefty prospect, until its arrival at Pont-de-Brique, close to a village of the same name which we do not see. To the right we see the De Clocheville château, in which Napoleon once lodged. The next station met is Neuchâtel, 8½ miles from Boulogne. Before our arrival here, the road passes through the forest of Hardelot. Close to here is condette, famous for the excellent game it affords to sportsmen, and for its large rabbit burrow. Our route from here is uninterrupted for 8½ miles, when we stop at Etaples.—17 English miles —An old town, now almost in ruins, with a population of 2700, situated on the left of the mouth of the Canche. Almost adjoining the station we see the cemetery. The road proceeds on from here by a viaduct 900 feet long, and take s in a good view of the sea and sand banks, as it approaches Montronil-Verton, 21 miles from Boulogue, a disagreeable-looking fown, situated on a hill, and remarkable for a lofty flumboyant church, with a magnificent door on the western cutrance ander the towers. From the line we see Herdin, a small town centered amid gardens, mealow-land, and water ponds, and shortly after arrive at

Rue—34 miles from Boulogne—A small but deeply interesting town. Its chief object of interest is the church of the Holy Spirit, or Saint Esprit, which will well recay a visit. Not far from here is Creey, on the fier of which Edward III. fought his battle in 1440, and hence called "the battle of Creey." Passing the station of Noyelie we arrive as

Pont Remy—54 English miles—A small village on the right bank of the Somme, remarkable for its old caste. Six miles further on is Longpré, surrounded by very pretty and picturesque suburbs. Quitting here, the road passes through deep cuttings, enclosed on either side by high grounds, and completely hemming in the view. Before resping Hangest, we see at a distance the Camp l'Etole, at old Roman fort, oval-shaped.

Hangest—6. Raglish miles from Boulogne.— Leastiful indeed in pictures que loveliness, is the country through which our route new iles. Wood and water, verdure and crystal brilliancy, contribute to heighten the loveliness of the country as we pass on to Picquigny -4 miles from Hangest—A village of 1600 inhabitants, famous in history as the place where Louis XI. and Edward IV. met to sign the treaty called after that place. The distrust of both monarchs was so great, that a barrier of strong wooden palisades was placed between them, and room enough only left them to shake hands. Close to the church we see the ruined castle, celebrated in her letters by Madame de Sévigné. Departing hence, we pass Alliy and reach Amiens - 77 English miles from Boulogne, and 93 from Paris.

London to Paris, by Southampton and Havre.

Havre,—See page 254.—The Railway departing from Havre terminus, situated close to the Cours Napoleon, passes through a street of gardens, vilias, and guinguettes, as far as Graville, which is seen to the right, a little above the road, and is interesting because of its church, built in the Norman style of architecture, and dating from the eleventh century. From here the railway proceeds along the side of a sloping hill, and takes in a lintervals a view of the Scine, whose embouchure is seen now and again between the trees and houses, until our arrival at Harfleur—A small town of no importance. Its church, a building of the fifteenth century, is surmounted by a tower and spire, and ornamented by a fringed portal, which are well worth seeing. From the terrace of the Chatcau of Orcher, on the heights above the town, a splendid view of the river can be enjoyed.

St. Romain and Benzeville are next arrived at. At the latter, the railway ascends. The road is carried over a viaduct of forty-right brick arches, the highest 106 feet above the ground, at Mirville, and requires an extra engine to enable the train to surmount the ascent.

Bolbec and Neintot-Bolbecis a manufacturing town, situated on the right bank of the river from which it takes its name. The town is located in one of the pleasant little valleys intersecting the Pays de Caux. It has a large number of cotion mills, and printwerks, bleaching-grounds, &c. Lillebonne, a venerable old town, is five miles from here, and deserves a visit, to enable the tourist to view its Roman theatre. Five miles from the last station we come to Alvimare, whence the railroad proceeds through the centre of the Pays de Caux, a high table land highly fertile, and now and again intersected by wateroourses, and siftre at Yvetot-Anindustrioustown, nearly composed at timber houses, and carrying on some manufactures in cotton, but completely barren as regards objects of interest. Its population is 9,100. Metteville and Pavilly are next passed. Leaving Pavilly, the railway descends from the table land of the l'ays de Canz into the basin in which Rouen is situated, and arrives at Barentin -A small town with 2,600 inhabiants, and the seat of some cotton mills. Coming to this station, the road is carried over a curved viaduct of twenty-seven siches, each sixty feet span. From here the railway crosses the valley of Barentin, is carried over the high grounds, and passes through the heights of Piccy Poville by a tunnel one mile and three furlongs long, sweeps over an embankment and viaduct of eight arches, arriving at Malaunay (here is the function line to Dieppe); whence it passes on to Maromme, and proceeds through a country full of mills and factories to Rouen, before reaching which station, in the Rue Verte, it has to pass through three tunnels and over a viaduct. It enters the first one close to the village of Deville, and penetrates beneath the suburbs of Causine, Beauvoisine, and St. Hilaire, near which it passes a second tunnel 1,530 yards long, takes a sweep round the Boulevards, and enters the third tunnel, which is 1,133 yards long, and carried under the hill of St. Catherine, describing a radius of nearly half a mile.

Rouen Station lies in a hole, and is shut in by escarpments of stone, excluding all view of the town-described at page 267. There is also a station on the left bank.

Leaving the Rouen Station, the rallway passes along the right bank of the Seine, through St. Etienne de Rouvray and Sotteville, to

Tourville- Where passengers get out for [Elbceuf-An exclusively manufacturing town, the Leeds of France -- having a population of 15,000, and about 20,000 weavers in the adjoining communes.] Departing from Fourville, the road passes by a short tunnel through the hill of Tourville, arriving at

Pont de l'Arche - A small town with a gothic charch, containing some curtously painted glass. A bridge of twenty-two arches crosses the Seine here. A good view can be obtained from it. The railway heaves the last station by the left bank of the Seine, and again crosses the river, before arriving at

St. Pierre de Vauvray:-[Five miles west of this station is Louviers—a manufacturing town. with thirty cloth manufactories and a number of spinning mills.] The road is carried through two tunnels, near Lo Grand Villiers, before reaching Galilon-Whence omnibuses go to Autouil and Andelys. Here is a large penitentiary; and in the distance, five miles north of the road, rises before us the Chateau Guillard - a magnificent ruin, seated on a lofty rock, at whose base the Seine flows. This was the favourite castle of Richard Cœur de Lion.

Leaving Vernon, the railway runs close by the river at the base of the high ground, to Bonnieres, at a short distance from which it goes through a tunnel 2,480 yards long, driven through a chalky and flinty bed, hard to penctrate; and, skirting off Rosny Forest—felled at one time by Sully of its timber, to the value of 100,000 francs, in order to pay his royal master's debts-arrives at Mantes-Inns:-Cheval Blancand Grand Cerf. A very handsome town, prottly situated on the margin of the Scine on the left bank. Its chief objects of interest are the Cathedral of Notre Dame. an elegant gothic building, built for Blanche of Castile and her son St. Louis; and the Tower of St. Madou. It was here that William the Conqueror received the injury which terminated in his death a few days afterwards, at Rouen. The railway now enters a cuiting, and proceeds through a beautiful country to Epone, where we see a fine church of the twelfth century. Menlan and Triel are next passed - the former, a town on the right bank of the Seine, containing several manufactories and corn mills; and the latter, a place famous for its plaster quarries.

Poissy is a small town, situated at one of the extreme points of the forest of St. Germains, on the left bank of the Seine. A cuttle market is held here every Thursday, for the supply of meat to Paris. It was the birthplace of St. Louis, who was implized in the parish church, in a font yet preserved there, and shown to visiters. Polssy is re-markable as the scene of the conference held there in 1561, for the purpose of adjusting the differences between the Calvinistic and Romish churches. Its first meeting was attended by Catherine de Medicia, and her son Charles IX. Beza, with several doctors, represented the one church; and ('ardinal Ippoloto d'Este, as l'apul legate, the other.

Maisons. -- Inns. -- Hotel Talma, and Le Petit Hayre.

It is situated in a beautiful neighbourhood of picturesque villas, &c.; and it was here that Voltairs wrote "Zaire."

The rallway crosses the Seine at Bezons by a thuber bridge of nine arches, each 100 feet, resting on stone piers. Immediately after, on our left, we come to the junction of the St. Germains line : and at Asnieres the Versailles line branches off to the right. The Seine is again crossed by a bridge of five arches, and the village of Clichy passed on the left; after which the railway enters Paris by Les Batignolles, passing through two tunnels under the Place de l'Europe, and crossing under the Rue de Stockholm, we arrive at the Paris terminus. Nancy-Supple 258

After having passed Nancy, the railway joins the canal firm the Marne to the Rhine, alongside of which it runs as tar as Varangeville. A single tridge, that of St Plin, nincteen yards wide, serves both for the railway and the canal to cross the Meurthe The line follows the valley of the Meurthe as far as I uneville. There it passes the various arms of the river over bridges of a peculiar construction thence from Luneville-a town scarcely remarkable except for its being the spot where was signed the treat; between France and Austria in 1801, eeding the Rhine as the breach boundary on mans, Port à Binson, Damery, and arrives at that side—the railway turns to the valley of the Epermay—A town of 5530 inhabitants, on the Verouse, near Marrainvillers. It ascende the stream that side—the railway turns to the valley of the of the Amiscuts, the hill which separates the waters of the Savon from the Sarre, above Richecourt, arrives at Sarrebourg, and proceeds towards Hommarting. It was at this point that it became necessary to cross the chain of the Vosges. Hommarting to Strasburg the line is 63 kilometres and 987 metres. The section between Hommattuar and the limits of the department of the Bas-Rhin comprises the immense and difficult labour of the passage of the Vosges, which is accomplished by a tunnel of 2678 yards in length. On the side of Lorraine this tunnel is placed at the left of, and on the same level as, the tunnel of the canal of the Marne to the Rhine; but, in place of remaining on that level, it descends into the mountain, becoming thus excavated under the canal, so that it reappears on the side of Alsace on the right of the canal, and 39 feet below it. Beyond that great tunnel five others of less dimensions are met-respectively, 245, 432, 395, 500, and 308 yards in length. The latter, the entrance of which presents the appearance of a foudal fortress, is immediately followed by a great viaduct which crosses the camel and the Zorn, and terminates in a cutting almost perpendicularly in the rock, and of which the form resembles that of a fort. Nothing can be more pleturesque than the country in which there works of art are to be found. The ruins of the Castle of Lutzlebourg are also to be seen above the tunnel of 450 yards, and the two Castles of Haut-Barr and Geroldseck show themselves on the mountains at this side of Saverne. The railway, on Zorne as far as Brunath. After passing Venden-heim station we arrive at Strasbourg. The Paris rallway joins that of Basle on the glacis of firasburg, and it proceeds into the town by four lines of rails.

ROUTE 22. Paris to Marseilles, by Lyons and Avignon.

The railway, after leaving Paris, Terminns Boulevard Mazzas, on the right bank of the Scine, close to the Bridge of Austerlitz, follows the bank of that river, passing Villeneuve St. George's, Montgeron, and several other unimportant stations, before its arrival at Melun-See page 257.

Bois-le-Roi-There is a fine viaduct of thirty arches, upwards of seventy feet high.

Fontainbleau.-See page 253.

Moret St. Maumes—A venerable and picturesque old town, surrounded by walls, and having an old church and castle.

Montereau.—An industrious town, commodionally situated at the junction of the Sonne and Younce, with a population of 4000. Here the train stops a few situates, and pessengers are enabled to get some refreshment. The branch railway to Troyes diverges at this point. There are two porcelain manufactorics here. Steamers ply on the Seine between this place and Paris.

Pont-sur-Yonne—Is beautifully situated, poplars. There the chateaux of the noblesse are: crowded together in large numbers.

Sens-A pretty town, with 10,200 inhabitants. situated on the Yonne and Vanne. It is remarkably clean, with little books of water running through the streets. Its principal object of attraction is its cathedral, dedicated to St. Stephen. The tracery in front of the transepts is the perfection of finaboyant detail, and the painted glass, executed by Cousin, is well worth notice. The has-reliefs around the tomb of the Chancellor Daprat, which partly escaped the general destruction, are curious. In the church there is also a monument to the Daughin, son of Louis AV, and his wife. The English traveller will be interested by a visit to the Treasury, where, among the many curious relics exhibited, are the vests, mitre, alb, girdle, stele, and maniple worn by Thomas à Becker. whilst resident here, when he fied in 1164 from the wrath of his royal master, Henry II. of England. The altar of St Thomas is pointed out as that at which Becket officiated. Departing from here the italiway proceeds on to Jelgny, passing Villeneuve, Le Roi, or Sur Youne (in this neighbourhood and town the lover of sketching will find simple food for study), and St. Julien du Sault stations. Joigny - Inn: Duc de Bourgogne.

A town of 6000 inhabitants, beautifully situated on the Yome, which is promeneded from one side to the other by a fine quay closed on either end by an fron rate. In the old town, which is searcely accessible, there are three Gothic churches worth a visit. Coaches daily to Arserie, Verneauton, Clammiz, and Nevers.

Brienon is next urrived at, a small pretty town, carrying on an extensive trade in linen, coals, and corn.

St. Florentin -- A neat town, remarkable for its Gothic church.

About fourteen miles off is the Abboy of Poniligney, the retrient of Thomas & Becket. Here there is a museum, baths, and theatre, and manufactories of cotton, silk, and velvet. Coaches to Auxeric, Vermanton, Vezelay, Chimaz, La Charite, and Nevers.

Flogny—The railway is corried through the valley of the Armançon, and follows the course of the Canal de Bourgogne.

Tonnerre-Inn: Poste.

An old and dult town, built on the slope of a hill, and having a population of 1000. Ons. the summit of the Lill is the church of St. Pierre, commanding a magnificent view of the town frust its rocky platform. In it is a marble monument of Marguerite of Hoangone, Queen of Skilly, and wife of Charles I. of Anjou, which is very interesting. She founded the grand hospital in the town, and richly endowed it. An exquisitely sculptured offly of her in the dress of the period reposes of the remote and the comments.

Tanlay—128 English miles.—We here see one of the fluest chafteaux in Burgundy, built by Admiral Coligny, the kader of the protestants, and first viotim of the massure of St. Bartholomew very pretty grounds.

Nuits-Sous-Rayler--1401 Eng. miles ---A small town, nicely situated in the midst of the vineyards Romana, Richebourg La Tache, &c. Passing thes tation at Aisy, we proceed through a famous vineyard country, ontering the department of Cated'Or.

Montbard-1511 English miles -- Inn :-- Point du Jour.

A small and dirty town, possessing no objects of Interest, and only remarkable as having been the hirthplace of the celebrated naturalist Buffon, who Hved in the château now occupied by the widow of his son, who was one of the first victims of the guillotine at the revolution. The railway here passes through cuttings and embankments, winding round hills and mountains; and the traveller cannot but feel that it was a great triumph of human science to effect the construction of a railway, in much a situation.

Conches from here to Autun, Senuer, Sanlieu, Chatillon, and Langres.

Les Laumes and Verray are passed before we arrive at Blaissy station, where we enter the tunnel of Elaissy, which cost more than £90,000, and is 21 miles long.

Dilon -- See page 252. From here the railroad takes us on by Gevrey and Vougeot stations, through vineyards famous for their wines and the tichness of the land. There is also a branch Radway from this town to Dole, and Besancon, see page 41.

Nuits, and thence by Corgoloin to Beaune . Inns : Poste, and Hotel d'Angleterro. A prosperous town, having a population of 11,700, in the department Côte-d'Or. It is the chief seat of the wine trade in Burgundy, and is beautifully situated in a sweet and romantic plain, on the Bouzeoise and Aigne. It exports annually wine to the amount of 40,000 butts. Its chief objects of interest are the Hospital, and the altar in the church of Notre Dame, wrought of five different species of marble. Twelve miles S. W., at Caessy la Colonne, is a Roman monument in the shape of a pillar, bearing bas-reliefs, and said to have been erected to commenorate a victory of Julius Casar over the Swiss. Its access is very disagreeable and inconvenient, rendered so by the cross-roads met with at every turn of our journey.

Coaches daily to Autum. From here the railway proceeds through a beautiful wine country, the scenery of which is interesting in the extreme, and arrives by Meursault station at Chagny -A town full of objects worthy the sketcher's notice and study, particularly in the demestic architectural style. The tower of the church is also very striking. Here terminates the range of the Côte-d'Or. From here the view takes in a scattered line of lower hills, whose slopes are less rich, and whose plains are less verdant.

Chalons-sur-Saone—See page 250.
DESCENT OF THE SAGNE—CHALONS TO LYONS. from Chalons the tourist can proceed on to Lyons Ballway, (page 16), by sharner or by the diligence | richly wooded heights of Mont d'Or, 1000 feet als

we see another magnificent chateau, surrounded by | travelling by the post road, which is good, and interestingly picturesque.

Steamboats start daily. For particulars in reference to distance, hours of sailing, &c., see Alphabetical List of Steamers. The traveller can complete his journey from here to Lyons in about. 6 hours, and returning in about 8 hours. The voyage is described as far preferable to the land journey.

Leaving Chalons, the banks on either side are at first rather uninteresting, but brighten up as we approach Lyons. Passing opposite the mouth of the Canal du Centre, we sail into a canal which saves the boat a long round, and see on the right, Tournus -Inns :- Stuvage, and De l'Europe. A town of 5400 inhabitants, It has a church deeply interesting to the architectural student. Greuz, the celebrated painter, who died at Paris in 1805, was born here. At Fleurville, on the left, there is a bridge over the Saone under which the boat passes, and gets into a larger expanse of water. To the left we see St. Albin, with its carly pointed Gothic church, and its picture-quely attired villagers. Here the scenery is delightful; the slopes are all covered with vineyards-224 miles from Chalons.

Right -- Macon -- Inns: -Le Sauvage, and De l'Europe - 38 miles from Chalons.

Remarkable as the birthplace of the illustrious living poet, philosopher, and statesman, M. Alphonse de Lamartine. It is the centre of the wine trade of its arrondissement, and chief town of the Department Saone-et-Loire, and has a population of 12,200. It was the scene of terrible disaster and outrages perpetrated by the Huguenots and Revolutionists. Here a bridge of 13 arches spans the river, and from it a magnificent view of Mount Blane may be enjoyed, but still better from the little explanate planted with trees behind it. In the immediate neighbourhood also are very fine views of the ranges of the hills of the Bourbonnois and Charolois.

Railway to Ambereau and Geneva.

Below Macon the banks of the river become more elevated and picturesque, taking in on the east a view of the Jura Mountains, the less remote hills being studded with exceedingly pretty white chiteaux and villages. To the west we see the Château de Corielles, flanked by four round towers.

Left -- Trevoux (684 miles from Chalons) an old town, beautifully situated on the slope of a hill, which is surmounted by the ruins of an old castle. It has a population of 2,000; and was the place where the Jesuits compiled and printed the learned works called the "Journal de Trevoux, and Dietionuaire de Trevoux." We sail on from here between banks thickly arrayed in picturesque villas, and surrounded by very delightful scenery. The river becomes greatly contracted in width, and passes on the right by Helle Re, and under the

the river. Neuville is seen on the left, and near it many flotilias drawn by horses. To the right is Couson, opposite

La Roche Taillee, on the left, so designated froms cutting caused to be made by Agripps through it, to effect a passage for one of the great Roman highways. Further down we see L'lle Barbe---an island on the river nearly surrounded by escarped rocks, and linked to either bank by a suspension bridge. It was, we are told, a favoritie retreat for Charlemagne, who, from the kind of watch-tower at the upper extremity of the isle, frequently watched his army marching along the banks. In the island is a chapel of the twelfth century, and many curious fragments of Roman antiquities. As we enter Lyons under the heights which here border the river, and called Croix Rousse, we must be forcibly reminded of the passage of the Avon into Bristol, under the slopes of Durdham and Kingsdown, and the rocks of Clifton hot-well. The resemblance would be perfect were the river raone less in size, and the cliffs less in height.

LYONS TO AVIGNON, BY THE RHONE.

The boats are anything but clean, and are generally overloaded with inerchandles. They start from the right bank Leaving Lyons, we pass on our right the junction of the Saône with the Rhone, and sail by the wire suspension bridge of the Mulatiere, and see close to the water's edge the rallway to St. Etienne. The scenery by railway or steamer is picturesque in the extreme, being enlivened by a series of variegated landscapes.

Givors, on the right—an important place, cause of its position on the railway, and of the trade which it carries on in glass. It is situated at the mouth of a canal, and has a population of about 5000. Conveyances run between Givors and Vienne, in correspondence with the railway trains.

Vienne—Situated on the left bank, has a population of 18,000, and is faced by a handsome quay, situated at the base of precipitous rocks. It is one of the most ancient towns in 1-rance. It is one of the most ancient towns in 1-rance. It is one of the most ancient towns in 1-rance in the following the following the following the following as a museum, in which are a large number of architectural fragments. The Cathedrai of St. Maurice, and the Romanesque tower of St. André le Bas, will also be found deserving notice. This place is also interesting as the cradie of christianity in the vest. On the right is St. Colombe, connected with Ylenne by a suspension bridge. There is a square tower, aimset in ruins, called the Tour de Mauconsell, in consequence of some abbard tradition, that Pontius Pliate threw himself off it. Immediately below Ylenne, to the right, we see standing a Roman obelisk seventy-six feet high, called l'Alguille. On our right we see the picturesque outline of Mont Pilas, 4016 feet above the sea, and Ampiana ancal village—on the same side. Diligence deally to Grenoble, and Lyons and omaibuses to Givors, by the right bank of the Rhone, to meet the railway at St. Ettenne.

Standing on a terrace above the Rhons. Population, 4100. In the neighbourhood are some picturesque ruins, and St. Ruche Taillée. Sailing fromehere we see to the left the Chateau de Ponsas, a splendid object, with frowning 80wers and battlements. An absurd tradition would have us suppose that in it Pontins Plate ended his days. They valley of the Rhone is near; and as we approach, passing a lofty, round-topped hill on our left, called the Roo, on the south side of which is the celebrated viney and Filterndiage, we see Tain, a small-town of 2400 inhabitants, connected by a suspension; bridge of whe with Tournon on the right, one of the chief towns of the department of De la Rouche, with about 4000-inhabitants. Above the bridge we see the picturesque towers of a castle. Below the bridge we see the College Royal, founded by the Cardinal de. Fournon, in 1542. The valley of the river Isers now opens up into a wide and monotonous plain, the vista through the valley being terminated by the snowy mass of Mout Blane rising among the Alps of Dauphine, a splendid sight, though 10 or 112 miles distant. From here we sail in view of fallia, covered with vineyands, and as we approach. For Railway, see Time Tables.

The slopes of the hitis all about are covered with vineyards which produce excellent wines.

On the right there is an ugly line of limestons cliffs. Hounding the west side of the Rhene valley, and further down on the same side, on the summing of the same escarpment, stands the ruins of Soyens castle; and on the left the Rochs Courbe, which, when first seen, appears a cleft with precipious sides, but a little further down, a series of peaks.

L-Etolie, a sweet little village; and LAVOUTTE, a small town striking from the castle on the top of a hill over it, and for the smoke encircling it in blue wreaths as it comes from the furnaces at its base.

Poussin—A diministry but industrious town with a suspension bridge. The road next passes through the towns of Levren and Orich, Cruss a singular abbey on a hill.

. Montelimar, -Stat .- INN .- Post

An old and venerable town of 8000 inhabitants, surrounded by ramparts. Its chief source of influstry is the manufacture of Morocco leather and soap. Opposite here is Theil, where the suspension bridge across the Khone was swept away by the flood in 1840. At this point the scenery is brilliant and beautiful.

Veriers - A small town of 2800 inhabitants. Its chief buildings are the college and cathedral. On the left we see the magnificent top of Mont Venteaux, the extreme point of the French Alps, seen on our route up to Avignon from here. Below Veylers the river widens up, and is intersected by numerous Islands. A new bridge has been erected in place of the one destroyed in 1840. It crosses at Bourg St. Andéol—a town of 4500 souls, built on the rock. Here persons leave the steamer for Orange. Opposite here, but 14 miles distant, is Pierrelatte, named from the colossal mass of rock rising from out the plain in its rear. To the right the Ardeche discharges its waters into the Rhone. About two miles lower down, we reach Pont Esprit, and passing the mouth of the Drome, we reach Anconne, where the river makes a great bend. From here we proceed to Pont St. Esprit.—A small town, having a pophilation of 5000, with a strong citadel. It possesses one of the longest bridges in the world, 2718 test long, built in 1810. It occupied forty-five years in building, and has nineteen arches, besides four small land arches. At St. Esprit the raver becomes a zapid current; and after paying by the Aignes, a glumpse can be attained of a colossal structure on a hill. The next important town met with is An ancient town, situated three miles east of the Rhone, with a population of about 980a, its chief objects of interest are the Roman remains,—the triumpital arch, and the Roman theatre. Below Orange the Rhone traverses a wide plain. Requename is seen on the right, and on the left Chateauneut, shortly after leaving which, we see the spires and towers of Valson, fifteen miles N. E. 56 Orange, which has some curious ancient remains.

Avience to Marsellles.—Distance, 74 English Silles - Quitting the Avignon Terminus, the railway igns in a direct course on the left bank of the islance, crossing the feaming stream of the Durance by a vinduct 650 yards long, three miles south of dayignon. The route proceeds from here through a country whose rugged williness and uninteresting sequency render it quite dull and spiritless in objects of attractive interest. We see Barbantane, famons for its extensive quarries on our left, and running from east to west, the barren hills called Alpines, with the white-washed walls of the houses of St. Eveny, and its two Roman monuments in their rear; whilst at the other side of the river, four or five miles distance, can be seen Aramen, a town with 3000 inhabitants. Regnons and Cadillan stations are next passed. Not far remote we see the colorsal squared castle of Tarascon on our left, with the large spire of the Gothic church rising above it; whilst on our right we see Beaucaire, nestled at the Bott of a mass of naked rock. The railway function to Nismes and Montpoliier is at

Tarascon.-Inn: Ifotel des Empereurs.

A town with a population of 11,200. It contains no objects of attraction worth notice, save the Church of St. Martin, a building in the pointed Gothic style of the 14th century, the southern portal excepted, which is of the circular style, with deep mouldings. The crypt contains the shrine and marble edilgy of St. Martha, whose history is represented by several bes-reliefs. The castle, a massive and well preserved structure, erected in 1400 by Henri III, and for a long period the residence of King Koné, but now used as a prison, may also be mentioned.

Beaucaire .- Inn : Hotel du Luxembourg.

Is situated at the mouth of the Canal du-Beaucaire, connecting the Rhone and Gaionne, and has a population of 10,000. Beaucaire is celebrated for its fair, at which usually assemble over 100,000 persons from all parts of the world. The ruined castle stands on the summit of a rock. its only remains being now a triangular tower, and a very old Romane-sque chapel, in which we are told St. Louis heard mass previous to his embarkation for the crusade. From the fragmental portion of it now existing an excellent view can be had. Excursions from Tarascon can be made to St. Remy and St. Giles, and to Les Beaux, a town without a modern building, having only 200 inhabitants, and being a perfect specimen of the towns of the middle ages. The deep debris of mud spread over a large quantity of waste land, on the right, close to the Bridge of Beaucaire, is the remains of the inundation of 1840, when the Rhone overflowed its banks and desolated the surrounding plain.

Quitting Tarascon, the railway takes its course through a country unpicturesque in the extreme. It is divided by ditches, and is altogether a marshy and uninteresting plain. Ségomanx station is passed before our arrival at Aries, two miles from which on the left are the ruins of the great Abbey of Montmajeur, seated on a rock, whose singular form and ascent from a pond will strike the he-holder as singular. On the north-east side, at the foot of the rock, is a remarkable chapel, built in the Romanesque style, but without ornament. On our left, I miles or so from Arles, we see the Rhouse branching off into two division, the Petit Rhouse flowing westwards, and crossed by a suspension bridge at Fourques.

From Arles, south and cast to the sea meerly se far as Marseilles, stretches a wide and unbroken plain, which takes in the delta of the Rhone, and which will present some scenes worthy of a little study. It is scarcely dissimilar to Africa in climate and sand, marshes and lagoons. On it congregate u variety of birds peculiar to the African clime. Departing from Aries, the railway leaves the Rhone, and takes a south-east direction, issues from the Aliscamp, and passes over a long viaduct, which carries it to the low grounds about. It next passes over a stony plain called the Crau, which stretches itself south to the Mediterranean; and passing the unimportant stations Raphele, St. Martin, Entressen, and Constantine, (four miles from which is Salon, a thriving and industrious town with 6200 inhabitants.) radistes around the Ftang de Berre, a small mland sea, and arrives at St. Charney station, a town on the Etang de Berre, with a population of 2500, having an old church, and a government powder-mill. Just outside the town is the Pont Flavien, a Roman bridge that stans the Touloubere, and is arrived at by triumphal arches at either end. The railway in its course from here to Marseilles, is carried over many ridges and ravines by tunnels and embankments, passing the unimportant stations of Berre, Rognac, and Pas de Lancier, previous to arriving at Marsellles, which it enters emerging from a tunnel 492 vards long.

Marseilles .- See page 257.

Nismes to Tarascon, and thence to Marseilles, by Beaucaire and Arles.

From Nismus there are trains several times duly, see Time Tables. The railway passes through a delightful species of scenery made up of live grounds and vineyards, and is carried along the edge of a hill overlooking the filtone and Canal of Cette. The distance to Beaucaire is 15 English miles. The thone is crossed by a bridge of 7 arches and joins the Marseilles and Avignon line at Tarascon. For notices of Heaucaire, Tarascon, and railway thence to Marseilles, see preceding Route.

ROUTE 24.

Paris to Nantes, by Orleans and Tours.

For particulars as to fares, distance, hours of arrival and departure, see Time Tables.

The railway leaves the terminus, situated in the Boulevard de l'Hôpital, close to the Jardin des Plantes, and skirts the Hospital of Salpetrère, directing its course along a pretty and picturesque country by the base of the alopes bordering the left bank of the Schie. It passes sweet gardens, and some houses on the river's bank; a kirts the walls of Vitry and Joisy on the right, and reaches

Choisy—a thriving and manufacturing town of 4000 inhabitants. Here is a china manufactory, and also the largest morocco manufactory in France. On the heights above, to the right, is the village and Château of Orly. Leaving here, we approach the vine-clad slopes limiting the valley of the Scine, and pass

Ablon all nest villes, and arrive at Juvisy Station—a very old spot, and occupying a position at the foot of a hill on the right.

Here the branch rallway to Corbell separator from the main line to Orleans, turning off to the left, and running near the high road to Lyons, but preserving its course along the margin of the Scine, it passes liks Station, and cuts through a part of the park of Petit Bourg, arriving from Evry Station at Corbeil.--- Sec page 252.

Leaving Juvisy, our route curves a little to the west, crossing the high road to Orge, and enters the valley of the Orge, traversing the gardens of Savigny—a small village with a handsough castle—and approaches by a vadure Epernary station; next, skirts on the left the Forest of St. Geneviere, and traverses a portion of the park of the Château d'Ormay hebitors reaching St. Michel, whence the rullway passes through handlets known as Bretigny station, beyond which, after attaining a summit level, it descends into the valley of the Juline, and immediately after arrives at Matolles, and passes thence lourary, Lardy, and Etre, by, and runs parallel with the post road before its arrival at Etampes, an old town, with a population of 10,000, carrying on an industrious and thriving rate in flou and wool. Its testile church, called Notre Dame, and the church of St. Martin, together; with the remains of the royal castle, are worth accing. The Hotel de Ville will interest as agreed to building. From here omnibuses go twice a day of 1 bithrees.

Monnerville.— Here the railway crosses on viaducts the river Chalencie, ascends the valley of Hernery until it reaches the high plain of La. Beauce, and crosses the post read by a bridge before arriving at

From here to Tours the railway serpentines along the right bank of the Loire, whose course lies through a wide valley, barred a little by ansah hills, whose slopes are covered with vineyards. The accnery, though rather sunny, is yet somewhat dreary and uninteresting. La Chapelle, and Ay, a small town on the right bank of the river with a population of 1200. Lord Bolinghroke lived here during his extle from Lugland, and built the Châtean du Loiret. It has a very fine church character of the Virgin in black marble, before which Louis XI., whose tomb light this church, spent so many hours in prayer.

Meung Station.

Beaugency.—An old town, with a population of 5000, handsomely situated between two hills. The Donjon Keep Castle, and Hotel de Ville are the only objects of attraction within its walk. It cerries on a brisk trade in wine, and brandy, and is the seat of several manufactories for woollen cloth, leather, &c.

Mer.—A sweet village, delightfully ensconced in the midst of country house and villas. to Madaine de Pompadour.

Leaving Blois, the railway wends its way through, and commands a view of a fine and fertile plain. It passes Chonsy, Ouzain, and Limeray, and reaches Amboise. Inns: Lion d'or; La Boule d'or. An old town, situated on the left bank of the Loire, with a population of 5000. Its principal object of attraction is the Castle, long the residence of the Kings of France, and the property of the late Louis Philippo. The gardens are well-kept, but it is the Chapel which will well repay the tourist's visit; it is one of the most exquisite specimens of the protusely florid Gothle style in France.

Departing from Ambolse, the railway is carried along the Loire to Noizay and Vernau.

Vouvray .-- Lere the railway crosses the Loire by a bridge to the left bank. Mont Louis being rassed, we arrive at Tours .- See page 269.

Quitting Tours, the railway directs its course by the left bank of the Loire, passes St. Symphorien on the right-a pretty suburb of Tours, adjoining the sweet hamlet of St. Cyr, close to which, in a neat cottage, lived the poet Beranger- and arrives at Savonnières station, whence it proceeds on to Cinq St. Mars, while it crosses the Loire over a bridge of nineteen arches.

Cinq Mars .- Close to this spot is the very old and rather curious monument, known as La Pile de Cinq Mars, a square tower built of brick, whose history is lost in the night of ages. It was originally planacted on each side. It is ninety two feet high, and thirteen feet wide; and has on the south side the bricks arranged in twelve compartments. From the last station the railway passes through a country full of villages hewn out of a yellow chalk rock.

Langeais .- A small but pretty town, situated at the mouth of the valley which opens into the Loire. It has at its rear very many limestone cliffs, on the summit of one of which stands an old castle, from whose turret a magnificent view of the surrounding country can be had. The castle was built in the 12th century; and had celebrated within its walls the marriage of Charles VIII, with Anne of Brittany.

St. Patrice. - Adjacent to this is the Chateau of Rochecotte, the property of the Princess of Talleyrand, nince to the celebrated French statesman of that name.

The next stations arrived at are of no importance : La Ch. Loire, Port Boulet, and Varennes. Our route hence lies through a country remarkable for its large number of windmills, to be seen flapping and fluttering on the heights at either side of our route. Approaching Samur, we see, beneath the heights, the church of Notre Dame des Ardilliers. On its cupols is written a record, commemorative of the suppression of religious freedom by Louis XIV. Attached to this church is the Hospics de ia Providence, once a convent.

Saumur.-Inns: Hotel Budan, and Belvidere. A sweet and picturesque town, containing $200 inhabitants. The town, seen from the river, looks Temarkably pretty. The quay is a very nice Monars..-Here is the Chateau which belonged | one ; and has standing on it the Hotel de Ville, an antique building of white and black stone, made to serve the double purpose of market-house and townhall. Its castellated character, and beautiful Gothic ornaments, will repay a minute inspection. The Museum will be found in its upper story, and will present a very respectable collection of antiquities. Among its chief curlosities may be enumerated a Roman trumpet five feet long, and several Celtic remains. Its chief church is that of St. Pierre, which possesses nothing remarkable in connection with it. The church of Notre Dame, which is older, will rather interest the antiquarian and architectural student.

The castle stands prominently forward on the summit of a hill, rising above the town almost in a perpendicular position. It commands a brilliant view of the Loire and outlying country. The prosperity of Saumur was destroyed by the restoration of the Edict of Nantes, by which all the Protestants were expelled; and the population, which was 26,000, under the governorship of Mornay, the Protestant leader, became reduced to less than three fourths.

The Ecole de Cavalerie stands on the right hand as you leave the main street. Upwards of 3000 young men are here trained for the army. In the Rue du l'etit Mail one can yet discern the remains of the old fortifications, consisting of a prison house and two fendal towers. A house built by King René of Anjou, called the Maison de la Reine Cicile. stands in the Quartier du l'onts; but is so defaced, that no traces of its once beautiful and exquisitely ornamented front can be seen

Not far from Sauniur, on the south side, we see the Dolmen of Pontigne, one of the most perfect and largest Druidical specimens in France. kind of cot, measuring fifty feet in length, but yet built of only fourteen stones, the largest of which is 24 feet by 21 feet, and 2‡ feet thick. The road by which these Druidical memorials are approached, leads over a pretty bridge, and by the village of Bagneaux, near which they are to be found.

From here diligences go daily to Le Mans, Chinon, Cholet, Politiers, and Bourdeaux, to Neost and Sainte Rochefort.

The railway departing from last station, passes St. Martin's station and arrives at

Les Rosiers .- On the left, just opposite this place we see, standing on the top of a hill, the church of Gennes. We also see, on our route be-tween here and St. Mathurin, on our left the colossal convent buildings of St. Maur: historically interesting because of being the retreat of the learned Benedictine monks who, in 1621, compiled an im mense number of learned and valuable works. which have proved a treasure to literature

St. Mathurin .- Herethisrond leaves the Laire, and does not again join it for a distance of twenty miles. La Bohalle, Trélazé, La Paperie, places of no importance, are next passed. Below the latter we see the Loire split up with kinds of channels, by very many islands which are crossed by bridges difficult to pass under or over.

ANGERS TO NANTEE.—The railway from here runs parallel with the bank of the river. The first stations met with are Bouchemain and

La Pointe—This is rendered a very pretty spot by the large number of white villas and cottages, belonging to the inhabitants of Angers. Close to this spot the railway crosses the Maine. The Loire gets deep and large below its junction with the Maine, and its banks become higher and more precipitous.

Several unimportant stations are passed between here and Champtocé. They are as follows, and require no special notice: Les Foyes. La Poissonniere, and Chalons. Here, to the left, we see a beautiful eminence, surmounted by the ruins of Champtoce-A small and pretty village, situated on the post road. Here are the ruins of the feudal castle once owned by the infamous Gilles de Retzstein de Laval, called Barbe Bleue-- the same who furnished the original of the well-known story called Blue Beard. His history is one of the most diabolical on record. Having impaired his constitution and fortune by excesses, he engaged an Italian magician to renovate them by magic. his suzerain induced him to believe -that a charm might be produced from the blood of infants and young persons, which would restore him to life and fortune. To procure the blood, numerous infants and young girls were ravished away, and murdered by the ruffian himself, to the number of 100. The country rose up against him. He was tried, found guilty, and burned at the stake at Nantes, confessing his crimes.

Ingrande—Ā small place, consisting of a long range of houses, standing on the line which formerly marked the boundary of Brittany and Anjon. Between here and Varades we see on the right Montrelais, where there are extensive coal-helds. On the left we see the hills of St. Florent, containing the large but disagreeable-looking rules of the Abbey of Mintiglonne, destroyed during the revolutionary fury; and immediately below it the church of St. Florent, at the side of which there stands a pillar to the memory of the Vandeau Garral Bouchamps, to whose mamory a marble monument is erected within the church. Between St. Florent we see an lafand, which divides the river.

Varades — Atown of 4200 inhabitants, remarkable as the spot where the remnant of the Vendéean army waited for their companions, on their crossing the Loire after their defeat.

Ancenia-Inn: Hotel de France.

A small town of about 4300 inhabitants, with the remains of an old castle at the water's side. To the left we see, standing on the summit of a hill, the ruined castle of Champtoceaux.

Oudon—liere we see on our right the black eight-sided tower of funder, five stories high, and a structure of the fifteenth century. Passing several dwarfish imitations of castle building, we reach

Clermont—Remarkable for its castle—one of the most beautiful ruins on the Loire, but without any historical associations. The somewhat rugged heights new give way to gentle undulations, which below Maures change again into a flat plain. Maures—Shortly after leaving here, the towers and steeples of Nantes are seen rising in the disvence. We pass Thouare and St. Luce stations; before arriving at

From Tours to Poitiers.

Tours—See page 269.

The railway, immediately after leaving Tours, crosses the Cher on a bridge 590 feet long; after which it is carried over the valley of the Indre by a viaduct 2624 feet long, 65 feet high, and 30 fees in span. On our way out of the city we see, at the end of an avenue 24 miles long, the chatcan dis, Grammont, once the property of the archibishop of Tours. Monts and Villeperduc are passed, and Montbason arrived at a small town, very inconsiderable both in population and trade. The castle seen standing on the rock over the town, is the only object worth notice in connection with it.

Savigny—A place of no importance. On the left is the chapel dedicated to St. Catherina de Furbols, in which was deposited the sword, marked by five crosses, worn by the Maid of Orleans, Joan of Arc, who, it is asserted by the credulous, was inspired in her knowledge as to where it lay.

This part of the route has to be traversed overrivers and streams, on viaducts, and the ridges dividing the different valleys.

St. Maure From here a road branches off to Chinon; and at Port-de-Piles we cross the Crome, not far above its junction with the Vienne. On our route from here to Les Ormes we pass, three mites distant on the left of our road, La Haye, where the celebrated philosopher Descartes was born.

Les Ormes—Remarkable for its chatean, the property of the family of d'Argenson. From here the railway directs its course in a parallel line with the river Vienne, in its passage through the stations Dange and Ingrande.

Chatellerault—inne: Hotel de l'Esperance, and Tête Noir.

This town may be called the Sheffield of France. It is rather a disagreeable place, situated on the right hank of the Vienne, and has a population of 95:00; 600 families out of that number are generally employed in the manufacture of cuttery. The duchy of Chateller and was given to the Earl of Arran in 1548 by Henry II., as a bribe to induce hun to consent to the manufacture in the infant Queen of Scotland, with the Danphist It afterwards became forf-fited to the crown, which it still remains an appendage.

Departing from here, the sullway crosses the Vienne, and passes the stations Barroa-de-Nistré and i.s. Tricherte ... the course of its ascent up the valley of the Clain, from which it passes through very beautiful and agreeable scenary, to

Angouleme to Bordeaux.

Angouleme. -- See page 244.

Departing from here, the railway passes numerous small stations, and proceeds through a country protty fair in its scenery and aspect, to Libourne -Inns. Hotelde France. De Princes. A town situated on the right bank of the Dordogne, with a population of 19,000. The town is pretty and well built, and is one of the free towns founded by Edward I.

A very delightful and interesting excursion can be made from here to St. Emilion, up the valley of the Dordogne-one of the oldest towns in France, as famous for its wine as for its antiquity. It stands in a cavine; and many of the houses in it can be said to be nothing more than caves cut out of the rock. Its old and called castle will attract attenthan by the singularity of its appearance. church and its cloister are also worth seeing. tillon lies twelve miles S.E. of St. Emilion; and three miles from the former place is the Château of St. Michel de Montaigne, the birth-place of Montaigne the essayist and philosopher. His house still exists there; and the room in which his library was, is yet preserved, and has inscribed upon the roof several Greek and Latin sentences.

The railway leaves Libourne, and takes its way through a very interesting country, rich in pasture and raral beauty, yet of so commonplace a character, as to require no special notice. The stations between Libourne are as follows, but all unimportant ones: Vayres, St. Sulplea, St. Loubes, La Grave d'Ambures, and Lormont, which is two miles and a hulf from

ROUTE 27.

Paris to Toniouse, by Orleans and Limoges.

Rallway to Orleans,

For description of route between Paris and Oreans, see route 24.

Orleans to TouLouse,-Distance, 358 English miles.

The railway carries us on as far as Argenton, whence we perform the remaining portion of the journey by malleposte. Diligences start dally. The railway crosses the Letre by a bridge, and pursues its course in almost parallel proximity to the post-road, 6 Wering the tunnel of P'Allonet, 1236 metres long. It leaves the suburbs of Orleans through a country full of villages and sweet villas, stoses the Loiret by a bridge, close to which was Chateau of La Source. From here up to Vierzon, the ratiway passes through a country bleak undiremified, and monotonous, and certainly without any points of interesting scenery, arriving first at cheerless scenery just passed through, and enters the valley of the Cher, which is well cultivated, possessing many vineyards, and interspersed with some pretty scenery along its borders. We cross the Evre and Chur immediately after leaving Vierzon, and pass by Chery, Reuilly, St. Lizzigne, Issondun, and Neuvy-Pailloux stations, before arriving at Chateauroux—See page 251.

From here we traverse a very dreary country as far as Argenton, a small village on the Creuse, and thence, passing some unimportant stations reach Travellers who desire to see a curious and remarkable church of the eleventh century, will find one at St. Junien, eighteen miles from Limoges. contains a curious altar and sarcophagus, curiously carved in white marble, in the Byzantine style.

At Boisseul, we pass on our left the ruins of the Castle of Chalusset, standing on a single rock, and serving as a curious specimen of the fortified castics of the middle ages.

From here to Brives the scenery is charming. Landscapes, hill and dale, plain and valley, rich in luxuriant beauty, form its chief characteristics. The following towns are passed in the interval: Pierre Buftere, Beausoleil, and Uzerche, a pretty town, seated on a hill of conteal aspect, remarkable for its church. At this point a roud leads to Tulle-Inn: Hotel de Lyon.

A song little town, with a population of 8200. The country in and about Uzerche is very pretty. No one can help being struck with the beauty of the surrounding scenery.]

Brives -- Inn : Hotel de Bordeaux.

A small town occupying a very pretty situation in the Valley of the Correge, and only remarkable for an old gothic house, and as being the birthplace of Cardinal Dubois and Marshal Brune. It is surrounded by a maize and vine country.

Our road from here passes through rather a hilly country, takes in on its course a view of the castles of Nonilly and Turenne, the latter of which is located two miles east of the road, and is memorable as being the place of refuge of the great Condo's wife, where she concected the civil war of Guienne. Cressenac is next passed; and the visiter will be attracted by the large number of truffles flourishing about the village, and growing luxuriantly in the entire neighbourhood. We next see Souillac, in the Dordogne, and cross the river, after which we ascend a steep hill, and see on our left the chateau and little town of La Mothe Fencion, the birthplace of Fencion, hishop of Cambray, and author of Telemachus. Our road now lies through a mountainous and barren country, up to Cahera, before arriving at which we pless Peyrac, Pont de Rodes, and Pelacuy, close to which is Muzat, and; more remote Bastide, remarkable as being the birthplace of Murat, created King of Naples, though only a steward's son. From here we descend into the Lot Valley by a long descent, Departing hence, the ratiway quits the bleak and and, if the day be clear, we can behold in the distance the dim outlines of the Pyrences, though 150 ; and may be ascertained, together with all other miles off.

Cahors-Inns: Hotel des Ambassadeurs, Trois Rois, and Hotel de l'Europe.

A very old town, with a population of 12,100the rhief place of the Department Le Lot. The streets are close and narrow, and the houses quite antiquated in their character and style of architecture. It was the place where Fencion was educated; and possesses only two objects of attraction -the cathedral, a noble edifice, and one of the bridges over the Lot, a building of the fourteenth century. It is surrounded by a wine country. La Magdeleine and Caussade are next passed, the latter situated in a fertile plain. It has a population of 5100, and is famous for a species of Turkey fowl. We next cross the Aveyron, and traverse a por-tion of the beautiful plain of Languedoc, arriving at

Montauban-See page 257.

Leaving Montaubon we pass under a bridge into the suburb of Ville Bourdon, and onter on the grand route from Bordeaux to Toulouse, shortly before arriving at

Grisolies, whence we proceed through a plain of astonishing fertility, nearly alongside the Garonne, and arrive at ST. Joist; and closing towards Toulouse, arrive at it over a bridge spanning the Canal du Midi, which joins the Caronne a mile or so to the right of the bridge seen in the suburbs-Arnaud St. Fernaid. On our left is an obelisk, which markst he central position taken by Marshal Soult at the buttle of Toulouse.

Vierzon to Nevers, by Bourges.

Vierzon. -See Route 27, page 424.—The road, on its way from Vierzon to Foecy, passes the village of Les Forges, situated on the banks of the canal. It is one cluster of furnaces, and in the evening presents a very attractive appearance in its hurid giare of light. Foscy station is first met, after which the road goes on to Mehun....Here we see the ruins of the castle in which (harles VII spent much of his youth in useless inactivity, and in which he ended his days by starvation, under the impression of fear lest his son should poison him. Marmagne station, a place of no importance, is next arrived at.

Bourges See page 242.—The reliway continues from here to Nevers, by stations of no importanec-Mouling, Savigny, and Merondes.

Le Guetin-From here there is a railway to Moulius. The stations passed are all unimportant, to Chartres and Laval; the terminus is situation particulars, by a reference to the Table pages.

Mouling-sur-Allier-Inns: Hotel de Paris, and Lion d'Or.

A very cheerful town, with scarcely any objects of interest, and no trade. It contains a population of 15,250, and is the chief place of the Department d'Allier.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame is a building in the style of the 11th century, with a high choir, and vanity roof, exquisitely grouned. Its only objects worth notice are an old painting of the Virgin, and the two detached shutters, with the portraits of Pierre II., the Due de Bourbon, and his wife. In the Collegiate Church, the monument of the Duc de Montmorency, executed at Toulouse in 1632, will attract attention. It is a marble figure representing the Duke dressed in Roman armour, and in a reclining position, with his wife beside him, surrounded on either side by allegorical figures, representing Valour in the figure of Hercules, and Liberality in the character of a coarse female figure. The expression of the countenance of the Duchess is excellent; and the entire drapery of the figure beautifully executed. The Puke was executed for conspiracy against Louis XIII, and his Prime Minister Richelleu. His wife had his remains interred in the chapel, and got the monument crected. She became the Jady abbess of the nunnery connected with the church, and ended her days within the clidater walls.

Moulins is also remarkable as being the spos where Lord Clarendon, during his exile, wrote the history of the great tebelilon. It is also the birthplace of Marshal Villars and the Duke of Berwick.

the latter a natural son of James II.

An excursion can be made from Monlins up the valley of the Allier, through the Limagne, Clermont, and the volcante district of Auvergne. gences from here daily to Clermont and Montpellier, and also to Vichy.

Bourbon L'Archambault.-- A celebrated mineral watering-place, is 5 miles west of Moulins. It is a small town, and has only 3200 inhabitants. The waters, which are saline, are supplied by a hot and cold spring, called the Source de Jenas: and in the middle of the town there are baths for the accommodation of persons desirons of bathing, The picture-sque remains of the ruined castle will attract attention, as also the apex of the chapel. In summer the place is thronged; and diligences run daily from Moulins, passing through Savigny, a miserable little village five rulles from Mouling. and containing a Gothic church, which will repay & visit, it being the most remarkable in the entire province.

ROUTE 29.

Paris to Chartres and Laval.

Paris. See page 259. For information as to trains, &c., see Table pages.

There are two railways from Paris to Versailles." The one on the left bank of the Seine proceeds of ated outside the Barriere-du-Maine. After quitting the station, the first places of interest seen on the right, beyond the new fortifications, are Gre-nelle and Vaugirard—and on the left Montrouge, famous for its quarries. Leaving the line of new forts behind, the railway takes a central course between the two detached forts, Vanves and Issy, close to which village we see the seminaire, still existing as the country seat of St. Sulpice; and it was the place where the mild and amiable Fencion was examined by the conclave of bishops known as the Conferenco of Issy. On the right we see Vanves, where there is a fine chateau, the suburban retreat of the college of Louis-le-Grand.

Clamart -- A sweet little village embosomed smong trees, on the left of the line. Its rustic beauty and sylvan quietness induced La Fontaine to make it his retreat; also the Abbés Delille and Condorcek Our road now leaves the deep cutting through which it hitherto proceeded, and sweeps over the plain of Val Fleury by a viaduct of two rows of arches 145 feet long and 108 feet high. During our progress over it we get a brilliant view of the Seine on the right, and of the chateau of

Meudon-A small place remarkable for its splendid chateau, crected by order of Louis XIV the present chateau was fitted up and embellished by Napoleon for Marie Louise. Close to this is the spot where, in 1842, happened the dreadful accident that consigned so many human beings to a terrible death, by the breaking of the axle of a locomotive, whereby many of the foremost carriages were crushed, and thrown on the engine furnace, and 100 persons burned to death in about sighteen minutes. A chapel has been erected to commemorate the sad event, The railway now descends into a deep cutting, passing under the Mendon avenue, and arrives at Bellevue -- A place of no interest or importance. Sevres -- A pretty place situated on the left bank of the river, and having a population of 4200. It is about six miles from Paris, and stands in the midst of two hills, on whose slope, at elther side, run the two railways to Versailles. It is celebrated for its china manufactory, which stands on the left of the road. It is a large building, and has in active employment 150 persons. visit through it will be well repaid; and permission can easily be procured from the directeur, M. Brongniar! The Forcelain Museum will immedistely attract the visiter's attention. It contains all the curiosities imaginable in the shape of earthenware and china, from all parts of the earth; and also specimens of all the productions of the establishment since its foundation. The elegance of the manufacture, and beauty of the painting of the Sevres ware, cannot be surpassed. Here also the manufacture of painted glass has been brought to a considerable degree of perfection. There are two entrances to the Park of St. Cloud from the town. From here the railway enters into a deep cutting, and arrives at from Viroflay, and passes by the unimportant stations of St. Cyr (where is the Ecole Militaire), and Trappes. La Verriere and Lartoise stations are next passed, and we arrive at Rambouillet-A rather heavy and monotonous town, with a population of 3200. Its château is the chief object of interest, and only so because of its historical associations, as the place itself is nothing more than a disagreeable structure of red bricks, flanked by towers of stone. It is now a school for officers' daughters; though for a lengthened period the residence of the French kings up to the days of Charles X., who here signed his ab-dication of the throne in 1830, together with the Duke d'Angoulème. Quitting this station, the railway passes through a country hilly and varied.

Epernon-A small place, nicely situated, with 1800 inhabitants. It occupies a very pretty position on the banks of the Guesle, and has old towers.

Maintenon-lasituated between the aqueduct. now in ruins, and the beautiful viaduct, sixty-five feet high, and having thirty-two arches. The château on the margin of the Eure is its only object of interest. The valley of the Eure is crossed by the ruined aqueduct above alluded to.

Quitting this last station, the railway enters La Beauce, a beautiful and fertile plain, made up of some of the finest and most luxuriant corn-lands in France.

Jouy-Departing hence, we cross the Eure, and see the steeples of Chartres peering in the distance long before we reach the city.

Chartres - See page 251 .- Six miles from this last station is Bretigny, famous for the celebrated treaty of peace, signed between France and England in 1360.

I'rom Chartres the railway continues its course through the plain of La Beauce aheady alluded to. Passing Courville station, three miles south of this place, is the Chateau de Villibon where the illustrious Sully died. Pontgouin station is next arrived at, and the railway terminates at

ROUTE SO. Nancy to Metz, Porbach, and

The railway, leaving Nancy, proceeds on its course through a country possessing no objects of scenery that require special notice, and at about five miles' distance from Nancy crosses the Moselle. a little before arriving at Fronard, the junction with the Paris line, whence it proceeds on to Marbache and Dienlouard -places of no importance

Pont-a-Mousson-inn: Hotel d'Angleterre. A pretty town, situated on the Moselle, which is here crossed by a bridge: it has a population of tere the line to Chartres diverges to the left.

Verwaifies —See page 270.

The railway to Chartres proceeds on to the left school. The old house, called Maison des Sep Pschés Capitaux, situated in the Square, deserve a visit. The next stations passed are places of an importance, and are as follows:—Pagny, Moveaut, and Ars.

Mets .- See page 257.

From Metz to Forbach the scenery is pleasing, and in many instances pleuresque, but allogether devoid of objects of interest. The next stations are—Peiter, Couroelles, Reuilly, Herny, Faulquemont, St. Avold, Houboury, and Cocheren.

Forbach .--

Forbach is situated on the frontier of France, and has a population of 4,300.

Diligence and Malleposte hence to Mayence, accomplishing the journey in ten hours.

Metz to Treves,—Schnellpostes daily perform the journey in fifteen hours.

Forbach is the last station within the French frontier. The next arrived at is—

Saarbrucken.--Here is the Prussian frontier, and the Custom-House, where passports and baggage are strictly examined

Rohrbach, and the adjoining country here, as well as that surrounding Bexhach and Neumkirchen, is celebrated as a rich and productive coal-field. Leaving here, the railway proceeds through a country possessing no particular objects of interest, and arrives at Homburg, a small but clean town, with a population of 3000. Its only objects of attraction are the fortress on the Schlos-Berg, (amous for its historical associations connected with the tidity years' war; and a very pretty church, though quite a modern structure.

From here, omnibuses go to Zweibrücken daily. The next station is Bruchmühlbach, a place of no importance.

Leandstuhl —A small town, containing a population of 1500. The ruined castle of the Counts of Sckingen overhang the town: it was partly hewn out of the rock, and had walls twenty-four feet thick: in it the chivalrous Franz Von Sekingen lost his life, on May 7th, 1523, having been grievously hurt by a failing beam. His bones rest behind the altar of the Roman Catholic Church. Part of his mounnent, a mutilated status of a horseman, stands at the bettom of the tower, another part, with the epitaph stands behind the high after.

Nothing of interest is met with on our route from here to Kaiserslautern-Inns: Donnersberg, Bairvherhof, and Post.

Pretrily situated, between pleasant hills, and containing a population of 6,400 inhabitants. The town is a very old one, and is almost reduced to ruins. A castle was built here, in the twelfth century, by the Emperor Barbarossa, which was separated from the town by its fortifications, but it was destroyed in the war of the Spanish succession.

Raiserslautern occupies an excellent position for trading purposes, and encourages considerable ersollen manufactories, and is the seat of the central prison of the Ehrnish circle.

From Kaiserslautern to the next station there is nothing met with desorving special notice. The following stations are passed:—Hochspeyer, Frankenstein, Waldenthal, and Lambrecht.

Neustadt.—Inns: Post, and Goldener Löwe. Is situated at the foot of the Hardt Mountains, and though not particularly attractive, is yet rendered very picturesque-looking by its position. It is a very old town, and contains a population of 8,200. In its church, which is a building of the fourteenth century, there are very many curious monuments of the Philzgraves. It is the centre of a most interesting neighbourhood, abounding in ruined castles, whose dismantled battlements, moss-grown and try-covered, with the wild-flowers growing in their fissures, appear interesting and picturesque in the extreme.

From this place, the Railway to Landau and Strasburg branches off.

The reilroad, quitting Neustadt, proceeds through a spleudid country, famous for its vineyards and the rich wines which they supply. Nor is it uninteresting to geologists, who will be attracted by the basalt cruption proceeding from Pechstein-Koof mountain.

Hasloch .-

Bohl. Schifferstadt. -- From this point branches off

Matterstadt is passed before arriving at Ludwigshafen, opposite Mannhelm.

ROUTE 31. Roanne to Lyons.

Roanne -- See page 267

We cannot recommend this Route to English travellers, particularly that portion of it between Reanne and St. Etienne. It is merely a line fit to convey coals and merchandise, and is not suitable for travellers.

The railway, on leaving Roanne, is carried up the Rhone valley, and pursues almost a paraliel course with the post-road leading to Lyons, up to the station St. Symphorien, which is arrived as shortly before we pass the station l'Hopital, where the nost-road to St. Etienne turns off.

Neulize.-Shortly after this the post-road rejoins our route, and it and the railway run parallel with each other up the right bank of the valley of the Loire. Balbigny station is next passed.

Pours is located on the spot where once stood one of the most important cities in Gaul, called Forum Segusianorum. It has a population of 2300; and has in its vicinity very many ; memorials of Koman dominion, &c.

Montrond -A village one mile and a half from the railway, on the great bank of the Loire, crowned by the rulns of a majestic castle, is next medwith; after which we pass St. Gaintier and La, Renardiere, and arrive at St. Etienne-See page 267.—The listance from here to Lyons is 35 English miles.

Departing from St. Etienne, the railway enters a tunnel narrow and flat, and only permitting one line of rails. It traverses this tunnel which runs under the village of Terre Noire .- Between here and St. Chamond, a bridge separates the waters flowing to the Mediterranean by the Rhone, from those going to the Atlantic by the Loire.

St. Chamond-An industrious and manufacturing town, with a population of 8300, famous for its staylace productions. Besides this, it is the seat of s considerable number of furnaces and silk manufacturers' establishments.

The railway now goes through a coal country, passes Grandecroix station, and arrives at Rive de Gier-A prosperous and rising town, situated on the right bank of the Gler, with a population of 12,200. Its chief source of wealth arises from its coal-fields, which are explored by more than forty coal-mines in the vicinity, worked by steam-engines. The glass works here alsothe property of an Englishman named Jackson -are invaluable sources of wealth; beskles, there are many manufactories of engines, and several vik works.

From here the rallway takes its course through a country giving evidence on every side of its thriving industry. The tall chimneys are appearing like giants in all directions, putling forth volumes of smoke that make the scene resemble the country about Manchester or Bolton.

Refere arriving at Olivers we pass Corren and Burel stations; and the rallway leaves the valley of the Gier, and again approaches the side of the Rhone.

Givors-An industrious town, abounding in manufactories of iron and glass. Its population is about 5500; and it is situated on the right bank of the Rhone, at the point where that river receives the waters of the Canal de Givors and of the Gier.

From here the way leads through a country vasled in picturesque beauty; passes the unimporfant stations of Grigny, La Tour, Vernaison, Irigny, and arrives at Guilling, previously passing through several small tunnels and cuttings. A pretty place, con-sisting nearly altogether of the country residences of the merchants and gentry of Lyons.

Lyons - See page 256.

Montereau to Treves.

Montereau. - See ronte 22 page 417.

The railway directs its course through the beau-

Nogent .- Inns: Cygne d'Or, and Cygne de la Croix.

A small town, situated on the left bank of the Seine. It has a population of 4000, and is fast rising into importance. The He des Ecluses, joined to either bank of the river by stone bridges, divides the town into two parts.

The church of Nogent will attract attention: it is a pretty Gothic building, of the fifteenth century, crowned by a splendid tower. There are to be found very pretty walks in all directions of the town.

Paris to St. Quentin.

For description of Route between Paris and Crell, see route 18, page 413.

Creil-See page 252.

Distance, 42 English miles.

Pont St. Maxence .- A very pretty town, situated on the Oise. The road passes the forest of Chantilly on our right. Coaches also travel from here and Creil to Senlis.-- Inn : Grand Cerf.

A town of considerable industry, divided into an old town and three modern divisions. It has a population of 5200. The usual fendal indications of ramparts mark out the old town, whilst the three modern suburbs are indicated by the milis and manufactories to be seen scattered through them. T'e l'ort de Meaux, and the l'orte Bellon, will interest the mitiquarien. In the old town are the remains of the castles in which may yet be distinguished the chapel and hall.

The cathedral is a grand, though small building of the 12th century, surmounted by a spiendid tower. In the vicinity about Senks, there are several other ruined churches deeply interesting, among which are the ruins of the Abbey Chaalis, whose Gothic fragments will greatly delight the lovers of that particular species of architecture.

Compleane-Ins: La Cleche, and Le Lien. An unpicturesque town, situated on the left bank of the Oise, with a population of 9000. It was here the military stores and ammunition of the Remans was kept; and it was for a lengthened period tiful and fertile valley of the Seine, and passes the favourite residence of the kings of France.

The royal palace is a handsome building; and is historically remarkable as being the palace in which Napoleon received Marie Louise his bride. It was also a favourite retreat for Charles X. It is surrounded by very pretty gardens, approached from the forest by a long avenue 4800 feet long. The façade, facing the forest, is very fine.

The Hotel do Ville is of the Gothic style of architecture, and its turrets and tower will interest the visitor.

The church of St. André is a specimen of the pure Gothic style of the 13th century.

Complegne is historically remarkable as being the spot where Joan of Arc, the maid of Orleans. was taken prisoner, and delivered up to a captivity which ended by the infliction of a cruel death on her Whilst endeavouring to protect the fugitives in their efforts to escape beyond the gate, on their retreat before the enemy, she was taken by an archer of Picardy, by whom she was delivered up to John of Luxembourg, and sold by him to the English. The exact spot on which she was captured is still pointed out; it is close to the old gateway of Vieux Pont.

Ham-Inns: Hotel do France, and Cornet d'Or.

A town situated on the Somme, and having a population of 16,800. It is the seat of a fortress, and its citadel has been very much strengthened: It is used as a State prison. Its donjon keep is 100 feet high and 100 feet wide, and its walls are thirty-six feet thick. It was in this fortress the present Emperor of the French was confined, after his attempt on Boulogne. Here he remained a prisoner for six years, and only escaped in 1846, in the disguise of a labourer bearing a plank of wood on his shoulder. It was erected in 1470, by the Comte de St. Pol, who was atterwards put to death by Louis XI,; and served also us a State prison for the Prince de Polignac, and three other ministers who signed the Ordonnances of July, 1830, in the reign of Charles X. Cabrers, the Chartist, was also confined here.

The church has a good choir, carvings of Scriptural subjects, and, on the whole, may be said to be an interesting building.

RUSSIA.

RUSSIA is a vast and mighty empire, situated partly in Europe and partly in Asia, between 43° and 70° North latitude, and 15° and 65° East longitude. Its greatest extent from the southerly point of the Crimea to the north coast of Lapland, or the mouth of the White Sea, is 1,720 miles, and from the western border of Poland to the 60th meridian, along the 528 parallel, 1,791 miles. The superficial area exceeds 2,006,000 English square miles. The entire of this large territory belongs to the great plain which extends through the middle of Europe, from the German Ocean to the Caspian Sea and the Ural Mountains, with the exception of Finland, the Great Lakes, and the White Sea.

In Climate, that of Russia is of an extreme character, the winters being colder, and the summers warner, than in the corresponding latitudes of western Europe. The Spring, however, is mild and temperate in the south, though the summer is of long duration, with oppressive heat and little rain. Autumn sets in rather late, and the winter is short, with little snow, though sometimes cold and severe. The middle region, extending from 50° 8′ to 57° 2′, has a rough winter, and, in the more northerly region, it is long and severe, during which travelling is practicable only on deduges over the frozen snow. At 88. Petersburg the duration of winter ranges from the end of September to the beginning of May, when winter all at once disappears. In the Arctic region, extending from 67° to 74°, the climate is very rigorous in winter, and warm in summer.

Soil and Vegetation.—There is a vast tract of country, about 796,000 square miles, which possesses a peculiar and rather remarkable soil, consisting entirely of decomposed vegetable matter, which forms a stratum varying in thickness from three to five feet. A great part of Western Russia is sandy, and intersected by extensive marshes and bogs. The intiddle region, extending from 50° to 70°, is the wealthiest and most densely peopled portion of Russia, and consists of wide, open, undulating plains, with very slight elevations to break the monotony. The Russian forests are the most important of her vegetable productions, not only from their enormous extent, but from their supplying in profusion timber, far, pitch, potash, and tarpentine, which form a principal part of the commercial exports, and also finel, in a country nearly destitute of that commodity. The population of Russia is about 60,000,000, divided into 41s great classes—nobles, clergy, entizens, peasants, serfs, and slaves. Education is subject to the direct control of the Government.

Administrative Divisions.—Russia, in Europe, is divided into forty-seven Governments. This does not include the sort of Military Republic of the Don Cossacks, or the Orand Duchy of Finland, which have a separate Administration, and the Kingdom of Poland.

PORMALITIES

To be observed by Foreigners on Entering Russia, and on Departing from the Empire.

Every Foreigner, upon his arrival in Russia, must have a Passport duly authenticated, which he may be able to present to the proper authorities of the first government on his road, in order to deliver to him his l'assport and get a ticket for his journey that he may be able to prescute the same into the interior of the Empire. This ticket must be renewed in every government town through which he passes; and on his arrival at the place of his destination, he ought again to present himself before the respective civil governor, in order to have this ticket exchanged for a permission of residence. If the traveller only intends staying a short time in Russia, he may dispense with the billet of residence, and get a contra mark, which will enable him to stay one or two weeks. A billet of residence coats from four rubles and three kopeks to nine rubles and four kopeks, according to the rank of the person. In both the metropolies of the Empire, viz., Moscow and St. Petersburgh—his permission, or ticket of residence, is to be obtained at the Address-office for Foreigners (Bureau d'adresse pour les ctrangers.)

The Passports for departure delivered to Foreigners on the governments of the frontiers, are valid for the term of three weeks; and those from the governments of the interior for three months. After the lapse of this term, these Passports must be revised by the Governor, in order to enable the Foreigner to pass the frontiers of he kimpire.

Books .-- The traveller must bear in mind that all Books are examined by a committee of censure, and flone are admitted unless they have been previously approved.

BANK NOTES.—Foreign Bank Notes are prohibited, they are selzed and returned to the owner when he leaves the country. Travellers must not provide themselves with Russian paper money before they enter the country; they expose themselves to loss by doing so. When such notes are discovered (and the pocket book is frequently looked into) they are destroyed, being considered as forgeries.

The traveller should be careful not to use newspapers for packing purposes, as the Custom House officers clear all away, fearing the entrance of forbidden literature.

St. Petersburg.-Horris:-

St. Petersburg, De Russie, Des Princes, Hotel de Paris, Hotel Kaiser, and Dennuth's Hotel. English lodging house, M. Spinks', on the Galence. English boarding house, very clean and mod rate. Miss Benson's, excellent in every respect; Interpreter and Commissioner, John Shaft.

This splendld city, the metropolis of the Russian empire, is seated on the river Neva, near its entrance into the Gulf of Finland: the entrance to it by water is the most beautiful. After passing Cronstadt, (which is distant 17 miles,) with its forests of masts, towers, and forts innumerable, we come in sight of the palace of Peterhoff, in its well wooded park. After a couple of hours' sail the traveller arrives in the Neva, passing some majestic buildings, with the golden spires and domes of the city, and he is soon landed on the Quay, near the Acudemy of Arts. So late as the beginning of the last century, the ground on which the city now stands was only a vast morass, occupied by a few fishermen's huts. Peter the Great first began this city in 1703. He built a small but for himself, and some wretched wooden hovels. In 1710 the Count Golovkin built the first brick house; and the next year the Emperor, with his own hand, laid the foundation of a house of the same material. From these small begianings rose the imperial city of St. Petersburgh, which is now one of the handsomest in Europe. and contains a population of about 600,000 persons. The streets in general are broad and spacious; and three of the principal ones, which meet in a point at the Admiralty, are more than two miles long. The Nevskoi Prospect is the Regent-street of St. Petersburgh. It is nearly three miles in length, of great width, has most elegant shops, palaces, churches, &c. on each side, and is the great artery of the city. Out of this street there is a large arcade or bazaar, very similar to the one at Brussels. The Kazan Cathedral, in this street, is a noble edifice of its kind. Two circular colonnades, similar to those in front of St. Peter's at Rome, lead to the entrance of the church, which is adorned with colossal statnes. In the interior are fifty-six marble columns 52 feet in height, each one hewn out of a single block of marble. Walls and flooring of the same, all beautifully polished. There are here some choice paintings; but what attracts the eye most is the balustrade, pillars twenty feet high, beams, picture frames, &c., before the sanctuary, all of which are of solid silver, and highly polished. Our Lady of Kazan is covered with jewels of immense value; and the silver before-mentioned was a present to the Holy Mother, so called, from the Cousacks, after the campaigns of 1812-14. "Isaac's Church was commenced a century ago by Catherine II.; but it is in the present Emperor's reign that it has become what it is. The foundation alone cost upwards of £200,000. Fabulous sums are mentioned as the cost of this beautiful church; sums as high as £16,000,000, or £17,00,0000. Enormous as these sums are, the stranger is not disposed to doubt them, when he considers the nature of the ground, the scarcity of skilled labour, and the cost of matarial. Like all other churches here, it is built in the form of a Greck cross, of four equal sides. The pillars at the entrance are sixty feet high, and have a diameter of seven feet all magnificent, round, and highly polished granite monoliths from Finland. The cupola is covered with copper, overlaid with gold, for the gilding of which forty-two measures. equal to fourteen English bushels, of duests were melted down. The Altar wreen is of immence value. The whole edifice is surmounted by the farseen golden cross, which, with the cupola, glitters like the sun over a mountain.

Within the walls of the fortress is the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, in which are deposited the remains of l'eter the Great, and of the successive severeigns, except Peter II, who was buried at Moscow. Among the noblest monuments of Petersburgh is an equestrian statue of l'eter the Great, in bronze, erected by Catherine II. in 1742. It is of colossal size, and stands on a huge pedestal of granite. The column of Alexander is also a splendid monument. We should also recommend a visit to the Winter palace and the Marble palace, both situated on the Russian Quay, the Michaely palace, the hut of Peter the Great, the Hermitage, in which is a large collection of paintings, which can be seen daily. The mansions of the nobles are vest piles of building, furnished in the most elegant style, and situated chiefly on the south side of the Neva either in the Admiralty quarter, or in the suburbs of Livonia and Moscow, which are the finest parts of the city. The views upon the banks of the Neva exhibit the grandest and most lively scenes imaginable. That river is in many places as broad as the Thannes at London; it is also deep, raphi, and as transparent as crystal; and its banks are lined on each side with a continued range of splendid build-

On the North of the fortress, the Academy of Sciences and the Academy of Arts are the most striking objects. On the opposite side are the imperial palace, the Admiralty, the mansions of many of the nobility, and the English line -- so called because it is mostly occupied by English merchants. In the front of these buildings, on the South side, is the quay, which extends more than three miles. except where it is interrupted by the Admiralty; and the Neva: all along that space has been embanked by a wall, parapet, and pavement of hewn granite. The literary and scientific institutions are numerous; but the most important is the University, founded in 1819. The Museum, in the Corps de Mines, has the finest mineralogical collection in the world-emetalds, amethysis, &c., of large size; a block of malachite, 4000 lbs. weight, valued at £19,000; a lump of gold, 80 lbs. in weight. Romanoff's museum, Asiatic museum, and the imperial library, are all worthy of a visit.

The Botanical Gardens, on Apothecary's Island, sre well worth a visit, the palm-houses being the finest to be seen anywhere. The datchas, or country villas of the nobility and merchants, attacted on these islands, are all built of wood, in every variety of style and colour, all detached, and standing in their gardens and groves, with balconies, hothousos, and statues.

In the Taurida palace is the largest ball-room in St. l'etershurg, and to be half a mile in cremniference; on one side of which is the Winter Garden, or conservatory, the whole longth of the palace, divided from the ball-room by a row of magnificent marble pillars, but otherwise roofed in, and forming part of the saloon itself. Enormous chandelies, and silver tranches for lights encircling the pillars, with the plants and trees in the conservatory also turned into candicaticka, hold upwards of 20,000 wax lights—which, with the statuary in this year room, must make an entertainment here one of the finest aights in it; a world.

The Winter Palace, however, is the grand building, and is of itself worth a visit to St. Petersburgh. It was commenced in 1754, and finished in 1762, for the Empress Elizabeth, and is the most splendid and largest royal edifice in the world. It is built on the banks of the Nova; its front.—700 feet in length—is three stories high, and is nearly square. When the unperor is residing in the palace, upwards of 7000 persons inhabit the building. The Empress's reception room, or golden salona, has its walls entirely covered with gold, and the white saloon has all its decorations of pur white, relieved only by gold. The throne salon, or St. George's Itali, surpasses everything for grandeur and beauty, and is 140 feet long by 60 width. The Hermitage is oonected with the Winter Palace, and was built by the Great Catherine, and is a most luxurious retreat. The collection of paintings occupies about forty rooms, and is of immense value. These galleries alone would take weeks for a careful inspection. Three or four rooms are entirely filled with jewels and articles of vertu, and the ground floor with statuary-all of which collections are continually increasing. Here also is the Museum of Peter the Great; all the lathes and tools he used, and various articles of his own manufacture. The Hermitage is generally open daily. Admission is gained by ticket from some resident merchant, or by paying one rouble to the porter. Visitors are recommended to go immediately the doors are open (10 a.m.), take a little lunch with them, and stay till the close (4 p.m.) This collection is very rich in Dutch, Flemish, Spanish, later Italian, and French masters. There also some very fine manuscripts and illuminated missals, and a collection of antiquities.

Of the charitable institutions, the principal arethe Foundling Hospital, the Sailors' Hospital, the Lazaretto, the Asylum for the Blind, the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb, the Hunane Society, &c. The manufactures are various, and some of them of considerable extent; and the commercial intercourse is important, from its extensive communication with the interior, this being the only great maritime outlet in the Gulf of Finland. The principal exports are hemp, flax, skius, leather, iron, tailow, &c.

Sinall screw steamers are continually plying from the city to the islands, and there are a great number of bridges crossing the rivers, all of which are built on boats (some of them nearly half a mile in length), except the new bridge, which is built of iron, has seven arches, and cost one million and a quarter steriling. This bridge was finished about two years ago, and is a magnificent structure.

THE ENVIRONS OF ST. PETERSBURG.

The palace and town of Peterhoff are beautifully situated, at a distance of about fifteen miles from the city, the view from which embraces the whole of the Neva, from Cronstadt to St. Petersourgh, and the shore of Finland beyond. Steamers ply every four hours; and on Sundays and holidays; it is a favourite resort, as, on those days, the fountains, which are equal to Versailles, play from five to nine o'clock in the evening. A magnificent jet d'eau, eighty feet high, comes from the colosal gilt figure of Samson, in front of the palace; and on the sides of a canal, which runs from this into the sea, are numbers of fountains and figures. The grounds and pak are well kept, of great extent, and very beautiful for such a high latitude.

Routes from England to 5t. Petersburg.—From Hull or London to Hamburg; thence by rull to Lubeck, and by steamer from there. Or the traveller may proceed by rull from Osteria Calais to Stettin; thence by government steamer, which plies weekly, in about two and a half or three days.

New Routes to St. Petersburg, -- Over and route via Tonning and Flensburg-Royal. Lands Raliway.—By steam to Tonning see alphabetical bit of steamers, thence by the Royal Danish Rollway to Flensburg; distance, 35 English miles. From Flensburg by steamers constructed expressly for the navigation of the Bultic to St. Petersburg, in 72 hours. These vessels land passengers and lischarge cargoes at the quays of St. Petersburg; has avoiding the delay and annoyance of change of boats and transhipment of goods at Cronstadt. The most remarkable features of this route are, the saing of 400 miles sea navigation for passengers, and the saving of the Sound dues for goods. A reference to the map of the North of Europe will show at a glance the facilities which this onte offers to shippers of goods, and the shortends sea voyage to passengers.

Travellers to St. Petersburg from Copenhagen, it they have time, or dread the sea, will find the route through Sweden a very agreeable va icty to the monotony of a sea voyage; the steamer is generally taken to Getheborg (or G tienburg), then by the Gotha canal to Stockholm, steamers go tolerably frequently from Stockholm to St. Priersburg; the traveller by this route has the advantage of seeing Abo, Helsingfors, and Revel, and arriving at St. Petersburg in 41 days from Stockholm.

Tsarsko Selo,-Stat.

The visitor to St. Petersburg should not omit going to Tsarsko Selo (by rail). There is a hugg-place built by Catherine II outside. He will see the traces of the profuse gliding she indulged in. Inside are many interesting rooms. One is based entirely with amber, the gift of Frederick the Great. The grounds are very extensive, containing some of the best timber in Northern Russia. They are kept with great care. In them is a sarden of choice flowers. There is also an armoury outsiding rich suits of armour, fire arms, and jewelled saddle cloths. There is also a managerie, a dining house, and a frigate on the lake for the Grand Duke.

From Tsarsko, take drosky to Pavolski, 3 miles, to the Grand Guke Constantine's Park. This is very beantful; the ground undulating, well-wooded and watered. At the railway ferminus is a tery excellent band, lead by Stransa. It plays very evening during the summer; but there are ortain fashionable evenings, which the visitor can secretain from his landbord. Refteshments may be obtained. They are good but dear. English &e, 2 roubles the quart bottle; porter, 1.50 do. Trains return at convenient heavs.

Moscow.—Horsis:—Hotel Billo, very clean; Landies, doar and dirty.

Russia by the French, under Napoleon. On the 7th of September the battle of Borodino took place. at which the French were victorious; and the Russians retreated, leaving Moscow to its fate. The city was set on fire by the governor, Count Rostopehin, and was in rains when the French entered it. on the 14th of the same month. In the fire 30,000 sick and wounded soldiers perished. This conflagration destroyed more than three parts of the town; but it is now all rebuilt, and its im-provements considerably added to. The city is divided into five divisions - the Kremlin, containing the uncient palace of the Czars, where Peter the Great was born; the Kithagorod, containing the university, the printing house, and very many valuable buildings; the Bielgorod, or White Town; the Semliangorod; and the Sloboda, or suburba Its churches are worth a visit; and it is crowded with palaces, monasteries, arsenals, museums, and other public buildings, representing the various styles of architecture - Greeian, Gothle, Italian, Turtar, and Hindoo-rude, fanciful, grotesque, gorgeons, magnificent, and beautiful, overtopped by upwards of thirty gilt enpolas. The Cathedral of the Assumption, founded in 1325, and rebuilt in 1472, is decked out with gorgeous and extravagant ornaments. In this church the Emperors are invested with the ancient crown of the Czars. Towering far above all other objects is the tower of Ivan Velek, or John the Great. It is 270 feet high; and contains thirty-three bells, the largest of which is more than 124,000 lbs. weight, English. They are decidedly worth hearing, as they toll on Sundays and festival-days. The Great Bell of Moscow, cast in the reign of the Empress Anne, and weighing 443,772 lbs., has been recently raised from a pit, in which it was sunk for a century, and placed upon a pedestal. Though now cracked and useless, it is yet a great object of veneration with the Russians. Moseow is also the seat of many scientific and literary institutions, and is the centre of a vast inland commerce. The population is about 350,000. A railway communication is established between St. Petersburgh and Moscow. It is about 400 miles long, 300 of which passes through a wood. About sixty miles west of Moscow is Borodino and Moyarsk- the scenes of two desperately contested and sanguinary battles between the French and the Russians, in 1812.

DROSKIES. -- The traveller should get his landlord or a friend speaking Russ to make a burgain for him, before he takes a drosky any distance.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.—The traveller will, of course, first of all go to see the Kremilin. He will find it a hill in the centre of the city, surrounded by a wall, and pierced by several gates. If he passes through the Red Piace, he will see the Gate of St. Nicholas to the right, and the Holy Gate or Spoas Varots to the left. Over the gate is the miraculous picture of the Virgin; and the vision must remember to pass through uncovered; but if his actuples will not allow him to uncover, he had better try another gate, as here there is a soldier.

posted to enforce obedience at the point of the hayonet. Before entering he will see to his left the famous church of St. Basil. From the terrace of the Kremlin a very good view is obtained. Proceeding through the Sposs Verota, the stranger finds on his right a square in which are the principal churches which should be visited. Close by is the palace, with its hundsome suites of rooms and its noble balls of the orders of Str. George, (white) Vladimir, (1ed) Andrew, (blue). The visitor is connected from these halls to the dining-rooms, used only at coronations, and thence to the Council Hall of the Partriachs. Near this place is the treasury, in which is a rich store of gold and silver plate, countless jewels of great value, state coaches, and arms. Singularly enough, though the Russians suffered so much by Napoleon, his is the only marble statue in the treasury. Near this building is the Assenal, with its trophy guns, and the Senate House.

Visitors should by all means gain the views of Moscow from the Tower of Iran Veliki in the Kremlin, from the Seminoff Monastery on the east, and from the Sparrow Hill on the south.

HOTEL DE RICHELIEU, in the busiest part of the HOTEL DE ST PETERSBURG, having a fine view over the sea and port.

Is situated on the North-western coast of the Black Sen, and is a fortified seaport in the government of Kherson, founded in 1792 by Catherine II. The harbour is an excellent one, and principal portion of the town is built upon the top of a long range of cliffs, which commands a splendid sea view. A public walk, planted with flowering trees and shrubs, extends along the top of the cliff, having the governor's house at one end, the Exchange at the other, and a statue of the Duc de Richellen in the centre. The houses in the best localities are built of a soft, light-coloured stone, ant roofed with sheets of trute, or painted. Wool its chief branch of trade consists of grain. Wool is also fast rising into importance. The currying sends is partiring chieffy in Austrian ships. The and roofed with sheets of iron, or painted wood. Santinian, Russian, English, Grecian, Turkish, Swedish, and French vessels are also engaged in this trade. The inhabitants are chiefly Polish Jews, Italians, Greeks, and Germans, with a few French and English. It is a free port, and one of the cheapest towns in the world to live in. In it is a very important academic institution—the Richelien Lyceum-having attached to its foundations professorahips of tircek and the higher branches of scionce, together with natural and civil history. Its is examined, chief imports are sugars and other coionial product cottons, silks, &c. The Cathedral of St. Nichol-will repay a visit, its interior being sunptuous decorated. Distance to Nicolaleff, about 80 En miles. Since the war, is as dear as St. Petersbur, which is the dearest town in Europe. Population 100,000.

Riga is situated on the Dwina, about five mile from its mouth, in the Gulf of the Baltic, called th Gulf of Itiga, or Livonia. It is a very strong town and is capital of the Government of Livonia. It: commercial position is very high, being next to that of St. Petersburgh. Foreign merchants carry on its trade, and those connected with the English Factory there enjoy the greatest share of the com-merce. Corn, hemp, flax, iron, timber, masts leather, and tallow, form the principal articles o export. There is a very large floating bridge over the Dwina, 2,600 feet long and 40 broad; this bridge is removed in winter, when the ice sets in The population of Riga is estimated to be about 68,000.

Saratov is situated on the right bank of the Volga, proverbial for the industry of its inhabitants, which has raised it among the principal of the Russian cities, and created for it a flourishing trade. It has some very excellent buildings; and is divided into the upper and lower towns, the population of which is about 36,000. It has a handsome archiepiscopal palace, several elegant churches, a large bazaar, a gymnasium, and an Ecclesiastical semmary

Cronstadt.-All vessels for St. Petersburgh stop at Cronstadt. Previ us to the travellers arrival here his passports have been given up to him, and they are of no further use till he shows himself at the Alien office, the sooner after his arrival the better; at Crons adt officers come on board and remain till the arrival of the boat at St. Petersburg

POLAND

POLAND.—The Polish towns are nearly all built of wood, and miserable cottages or huts constitute the villages. The country is very fertile in corn; and supplies to a great extent both Holland and Sweden with that grain. It has also extensive pastures. Peat, Orbre, Chalcedony, Chalk, Agate, Cornelian, Onyxes, Jasper, Rock Crystaly, Amethysts, Sapphires, linbies, and even Dannonds, are found in Foland; as also Tale, Spar, Lapis, Calamanaris, Coal, Iron, Lead, and Quickelver. Leather, Fur, Henp, Flax, Sattpetre, Alum, Manna, Honey, and Wax, are likewise produced; and it is remarkable for the beauty of its breed of Cattle.

Warsaw.—It is built partly on a plain and partly on a gentic rise from the Vistula, extending with the suburbs of Kraka and Praga, over a vast extent of ground, and containing about 150,000 inhalitants.

The streets of this city are very spacious but illpaved, and the churches and public buildings are large and magnificent. The suburbs present rather an uncouth looking sapect, the houses being nothing more than mean, ill-constructed hovelsits productive industry represents the manufacture of woollen-stuffs, carpeting, gold and silver wirjacap, tobacco, &c. There are also several wholesale mercantile houses employed in the import and export trades. There are two great fairs held here yearly—one in May, the other in November. They continue for three weeks, after the isshion of those at Leipsic and Frankfort.

This city was besieged, in July 1794, by the King of Prussia, but he was compelled to raise the suege in September following. The Russians attacked the city in November, and took the suburb of Praga, after which the city at once surrendered, and was bando over to the King of Prussia by the Russians.

Warsaw was the Vice-Regal residence, and the place of meeting of the Pollsh Parliament up to 1883, when, the Pollsh insurrection being unsuccessful, the political existence of the Poles was annufulated; since which Poland must be tooked upon as a part of the Russian Empire. It is 170 utiles S. of Konigsberg and 140 E.N.E. of Brealau.

Cracow.—Situated on the left bank of the Vistala, 144 miles SW. of Warsaw, in a fine valley, with a number of fine buildings, but narrow, irregular, and ill-paved streets. In its cathedral—reduced as the finest and most interesting church in Pland—are the tombs of kings and great men of the country, from Boleslaus the Friscan and Cadmee the Just, to Joseph Poniatowski and Thaddeus Kowlusko. The university is one of the blest in Kurope, possessing a rich library and a betanic garden. It has a population of 25,000. The legislative power is vested in an Assembly of Pepnitics, chosen by the Communes and Executive, a a Senate consisting of twelve members, and a President, who is elected every year.

On a rock near the Vistula is the ancient Royal Palace, surrounded by brick walls and old towers, which form a kind of citadet. The University is one of the most ancient in Europe, possessing a fine library, and a botanic garden. Cracow communicates with its suburb of Padgoze, in Gallacia, by a bridge across the Vistula.

Though the city and suburbs occupy a vast tract of ground, they scareely contain 26,000 inhabitants. The Great Square is spacious and well built, and many of the streets are broad and handsome, but on almost every building is the mark of ruined grandeur. The work of destruction was first commenced in 1702, when Charles XII. of Sweden took the city, and though his rule barbarism effected much Vandal desceration on the buildings and monuments therein, yet it had to suffer far more profanation from the Russians and the confederates. In the year 1794 the Poles, whose individual conrage remained unshaken, raised their standard at Chacow, headed by the illustrious Koschako; and notwithstanding the almost total want of regnlar troops, succeeded in driving a combined force of Russians and Prussians from before Warsaw. But the Russians, under Suwarroff, poured into the country in such numbers as to make resistence hopeless; and the insurrection received a deathblow from the less of Kosciusko, who was taken prisoner at the battle of Macziclowicz. Warsaw was stormed by Suwarroff, and 20,000 of its brave garrison and inhabitants brutally put to the sword. l'oland's last hour had struck! she was no more! Her king was sent a prisoner to Russia. The re-mains of Kosciusko's veteran bands distained to live under Muscovite dominion: they sought and found a home in the armies of France, and contributed by their valour to bring Napoleon in triumph to the Kremlin. Its independence, with 467 square miles of territory, was restored by the Congress of Vienna, and a sort of a Republic created, under the joint protection of liussia, Prussia, and Augtria, who exercise some partial authority in the legislation.

The monument crected to Koschuko stands on the west, about a league from the city, and consists of a large artificial tumulus, raised by the people in 1820.

Great changes have, since 1814, been made in its constitution.

SWEDEN.

SWEDEN extends 1000 miles from N. to S., and 300 from E. to W. It is in general a very flat country; and from Gottenburg, in the W., to Stockholm, in the E., there is scarcely an acclivity to be seen.

It was formerly divided into five general parts:—Sweden proper, Gothland, Nordland, Lapland, and Finland, which were subdivided into provinces. The entire country is divided into eventy-three governments. The country is well watered by rivers (though it has scarcely a navigable one), by numerous lakes and inland pieces of water, on which the palaces and villas are usually built. In winter the cold is excessive, and in summer the heat is intense, but modified by the inhence of a very service air. In summer, all the rocks are quite covered with flowers, and the gardens plentifully abound in fruit. Horses, Cowa, Hogs, Goats, Sheep, Elks, Reindeer, Bears, Wolves, Foxes, Wild Cats, and Squirrels are the animals principally found in the country. In some parts are rich silver and copper nunes, and vast forests of timber-trees. Boards, Gunpowder, Leather, Iron, Copper, Tallow, Skins, Pitch, Resin, and Masts, are the principal articles of export. The inhabitants are of a strong and vigorous constitution. The Swedish houses are generally constructed of wood, and exhibit very little art in their crection. Turf generally covers the roofs in many places, and the goats may be seen browsing from off the houses.

The form of the Swedish Government has frequently varied. It was elective Monarchy before the accession of Gustavus I. In 1397, by the union of Calmar, it was stipulated that Denmark, Sweden and Norway should be ruled over by the same monarch, and hence Sweden became a mere tributory to the Danish kingdom. Gustavus Vass rescued it from this degradation, and had the sovereignty of the country conferred upon him in 1323, and the crown made hereditary in his male issue, and afterwards extended to the female line in his family. In the regency of his daughter the nobles assumed a power offensive to the elergy and people, and Charles XI. Stomethed a formal cession of the absolute sovereignty, which afterwards devolved on his son Charles XII. From this monarch the crown passed in succession to his sister Ulnea, who resigned it to her consort, Frederick I. Gustavus III., in 1772, effected a revolution, whereby he secured many of the royal prerogatives forced from the throne of Sweden since the regn of Frederick I., at which period it was regarded as the most limited monarchy in the world. This measurch foil in 1792, by the hands of an assassin, leaving his son, Gustavus Adolphus, a minor, who became of age in 1796. This prince was deposed on the 1st of May, 1809, and his uncle, the Duke of Seedermania, was called to the throne. This monarch's son dying, he resigned the throne, and the Swedish Diet met to elect a successor, which they did, in the person of the brave Bernadotte, a French Marshal, Prince of Ponte Corvo. This person, though a Frenchman, and though he owed all his eminence to Bonaparte, yet fought against him, with the silles, in 1813, and, in 1814, secured Norway to Sweden by the Treaty of Kiel.

The Established religion of Sweden is the Lutheran.

Money.—All common accounts are carried on in Riksgeld dellars. Banco is chiefly used in Mescantile transactions. The Swedish Paper marked "Trettiows" (32) is 32sk, banco, or one Riksdollar, that is 48 sk.) Riksgeld. There are also notes as low as 8 sk. banco, about 34d. English. 4 Dollars litkageld are equal to 1 specie dellar (Norwegian); 10 Riksdollars banco, are equal to 15 Riksdollars Riksgeld, or 34 Riksdollars silver spec. 2 of the silver pieces marked 18 are equal to 1 Riksdollar Riksgeld, marked "Trettiowa." The silver marked § R.—sp: is equal to 15 sk. (Norw. money) so that R's 3 sk. more than the Norwegian 1/2 mark which is marked 12.

Posting in Sweden.—The charge per 'w. mile per Horse is 24 sk.banco at the country stations, and 32 at 68 fast stations, that is, when starting from the town. It is usual to give the boy who accessions of 3 facilities.

Fahlun, the capital of Delecarlia, is 120 miles N W. of Stockholm, containing a population of 4000. Its streets are long and wide. It is situated in the midst of a region of copper mines, extending about twenty-eight miles in length and seven in breadth. This wide space is enclosed, and partly penetrated by rocks of reddish granite, which, fowards the middle, gradually merge into an unscrous rock, the greater part of which is composed of iron and copper pyrites. During many centuries these mines were the most productive in the world, yelding annually eight millions of pounds of pure metal. The present annual produce is thus estimated:—copper, 4,500 skip pounds; gold, 250 ducats; silvet, 500 marks; lead, from 100 to 150 skip pounds; vitriol, 600 or 900 tons; ochre, 1000 tons; brimstone, 20 to 30 pounds. The ore is not rich, and the best is said to yield 20, but the poorest only 14 per cent.

Gostheborg or Gothenburg.—Horsz :--

Is a large and handsome commercial town, situated on the left bank of the Gothalf, near the sea, 245 miles W.S.W. of Stockholm. It has about 26,000 in usbitsants, and enjoys a very active commerce.

The Gotha is navigable from the sea to the Falls of Trollhitten, where the navigation is continued by a canal along the river, which here rushes impetuously down a gorge, a height of 190 feet. Between the canal and the river there is a range of twe-mills belonging to a Glasgow company. The ship canals pass through the town and are spauned by takeful brings. The wo churches are noble hulldings; the grand square is very fine, and in it is the beautiful bronze statue of Gustavus Adolphus, this may be called one of the most successful bronze statue of Gustavus Adolphus, this may be called one of the rocks behind the town, its will be well repaid by the extensive and beautiful be well repaid by the extensive and beautiful be well repaid by the extensive and beautiful seven betained.

both good and cheap. On the canal are many objects of interest, some five hours from Gothenburg are the fine fails or chutes of Trollhattan; aufficient time is allowed to see these and the aplendid locks. Later is seen the pensive Lake Wettern The scenery generally is somewhat flat, the wood has the appearance of second growth, but the sull, especially near Stockholm, is charming, there is all the variety of lake and river, pretty islands, and bold promontaries.

At Roxen there is a succession of locks, time is given to go and see the old monastery, where many of the Swedish kings lie buried, and where also interesting relics are shown. At Matala the celestated engine manufactory can be visited. At Soder könen is a mineral spring of considerable repute, sufficient time is allowed to explore the town which possesses s-me interest.

The scenery near Stockholm is very beautiful, and although the commanding position of the city is not so well seen when the entrance is made from the Gotha canal, as it is from the east side, still there is sufficient to make the assertion true, that this is one of the best placed cities in Europe.

Gottland.—An Island belonging to and situate on the East coast of Sweden. Chief town, Wisby, opposite Westerwick on the Swedish coast. We understand there is good sporting and fine scenery here.

Lies in a situation remarkable for its beautiful scenery. It is long, and irregularly constructed, occupying three rocky islands, besides two peniu-sulas. Travellers all concur in one opinion, that Stockholm is one of the finest cities in Europe in position; it is not uncommon to call if the Venice of the North, and whilst it will not compare in detail with that fair city of the sea, yet its panoramic effect is quite equal. Numerous rocks of granite, rising boldly from the surface of the water, create a variety of beautiful views. The harbour of Stockholm is a very flue one, admitting slups of the largest burden. At its extremity rise several structs, one above the other, in the form of an amphitheatre; and at the summit is the palacea magnificent building. The principal objects of attraction are the Cathedral, the Bank, and the House of the Diet. This city also contains a very large number of literary and scientific institutions. The population is about 80,000.

There is here a Royal Academy of Science, founded by the celebrated Linnaua, associated with a few other learned men, in 1741; and also a Royal Academy of Arts. The Arsenal has within it an immense number of trophics and standards taken from different nations.

Stockholm, with the small territory surrounding it, constitutes a separate government. Manufactures of glass china silks woollens &c. are carried on here.

of glass, china, aliks, woollens, &c., are carried on here. The visitor should lose no time in gaining tho fine view from the tea garden at Mose Backe; he will be astonished at the numerous islands dotting the clear sea below; there is ever the charm of ships moving in er out; he will not fail to observe the beauty of the spires piercing the sky, nor the handson ne museum just finishing, nor above all, the noble palace which towers above everything class, and is a regys a handsome object from whatever part Stockholm is looked at.

The best view of Stockholm is that obtained when sailing out towards the Ballie; but the vialtor will do well to cross from point to point in the little beats paddled by women, called Dalkullor, in their picture-que costume.

Though the great charm of Stockholm is its situation, and the natural beauty of its environs, yet it is by no means destitute of artistic and historical features. The Palace is a large handsome building, with a basement of granite; it is built of carved stone, brick, and stucco; the inside contains an interesting gallery of paintings, mostly by Swedish artists; the arrangement of the rooms is tasteful; in them are to be seen the portraits of those who waited upon Bernadotte, praying him to be king; also, in accordance with the fashion of northern Europe, is to be seen the room as that king left it. There is a good library; it possesses a large bible of asses skin, and also a fine specimen of engros ing in Anglo Saxon, the work of an Englishman and his wife, left to the Monks at Canterbury on condition it should not leave that city. There is a sculpture gallery in the building, the gem is the Sleeping Endymion at the end of the gallery, a truly beautiful example of Greek art.

The Cathedral is a mixture of architecture more curtous than beautiful, contains the sarcophagi and trophics of Gustavus Adolphus, and Charles XII., and also the crests of the knights of the Sersphim Order.

Church of St. Nicholas, near the palace, the oldest church, fine altar piece. Riddarhaus or house of sasembly for the nobles. In front is the statue of Gustavus Vasa. Near this place is the statue of the founder of Stockholm, and part of the oldest house.

Museum.—Royal wardrobe, a collection of armour, anights on horseback, and infantry armed cap-dpie, one very fine suit by Benvenuto Celini. In the same building are many reites of Swedens best kings, and their old clothes.

Museum of Northern Antiquities, well worth seeing; these various museums will be gathered together in the new building when complete.

Deer Part is a very pleasant drive in the suburbs; in it is a aumner theatre, cafea, &c., also porphry vases, statues, &c.; it is a delightful place to ramble in after the heat of the day. It is 290 E. miles from Sundsvall; 605 from Tor-

FINLAND.

The traveller from Stockholm to St. Petersburg has the advantage of seeing something of Finland. When he pays his fare, his Foreign Office Passport is taken from him, he must first obtain the vise of the Russian consul in Stockholm, he has to pay some 8s. or 9s. for a Russian one, and both are given up to him when near Circustate.

The sail is altogether a pleasant one, there are innumerable small granite islands covered with wood, and the sea has the appearance of a lake broken continually by land.

The boat first stops at Abo (pronounced Obo) there is a long rest of Bolours allowed here, meals have to be taken on shore, the "Society's House" on the quay is the best. Abo covers a large extent of ground, the bourses of painted wood, are low, the streak wide, and at right angles; the view should be obtained from the heights or from the top of the observatory, it is very pretty, there is the river through the bown, the various coloured buildings; to the left a Sampse of the Guif of Fioland, and almost all cand the broken granite surface covered with Wood.

OBJECTS OF INTEREST:—The Cathedral, an old bick building, contains a fine organ, chapels with 50 d hon-work gates, frescore illustrating Finnish hstory, fine interior. The observatory. Teagardus, where a good band usually plays. The castle better the castle of the river.

The steamer usually arrives at 8 p.m., and leaves &s a.m., the morning but one following; in the Pening it reaches Helsingfors.—The traveller will not fail to solve the intricacy of the channel off here, he shall be seen a good riew of the men-of-war, gunboats, but stores, and soon arrives at the quay.

HOTELS.—Society's house.—HOTEL DU NORD:— Esingfors is a handsome town on a granite fountion, much frequented as a watering-place in homer. The visitor will perhaps want to see the fires, the will have to obtain permission from the hangandant. Objects of interest:—The Cathedral, a new building in the form of the Greek Cross, situated in the great square, blue dome with stars, handsome pillars, approached by a double flight of wide grante steps, listle is a flue altar piece by Neft. Ascend by all means to the outer gallery on top of the doine, there is a lovely view of water, rock, vegetation, and houses, in fact one of the most pleasing in no othern it massia.

The two sides of the square on leaving the church are filled to the right, the University, and to the left, the Senate House.

Museum in the University, good collection of Finnish minerals.

Bathonia (Revel). -The traveller will have a tew hours only allowed here, the approach from the sea very pleasing, he had better take a droshky to the new part on the heights, where he can drive amongst the villas, and down to the shore, where he can obtain good bathing, or he may scamper through the town.

OBJECTS OF INTEREST: —The Cathedral, first builtin 1329, but many times destroyed by lightning; good specimens of Gothic, cuntains some floo soulpture.

St. Nicholas' church, copy of the dance of death aimilar, or nearly so, to that at Lubeck, contains the body of a duke, some 150 years dead, in perfect preservation, he is buried in rich lace and velvet.

Revel is much frequented in summer as a watering place.

NORWAY.

In Norway the Railway is called Jernbane.

NORWAY is about 1100 miles in length, extending from the Naze, In lat. 57:30, to the North Cape, in lat. 71:10. Its breadth is very unequal, varying from 40 to 280 miles. It is naturally formed into two glivisions, namely, Northern and Southern, the whole of the Northern and the Western half of the Southern so excupled by the great chain of mountains. The Eastern half of the Southern portion is unadulted or hilly, covered with Forests and Lakes. Norway is not populous in proportion to its extent, owing to its mountainous character and northern position. This country, Indeed, is occupied by the great mountain chain extending along the peninsula, of which it fours part. The branches of this chain enclose valleys of various forms, the bottoms of which are generally occupied by firths or lakes, berdered in the lower parts, in the Southern part of the country, with meadows and cornfields, which extend upwinds as far as the first accelivates of the mountains, then, as the ground becomes steeper, the pinc forests raise their tall heads among inaccessible cliffs, and above all are seen the peaks covered with snow, or enveloped in clouds.

The superficial area of Norway is about 122,460 English square miles. In climate it is less cold, but more moist and changeable, and generally less satisficients, than Sweden. Among the mountains the winter is long and severe. The weather is generally steady, being either good or bad for considerable periods. The summer is delightful, and very warm. The fisheries, particularly on the west coast, find employment and wealth for the natives, and supply the finest sailors for the Norwegian feet. The principal fish are cod, heritigs, salmon, and lobsters. The general exports are dried fish, timber, planks, coloid, Prussian blue, copper, Ion, and ica.

Norway was formerly governed by its own hereditary sovereigns. On the death of Haakon V. in 1319, without male issue, his grandson in the tennale line, Magnus Sinek, unted in his person the kingdoms of Sweden and Norway. Olaf V., son of the celebrated Margaret, unted the kingdoms of Norway and Denmark. Margaret succeeded her son in 1340. On her dendise, the country, with Denmark and Sweden descended to her nephew, Eric. Sweden was afterwards separated from Denmark by Gustaf Vasa. In 1814, Norway was ceded by the King of Denmark to Sweden, but the people, not approving of this cession, rose in arms to prevent the entrance of the Swedish troops. The silies, after the conclusion of the war with France, supported Sweden. After some tesistance the Norwegians were compelled to yield; and a diet, assembled on the 20th October 1814, came to the resolution that Norway should be governed by the same King as Sweden, but as an independent state, preserving its constitution and laws, to which the king of Sweden assented.

The Steamer from Hamburg to Bergen touches at Christiansand (but does not wait the arrival of the Hull boat).

Money.—The Specio Dollar (paper or silver) containing 5 marks or orts of 24 sk. each, making 120 sk. The paper money combrises notes of 1 specio dollar (on white paper), 5 (bine), 10 (yellow), 50 (green), and 100 (red). The silver money comprises 1 sp. dollar; i ditto; 1 mark or 24 sk.; i mark, or 12 sk.; i mark, or 8 sk. The small money consists of silver pieces of 4 and 2 sk., and copper coins of i, 1, and 2 sk. One skilling is equal to about id. English; 1 mark = 10\frac{3}{2}d; and one specie dollar = about 4s. 6d. Exchange:—For \(\mathbf{\pm}\) 1 striling from 4 dollars 60 sk. to 4 dollars 80 sk. The Swedish paper is not generally taken in Norway. They, however, usually take it at the hotels; and we understand that Messrs. Dybwad & Son, merchants in Oster Gade, will change it. The Norwegian sp. dollar is equal to about 4 Swedish Riksdollars-Riksgeld.

Weights...-16 skaalpund = 1 lispund; 20 lispund (or 320 skaalpund) = 1 skippund. Butter, meat, and most of the products of the country are sold by the following weights:...2 mark = 1 skaslpund; 12 skaalpund = 1 bismerpund; 3 bismerpund = 1 vog.

Measure.—30 inches equal to 31 English. The most common measure is the Alen:—12 inches — I foot; 2 feet — 1 alen.

Posting in Norway.— The charge is 24 sk. spec. per Norwegian mile per horse at the country stations, and at the fast stations 36 sk. spec.; and 48 sk. from towns. It is usual to give the key who accompanies the carriol 4 sk. per mile for 1 horse; but should be have the care of more than one horse. 3 sk. per mile for each horse.

The Norwegian mile is nearly equal to 7 English miles.

Luggage. - The luggage of a traveller is very slightly examined in this country.

Language.-The language spoken is Norse, which is the same as Danish.

English Vice-Consuls are to be found in all the principal towns in Norway-Christiania, Bergen, Trondhjem, Christiansand, Stavanger, &c. Good maps may be procured at Christiania, and we would recommend the traveller to purchase one, as he will find it very useful in journeying through this country.

We recommend all Travellers to purchase a "Reiscroute," which is printed and sold by J. Chr. Abelsted, in the Toldbod Gadon, in Christiania, annually, price 24 sk. equal to 10 th. It contains air the posting and boating stations on all the highway, their distances and charge for posting, (regulated by law.) It takes little room, being only a few pages.

Fishing.—This country is very much visited by anglers for the salmon fishing. In the north, the Tana, the Alten, and the Namsen. The Rauma near Molde, and the Topdals rivers in the South, are among the most famous; there are also many others well known, some slightly, and numbers still untried, in one or two rivers, as much as two or three thousands of pounds weight have been taken in a season with the fly, by a single rod. But, except to those who come very early, settling themselves in the best places, and who know the country well, the known good rivers will be found occupied, (some few are let) and many may be tried without success, and probably the season will be spent taking only two on three fish. Excellent trout fishing is to be met with in almost all parts. - The Like fishing is also very good.

Waterfalls.—Voring Fos. about 100 English miles south-east to Bergen, a large body of water falling in one mass 900 feet, generally considered the first fall in Norway. A stemmer goes once a fortnight f. om Bergen to within a day's journey by row-boat, and on foot or horseback.

Rjukandfog about 100 miles from Christiania, due west, two-thirds post, and one-third boat and ponyback; 650 feet high, a very large body of water falling in two parts, by some considered as line as the Voring Fos. There are numbers of other very fine falls.

DENMARK.

DENMARK is almost an uniformly level country. The kingdom is divided into two great livisions—the continental and the insular. The former consists of a long narrow peninsula, projected from Germany; and the latter of a number of islands, placed between that peninsula and the kingdom of Sweden. The productive industry of Denmark is chiefly confined to agricultural produce.

The aspect of the Continental part is flat and undiversified, containing neither manutains nor rivers of any magnitude. The Kiel is the only canal of importance, it admits vessels of 120 tons burthen, and extends from the Baltic to the Eyder at Rendsburg, where the river becomes mavigable, thus pening up a communication between the two seas, or through 105 miles of territory. This canal was commenced in 1777, and completed at an expense of £800 000. The lands are in genera lexicilently ultivated, and rich in pasturage. The monarchy of Denmark is the oldest in Europe. Its regal missance stands contemporaneously with the proudest epoch of the Roman Empire; and the advancement of the people in discipline and arms in the 10th century can be learned from the fact of their descent on England, and the complete subjugation of the country by them in the early part of the following entury. In 1397, Norway by inheritance and Sweden by conquest, became united to Denmark, under Queen Margaret, denominated the "Semirain's of the North," on account of her heroism.

Copenhagen,-Hotels:-Royal, the best; Hotel Phoenix. Hotel d'Angieterre.

This city is situated on the East coast of streets, and adorned with very fine buildings, viz., several palaces, churches, the hospitals, Town-house, Exchange, and mansions of the nobility. The royal library contains 400,000 volumes, and the university 112,000. A large collection of northern antiquities adorn the rooms of the palace. It has a population of about 130,000, and is defended by a In the vicinity are very many beautiful and pictu-

The streets are well paved. The Exchange is a beautiful Gothic building, built of brick, ami stone quoins, after a design by Inigo Jones. It is surmounted by a shigular spire, representing in its formation four dragons, with their twisted tails tapering upwards, after the fashion of a corkscraw, with their heads turned to the four points of the compass, and it has recently undergone thorough repair; the colouring in the large room is very chaste. The church of the Trinky has a very fine fower 200 feet high, and on its top there is an observatory. The Saviour's Church has a very curious winding staircase, and is surmounted with a tower 285 feet high. The church of the Holy Ghost, and Notre Dame, are very fine buildings. The interior of the latter will be found well worth a visit. In it are beautifully wrought marble statues of the twelve Apostles, Christ, and a kneel-Zealand, where the small is e of Armack forms a ing Angel. They were executed by Thorwaldeen, superb harbour. It is one of the fluest cities of and are supported by pedestals in full view. The Europe, and laid out in regular, though narrow prospects from any of these thurches is magnificent streets, and adorned with very fine buildings, vis., symmetry before us is the city and harbour, surrounded by their bastions and windmills, the citadel, line-of-battle ships, frigates and corveties. dockyards, arsenals, warehouses, palaces, parks, gardens, plantations, squares, streets, canals, and market-places; whilst the general population is citadel, said to be impregnable; and also by several industriously engaged with horses and vehicles in the ordinary avocations of a commercial life. A long wide plain, interspersed with forests and lakes, is seen to the Westward; whilst towards the East appears the blue eas, covered with craft of all description, with the coast of Sweden in the background.

A great many bathing places are to be found at Copenhagen, and the water of the Baltic is half salt and half fresh. We also find numerous theatres there, which are open every night, not even excepting Sunday. The Tivoli Gardens, outside the Western Gate, and the Alhambra Gardens, are among the chief objects of attraction. These are the nightly resort of a numerous portion of the people. In it is a very tastefully arranged conservatory, and an excellent hand is in attendance and performs several delightful pleces of music. A small Comic, Theatre, a Bowling Alley, Menagerie, a Museum of Carlostites, and numerous Cafés are to be found in the gardens.

The city itself is entered by four arched gateways, having drawbridges across the most guarded by soldiers. A toll is demanded for horses and vehicles ontering the city. Another object of attractive interes its the Royal Palace of Christiansborg, built or white stone, after the Italian style of architecture, The eye will be taken by the four colossal statues ornamenting its stupendous façade. Coloured silk damask and silver ornament its empanelled walls. The ball room should be particularly noticed; its walls and arched ceiling representing a pure white marble and gold. A colomade is formed by the Corinthian columns on either side; chandellers, with cut glass pendants and spangles, suspended from the celling and adorning it; the whole being reflected by the plate glass at either side. The floors are of oak, maple, and ebony, diamonded. The stables should also be visited: they contain stalls for 200 horses.

Near the Palace is the Maleri Samling (Pleture Gatlery) open from 11 till 3; and Thorwaldsen's Museum, open three times a week from 11 till 2, which is well worth a special notice, and the visitor will be able to spend hours in contemplating the beauty of the sculptors' work. The Museum treaffs a hollow square, the outer walls are coloured in yellow ochre, with the reception of the sculptor and his works from Rome depacted on them 11 contains an immense and beautiful collection of spirks, all being the creation of one man, who is thus apoken of in a work, entitled, A Try to Demark.

"Albert Thorwaldsen, the son of a poor ship-carpenter from Iceland, was born in Copenhagen 1770. His gentus, at an early age, impelled him to Rome, where he arrived almost penniless; but, having soon afterwards obtained employment in Canowa's studio, his talent very quickly developed itself in the beauty and gentus of his designs. Ultimately, he took a studio of his own, and modelled his famed statue of "Jason," but, as he obtained no order for It, he, in despair, determined to quit Rome, and return to Denmark. All his arrangements were made for that purpose, when Mr. Hope, of London, seeing the cast of "Jason," was so much struck with he hearty, that he immediately ordered it in marble.

"This turned the tide of Thorwalds of fortufrom that time his fame was established, and comissions poured in upon him. He then fixed residence in Rome, making occasional visits Demmark, and finally settled in Copenhagen in 1 year 1838.

"With an ample fortune, elected President of f Academy of Arta, a suite of apartments allotted him in the Palace of Charlottenborg, decorat with the highest orders of merit of his own count and others, and almost adored by every person wi know him, he now devoted himself to the duties his honourable office.

Thorwaldsen is buried in the yard in the mid of his works, a simple grave, with flowers evfreshly growing, is the beautiful monument i memory of him.

English Church Service is held in a room neathe Museum.

The visiter should ascertain immediately on his arrival the days and hours the various exhibition are open. It is said of Copenhagen, that "there are too many things to see and too fow to sethem," so the visiter will perhaps find that the Scandinavian Museum which he so much wished to see will not be open again during the next for days. At present the Scandinavian Museum anthe Thorwaldsen collection are open twice a week. The woods at Charlottenlund are very line. Oper carragers start frequently on Saturday and Sunday afternoons from near the citadel, fare according to the number of passengers. A trip should be made to Elsineaur (by steamer).

TURKEY.

Ther are several routes from London to Constantinople which offer peculiar attractions to the general traveller, particularly that via Cologne, and thence to the Danube, the Black Sea, and the Bosphorus.

The routes via Vienna and Trieste, and thence by the Austrian Lloyd's Steamers to Constantinople; or by the Rhine, Switzerland, Italy, and Malta are very pleasant; but too fatiguing and circuitous. The zoute for travellers with much luggage is of course by the Steam-ships of the Oriental Company, from Southampton, direct to Constantinople; but the mere amateur tourist will find the Paris and Marseilles route by far the most direct, agreeable, and cheapest.

Those that would go by the quickest route—now that the line of railway from Paris to Marseilles is completo—should therefore go through France, and time their arrival at Marseilles so as to eatch one of the direct steamers plying between that port and Constantinople. Those steamers leave Marseilles twice a week, and make the passage in about eight days; so that a man need not be longer than ten days on the road.

The various routes from London to Pans being fully specified elsewhere, we have only to add that the journey from Pans to Marseilles is now performed by Railway the whole distance. The journey from London to Marseilles (890 miles) can now he accomplished in 44 hours, allowing 10 hours' stay in Paris, or in 42 hours, with 3 hours' stay in Paris, as shown in the following table:—

There are two lines of steamers from Marseilles to Malta. One of these is a direct line; the other touches at Genoa, Civita Vecchia, Naples, and Messina; and both are so arranged as to correspond at Malta with the pucket proceeding to Constantinople. The departures take place twee a week and approximately the proceeding to Constantinople.

TURKET.

From Malta the steamer steers a direct course towards the Morea, the old land of the Messenians, passes between the two capes or headlands of Matapan on the left, and Cerito on the right, thence on past Cape Matea or St Angelo, another bluff, mountainous cape on the left side. The ateamer them bears somewhat towards the Greek coast, trending still towards the left-hand side, and passes in succession the ports and islands of classic Greec. If the weather be clear the traveller will find much amusement in noting the course of the steamer through these seas, until he gradually approaches the entrance of the far-famed shores of the Dardanelles.

With the exception of one or two stoppages at the entrance of the straits, there is very little to interest the tourist in the scenery through the Dardanelles. The shores are a succession of low hills, bare and monotonous, presenting no novelty to excite attention until the steamer reaches the now important town of Gallipoli, situated on the European side of the strait. A short distance beyond this the Dardanelles gradually enlarge until the steamer enters the Sea of Marinora, when the tourist will obtain his distant but first sight of Constantinople, or the Queen of the East, situated on a tongue of land running into the sea.

As the steamer dashes on apparently with increased speed at the sight of the Queen of the East, the white building, and minarcts glittering in the sun are seen more distinctly, until the traveller distinguishes the celebrated mosque of Santa Sophia, the Sultan's palace, the entrance to the Bosphorus, and then the steamer suddenly turns a juiting point of land called the Scraglio Point, and glides at half speed into the Golden Horn, or splendid harbour of Constantinopie. At this moment, if the weather be fine and clear, the gorgeous panorama that opens to the view of the voyager is one of the most extraordinary It is possible to conceive or to describe. Accustomed as English travellers are to sea-views, the coup d'aul of the Golden Horn will elicit unqualified admiration. It is a bay or amphitheatre, surrounded by hills which are covered with buildings, domes, minarets, and fairy-palaces, down to the water's edge; those on the summits being intermingled with the foliage of cypress groves, and those on the shores appearing through the floating panoram 1 of a thousand vessels in the harbour: ships, steamers, feluccas, and myriads of carques, skymming in all directions. Added to which a clear blue sky, equally blue water, and a brilliant sun shining over the whole prospect, produces one of the most magnificent views in the world. The traveller, however, should take a protracted gaze at the enchanting scene, as this is unquestionably the fair side of the medal: for the instant he disembarks at Tophana quay, passes through dirty Galata, and ascends the steep unpaved street leading to Pera, the contrast will be as great as being transported from the Crystal Paiace at Sydenham to the purliens at Wapping. Hence we recommend him to take a long and lingering look at Constantinople from the sea before he lands.

Those who mean to confine their excursions to Stamboul and its vicinity, want no weapons; but those who mean to go inland had better provide themselves with some portable efficacious arms, such as the smaller size of Colt's or Deane's revolvers. There are too many bashi-bazouks about, to advise any one to leave the vicinity of Constantinople unarmed.

Travellers who wish to keep in good health should recollect that the climate in summer is changing from one extreme to another, and that the same day, even the same hour, may be intensely hot and cold. They should wear cotton shirts and flannel; their outer dress should be of light make and colour, as for India, but they should have some very warm and portable outer clothing, to provide against a sudden change of temperature. On coming here they should not adopt the Fez, which exposes novices to a coup de soleil, but they should wear white hats or caps, of such a make as to shelter the head and keep it cool. Those that would sunke cigars should bring them, for cigars here are as expensive as a London, and not near so good. It is the same with gloves, and other small laxuries. Goods of this class, sold in Pars, are had and dear. It should be recollected that the climate of Constantinople, with its thin, purs, and against it is salubrious, but also very dangerous, and that persons of a full habit, or those that any

Intemperate, are liable to acute diseases of an alarming character. Catching cold very frequently leads to bronchitis and pneumonia; intemperance produces dysentery. Wine, water, milk, eggs, and fruit, if not actually noxious, are at least dangerous. The water should never be drunk pure, but mixed with whie or coffee, and those that would be in very good health should profit from the hint the Turks take from the climate, and druk as much black coffee as possible. But as Turkish coffee is too strong for English palates, it should be thinned with water. Cold water mixed with coffee is a delightful and salutions beverage - at lest in this country—and those alone can appreciate it who have vainly sought to quench that consuming thirst from which all strangers suffer in summer.

On arriving in the Bosphorus the stranger should charter a caique, but not one of the larger Maltese boats. The calques are by far the safest boats, if one gets into them and ut of them with proper care; and the Maltese, anywhere but in Malta, are among the greatest scoundrels in the Levant. The stranger. if conscious of having no goods liable to duty (and it would be strange if he had), should refuse to be aken to the Sustant-house, where he would be detained to no purpose. He should tell the kaikshi to take him to Tophana. His merely saying the word is quite enough. One man with one man's luggage should pay four plustres for his caique, two men should pay six. We make no mention of ladies, for they have no business here, and would only be miserable. The custom-house officer on the landing-stage at Tophana will help the stranger out of the calque, see that his inggage is taken out, and load it on the back of a humal or parter. For this service the custom-house officer expects a backshish of three plastres, and should have it, but not until he has asked for it. The stranger should name the hotel he wishes to go to, and the hamal will conduct him. If more than one hamal seizes the luggage, they should be left to fight it out among themselves. If the luggage be really one man's luggage, the stranger will pay the same money to two or three which he would have paid to one, namely, five plastres, or, if he wishes to be very liberal, seven. To avoid uscless disputes the landlord should be told to pay the money. But before the hamals are sent away it is necessary to have a preliminary settling with the landord. In ordinary times, it is a general rule in the East to inquire the price of room, breakfast, and dinner, and it is equally a matter of course to offer one-third or even one-half of the sum demanded. But these are extraordinary lines. The hotels, or rather the boarding-houses, which are called hotels, are full to overdowing, and for one guest who leaves the house, deterred by the prices, the Ludloid may have two or three next day, who will give any money for a bed and a place at the table d'hote. Therefore, as matfors stand, though the price should be inquired for to check the landlord's extravagant fancy on the dry of reckening, but tritling abstements, if any, can be expected from the sum demanded, which is likely to be 12f. per day for room, breakfast, and dinner; but 12f. is cheap; 15f. is not an extraordinary domand, and he many instances 20L per day have been demanded, and have been given. In any case the stranger should refuse to settle the price with the landlady if the husband be absent. He shoul vather wait for the return of the master of the house, for greedy and grasping as the Greeks are-most of the botel keepers are either Greeks or Maltese-the women are far more greedy and grasping, and decide their bargains with an unblushing hardness which utterly confounds the wanderer from countries. here "the cold in clime are cold in blood."

The stranger should not look for information from the landlord or the waiters of his hotel. They know nothing, and, generally speaking, are not even able to tell him in which direction to go to the British legation. But if they give him information nine times out of ten it will be found to be incorrect. very first thing which a man must learn in the streets of Pera is to depend entirely upon himself, to follow his own judgment in everything, and to prefer acting upon his own crude impressions to acting upon the advice which, by dint of perseverance, he can worm out of the inhabitants of the place. Above II, let him at once understand that almost all the persons who surround him are nearly quite as much strangers in Pera as he himself, for though they may have lived here for years, they do not know or underisand anything, because they can see no reason why they should. We often object to the Turks that they have treated this country as if they merely camped in it. The same may be said of the Christians.

and Franks of Pera; they take no interest in the place and its ways, and though they pass their lives here, they treat the town as an encampment; a sort of halting-place on a vagaboudising tour.

Though in the first instance it is necessary to go to an hotel, a prudent stranger will not remain there. but look out for some furnished lodgings. The only way to find them is to walk through the principal streets, and inquire in the various shops, for bills in the windows announcing the fact that furnished lodgings are to let, are almost unknown. The few houses where such notices are displayed are always full. The people of Pera may be said to detest advertising; the majority of their shops have not even the name of the firm written up. But all the shops that display a proprietor's name are driving a roating trade. We could name a general dealer at Galata who has made a fortune simply because his name is on the door of his shop. If, by dint of asking questions, the stranger has found a house with rooms to let, he will have to combat two propositions, which are invariably made. Not content with letting the room, the people will propose giving him breakfast and dinner also. He may accept the breakfast, but he should decline the dinner, for, in most cases, he will have to eat it alone, in the worst_room of the house, served on a dirty tablecloth, by a grumbling servant, while the children of the house come in and look at the barbaria 1 taking his meal. The reason why the people of Pera are so fond of making contracts for farnishing dinner is, that of six dinners but three are eaten. The stranger gets disgusted, and, falling in with friends and acquaintances, he naturally goes and dines at an hotel. He cats one dinner. and pays for two; and, since in the end he must dine at an hotel, he had better do so from the first, There are no restaurants where a man can dine à la carte. The prices for dinner in the at tels vary from 3f. to bl. per day.

The next proposition which the stranger should resolutely decline, is to take the rooms by the month. Some triffing difference in the price is held out as a balt, but it should not be swallowed. If taken for a month, the landled will also insist on prepayment, and every complaint of rudeness, fifth, and neglect is after that met with the cool rejoinder, "Siete pudrone," "You are perfectly at liberty to go if you don't like the house." But, if the stranger retains really the mastership of his own movements by not binding himself for more than a day, he will meet with a small degree of attention, and, strange to tell. in that case no one will ask him to pay in advance. Where the people refuse to let their lodgings by the day, there the stranger had better refuse to live, for assuredly the proprietors calculate upon a month's tent for a fortnight's occupation. The price of lodgings varies according to the size of the room and house: two francs per day is very cheap, and francs per day very dear. Very good rooms, not too much infested with vermin, may be had for from four to six france per day, and, if the bargain be well driven, the breakfast should be included in that sum. A room, when hired, should be taken possession of at once, for the landlords here do not scruple to let the same room twice in a day, and he who comes first occupies it, while the man who comes too late is in a very awkward position, especially if he has given up his room in the hotel. A slow or carcless person may most unexpectedly find himself on the payement, with his traps loaded on the shoulders of two han.a's, whose language he does not understand. but whose impatient gestures ask as plainly as words can tell, "where, in the name of all that is absurd are we to go to?"

These hints will suffice to help a stranger over the difficulties of the first few days, and enable him, on settling down quietly, to live and learn the manners and customs of the Perote Franks.

Money.—The ailver cein is as follows: Plastre (Ghrouch)—about 2d. English; 4 do. (Limi-para)—1d. English; 4 do. (Onlouk)—3d. English. The Gold is as follows:—Rubrah—64d. English; Beschlish 5 plastres = 1s. 14d.; 20 plastre-piece (old Ghazi)—about 4s.; 25 do.—4e. 2d.; 10 do.—2e.; 5da.—4a. An English £1 is equal to from 150 to 160 plastres.

Brousse, or Prusa .- This city is brought | river, until it sweeps by the angle of Constantinointo easy reach of all travellers to the East, by the establishment of a line of steamers from Stamboul. which make the trip in about 6 hours to Mondania, its port, where horses and arabas are always to be had, with which to arrive here the same evening. Brown is as celebrated for the beauty of its position, at the foot of Mount Olympus, as it has always been famous for its hot sulphur and chalybeate baths, which are much rewrited to by the natives and resideuts at Stamboul, but have not yet attracted sufficient attention in England. The invalid will here and three Hotels where every comfort may be had, and eme lowy in that lately erected close to the baths, in a most picturesque locality, occupied by Mon. Michel, who was for five years chef de cuisine n one of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's Steamers from Suez. An English Physician, Dr. Cullen, is now resident here. Besides excursions up the mountain, there is much in the town of great interest in the study of Oriental life in all its freshness. The traveller should always bring sovereigns with him, as it is the coin most in repute, and generally commands a small premium.

HOTELS:

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, an excellent house,

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE, good, but dear.

The charge at the Hotel d'Angleterie is 17 france per day, for board and lodging, board consists of a good substantial breakfast and dinner, including wine. This is charged whether the traveller takes his meals at the Hotel or not.

The city of the Grand Seignlor stands on the Western shore of the Thracian Bosphorus, and its situation is equally remarkable for beauty and scentity. A gently declining promontory, secured by narrow seas, at the Fast of Europe, afretches out to meet the continent of Asia, from which its extreme point is separated by so narrow a strait, that in a quarter of an hour a boat can row from one consident to the other. This channel, which is called the Bosphorus, running about twenty miles from the Black Sea, between the beautiful shores of Europa and Asia, looks like a stately ple, and enters the Sea of Marmora. But just before it is lost in that sea it makes a deep elbow to the right, flowing between the triangle of Constantinople Proper, and its suburbs o Galata and Pera, and forming the post which is called the Golden Horn.

Stamboul is built on seven hills, which appear to rise above one another in beautiful succession. The ridge of the first hill is occupied by the Seraglio, behind which, a little on the reverse of the hill, the dome of Santa Sophia can be seen. The second hill is crowned by the mosque of Osmanich, whose dome is strikingly bold and lofty. The still grander mosque of Soliman the Magnificent towers on the third hill; whilst an ancient aqueduct, whose bold arches have the happiest effect, unites the summits of the third and fourth hills. All these, intermingled with houses painted of different colours. the gilded domes, and the elegant and slender minarets crowned by the shining Crescent, impress the beholder with a high idea of the magnificence and splendour of Constantinople. Its situation upon these hills is not only the cause of its beauty but of its salubrity, as it catches all the pleasant breezes from the Bosphorus, the Marmora, and adjoining plains of Thrace. It occupies the whole of a triangle, whose outline is fringed by old walls flanked by towers. Those on the side of the Sea of Marmora, and in some parts of the Golden Horn. have entirely disappeared. But on the land side there is a treble line of formidable ancient walls. which might easily be repaired. The interior of the city, however, but ill corresponds with the beautiful cound will which it presents at a distance. "There is no city that promiseth so much and so deceiveth the expectation." It condits of an assemblage of dark and narrow streets, without names, badly paved, and choked up with dust or mud. Disembarking in one of the numerous caiques, the traveller will land at Galata quay, and a dragoman or interpreter will conduct him through this miserable thoroughfure to an hotel at Pera, the district appropriated to Europeans.

Galata lies on the water-side, and is chiefly inhabited by merchants of all nations, who are confounded under the general name of Franks. They prefer it to Constantineple on account of its vicinity to the harbour. It resembles the very worst-part of Wapping and other sca-faring purlieus on the banks of our own capital. The steep and dirty unpaved street up the hill leads to PERA, which is situated immediately above Galata, and stretches for more than two miles along the summit of a lofty hill. Pera has long been appropriated for the residence of the corps diplomatiques from the different nations of Europe, whe have each of them a palace here. It is also the residence of the most wealthy merchants, who, however, have not done much to render it a habitable place.

After a night's rest the traveller will be prepared to start on a visit to the principal places of attraction in the city and its environs. The first thing will be to hire a valet-de-place, interpreter, or dragoman, as they are called; the expense of one is 6 francs per day. In the next place it is proper to mention that the great mosques, the seraglio, and other public edifices, can only be seen by means of a permission or firman, granted by the Sultan or l'acha, the price of which is £5 10s., so that travellers generally subscribe together and make up a party so as to reduce he expense. As the seraglio, the principal mosques and bazaars, are situated in the city of Constantinoule, the traveller must descend the hill from Pers to Gaiata, and thence over the bridge of boats across the Golden Horn to Stamboul. The scene on this bridge defies description, from the strange combination of magnificent views with the extraordinary oriental crowd passing over the bridge jumbled together, and forming a wondrous kaleidoscope, as bewildering as it is novel and attractive.

SERACLES.—On the eastern promontory stands the palace and gardens of the Seraglio, which cover one of the seven hills. The imperial palace is encicled with lobbs of crystal and lamps of coloured glass, and ornamented with estrich eggs, &c., proclosed with lofty walls, and the whole space is covered with suites of apartments, mosques, baths, gardens, and cypress groves. So many glittering domes, rearing their lofty heads above the verdant follage and painted terraces, produce at a distance a very beautiful effect, which, however, is entirely less upon a nearer inspection, for they are huddled together without symmetry or order. The principal entrance is on the west, through the Bababsonnajan, or Sublime Porte, which is built of marbles, and has a very beavy appearance. Withis is the Sret court, which contains the Mint and the estevated fourth of the Apostles; that of Achibet Vision's divan; opposite is the Baba Salem, or gate of Health, which leads to the second court, where is the Audience chamber, in which Foreign Ambassadors were received by the Sultan in poreos. In this chamber is the Throne, which resembles a large four-post hed. The gate which terminates the second court is called Baba-Saadi, or the gate of Happiness, torough which no stranger is allowed to pass. The furniture of the Palace consists chiefly of the suchs spread round the room, the carpets, and the mirrors. The waits are wainscotted with jaspar, veneered ivory, and mother-of-pearl, and the langings are of silk and cloth of gold, with fringes strung with pearls and Inferior jewels.

The Mosques .- There are fourteen imperial mosques; sixty ordinary mosques, varying in size and beauty; and two hundred and more inferior mosques and messdards; which latter are only distinguished as being places of worship, by having little minarets or towers configuous to them. Of the mosques, the first place, both for magnificence and elegance of architecture, is due to the church of Santa Sophia, situated near the principal gate of the Seraglio. It was built by Constanting. Among the numerous pillars which adorn this mosque, are six of green jaspar, which once supported the roof of the Temple of Diana at Ephesus; and eight of porphyry, that had been placed by Aurelian in the Temple of the Sun at Rome, but were removed hither by Constantine. The visiter should ascend the stairs and go up to the gallery, whence the view is exceedingly fine. The immense size of the building -the s'upendous concave of the domethe magnificence of the columns and varieties of marbles—the singular manner in which it is ifluminated with globes of crystal and lamps of coloures. glass, and ornamented with estrich aggs, &c., produce a striking effect. On looking down, and observing the number of believers at prayers, kneeling in rows across the body of the mosque, with their faces towards Meces, who are constantly bending up and down, touching the ground with their foreheads. and springing up again on their houls, the impression is by no means favourable to a European's gray ity, however grave may be the effect on the Mee selman. The most handsome mesques, after Sala-Sophia, are, that of Mahomet II, which erowus was of the Seven hills, and stands upon the site of the 1, constructed 610, at an enormous expense, and has six minarets of great height and beauty; that of Bajazet, in which are twenty columns of remarkable size and value; viz. ten of verd-antique, four of jasper, and six of Egyptian granite; that of Solyman II, which is esteemed of superior symmetry and elegance. The mosque of Lalell, or the Tulip, is small, but very elegant, and was built by Sultan Mahmond in 1753. It is walnecotted with vencered marble, and has two large embroidered tablets on which are represented the cities of Mecca and Medina. Every mosque has, in general, a large area in front, surrounded by a lotty colonnade of marble, with gates of wrought brass, and in the centre a fountain of polished marble. Adjoining to each is the sepulchral chanci of its founder, where his remains are deposited. Some of these tombs where the sultans, viziers, and great personages repose, are exceedingly pretty. looking through the grated windows of these, the coffins, surmounted by shawls and turbans, and slightly elevated from the floor, with little lamps continually burning, and immense wax torches ighted on particular occasions, strike the eye with peculiar effect. The tomb of Sultan Mahmoud is a peantiful building, entirely composed of white marble, and only recently erected. The room is like a large saloon, well fitted up and carpeted; in the middle of the coffin or catafalque, surrounded by radings of mother-of-pearl, and covered with red velvet richly embroidered in gold. Four magnificent cashmeres are laid on the coffin, and generally there are crowds of women there at their prayers. with their yachmaes lightly tolded, and only their eyes visible. A number of Turks in various costumes are also to be seen at prayers on their carpats. This is the most hand-ome tomb in Stamboul.

THE M NABETS form one of the most pleasing and striking features in the architecture of Constanti-Nothing, indeed, can surpass the effect produced on the nights of illumination at the Turkish capital, when long strings of lamps are hung in festoons from one to the other of these miender lofty towers. Near the summit of these rinarets there is a little gallery, from which, at the ave appointed seasons in the four-and-twenty hours, the Murzzin culls the Mahometans to prayer. Some of the grand mesques have two, others four, and one has even six of these minarcts.

tains are among the chief ornaments of this remarkable city. Some of these, indeed, with their marble fronts, elaborate arabesque ornaments, and Chinese-like roof-, are most beautiful objects. Their number is extraordinary. They meet you whichever way you direct your walk; they stand by every mosque-for before a Turk prostrates himself in prayer he must perform his ablutions. water required to supply these fountains is immense, and is brought from artificial lakes near the forest of Belgrade, about twelve miles from the It is conveyed by means of subterranean aqueducts, and souterazi, or hydraulic pyramids, which latter are placed at regular distances, and ingeniously contrived to overcome the inequalities of surface presented by the country.

SLAVE MARKETS .- There is now no regular slave market in Constantinople. The fair Circassians and Georgians reside in the houses of the merchant to whom they are regularly consigned by their friends. and of these it is impossible for a Frank to obtain a glimpse, for the usual privacy of the harem is granted to them. The chief depôt of the blacks is in a large court-yard attached to the mosque of Suleyman.

THE BAZAARS, where all the business of Constantinople is transacted, are very extensive and numerous, and essentially Opental in appearance. They consist of lotty clothers or corridors, built o stone, and lighted by domes, which are admirably adapted for the climate, and in summer afford a pleasant retreat. Every trade has its particular quarter; and each dealer has a small shop in front, with a room behind for his wares. In one street nothing is to be seen but arms of different kinds: another is filled with jewels, diamonds and precious stones: some are lined with India stuffs, cashineres. with brocade of silver and gold, &c., while numbers of streets are occupied by shoe makers, furriers, pipe makers, cooks, or confectioners, each being confined to a distinct district. The different trades are also appropriated to different nations, and each has the " proper custom of his respective country. The Avmenians with their huge black caps; the Turks with their immense rolled turbans; the Persians with their high sheep-skin conical caps, and every other variety of head-dress. Then the passengers in every Oriental costume - Turks, Allanians, Egyptians, Circussians, merchants, scheiks, der-. FOREZARA. After the mosques, the public foun. | vishes, slaves, and water-sellers, &c. - give such a moder, yet picturesque appearance to these Basaus, that they afford a constant source of amusoment to the European. No spot in the world can boast of each an accumulation of valuable incr-chandise as the great Bazaus of Constantinople. They are perfect thorough-faces for horses, as well as for foot passengers. Not the least angular attraction are a number of Turkish women continually throughing these bazaus, in their feridjee, or folding mantles, peeping through their yachinase, or veil, at the sight of a European.

DANCING DERVISHES -- The Dervishes generally perform twice a week, Tuesday and Friday, in a convent in Pera. There are about twenty performers, with high, round, felt caps, and brown At a given signal they all full flat on mantles. their faces, and rise and walk slowly round and round with their arms folded, bowing and turning slowly several times. They then cast off their mantles and appear in a species of long, full, bellshaped petticoats, and jackets; their feet bure, and one after the other begin to spin; revolving, daneing or turning, for fitteen minutes with extraordinary velocity. It is a ludicrous exhibitio , and excites feelings of ridicule and contempt. Moreover, instead of the Dervishes having that pious and devout appearance the monks of La Trappe and other orders have-in-plring a certain degree 6) respect these religious dancers have a sly, con mag, repulsa e look, peculiarly disgusting to Lutopicans, and in fact, they are in very bad repute gaiong the Frank population of Constantinople.

A Han or Kuan is a square surrounded by buildings with gaileries all found, a tree or two in the middle, and a foundain or coffee-house in the collier. There are nearly two hundred of these places in Constantinople for the secommodation of merchants urriving by caravans. No charge is made for their use; but the rooms are entirely unfumished, so that the occupier must bring histoathers, his little carpet, and such humble articles of cookery as he may require.

Excussion to the Bosphorus.—Every visiter from England will, no doubt, enjoy a sail up this celebrated strait, in one of the pretty lattle caiques, rowed by a couple of stout Turks. These men row very well and the trip is exceedingly pleasant. Or the excursion may be performed by the steamer. No voyager or artist has yet done justice to the beautiful scenery of the mesphorus. The rounded outman of the hills, the light rich green of the vegatation, the luxuriance of tree and flower and herbage, resemble the banks of Killarney or Windermere. For thirteen miles, the waters escaping from the Black Sca. now compressed by swelling hillocks to a breadth of little more than a mile. then expanding into sheets of four times that space across from shore to shore, gush along in a flood of dark blue, like the Rhone as it issues from the lake of Geneva, till they mingle with the sea of Marmora, passing in their course by a succession of wood and dale, ravine and bill side covered with the most profuse carpeting of leas and blade while kiosk and pleasure grounds, bastions and loopholed curtains, gay gardens, villas, mosques, and noble mansions, stud the banks in unbroken lines, from the very foot of the forts which command the entrance up to the crowning glory of the scene, where the Imperial city of Constantine. rises in many coloured terraces from the verge of the golden horn. The hills strike abruptly upwards to a height varying from 200 to 600 feet. and are bounded at the foot by a line of quays. which run along the European side from Pera to Buyukdere, about five miles from the Black Sea simost uninterruptedly. These quays are very numerous on the Asiatic side also. The villages by the water side are so close together, that Pera may be said to extend from Tophana to the forts beyond Buyukdere. All along the water's edge there are a succession of villas and palaces, and small kiosks, which remand the traveller of an Italian lake -- Como or Otta. There are several palaces belonging to the Sultan, situated on such eminences as one sees on the Rhine or the Moselle, wherever a beautiful view is to be commanded. in the absence of all artistic impressions, the Turks are great admirers of nature. Fields and forests, blue water and skies, sunny air and bright flower gardens, are the great sources of their happiness. The state of listless dreaming into which the contemplation of these objects throws them they call kef. These little klosks, dedicated to the idiest inactivity of mind and body, are perched about the bills of the Bosphorus, and there the Turk dreams away his leisure time, drinking in the bright and lovely prospect around him, with only the bubbling of the Narghile to assist rather than intrude upon his contemplation.

The kiceks and remuences of the Poches, the retreats of opulence, line these favoured almose, and these dwellings succeed each other quite as numerously as the houses on the road from Hyde Park corner to Hammersmith, and at places such as Therapia and Buyukdere, they are dense enough to form large villages, provided with hotels, shops, cafes, and lodging-houses. The waters abound in fish, and droves of porpolses and dolphins disport a myriads on the surface of the Bosphorus, splashing and playing about in the plentitude of their strength and security, till a sword fish takes a dig at them, and sets them off curvetting and snorting like sea-horees. The shores of the Bosphorus are enlivened by the tunumerable wicked-looking, felnera-rigged craft, darting by in all directions, and manned by wild, swarthy looking men, reminding one of Greek pirates, &c.

The prettiest spot to land at is a little village on the Asiatic side of the stream, above Therapia and Buyukdere, at the bend of the Bosphorus. From the summit of the hill above this village there is a fine view of the opposite or European shores of the Bosphorus, and even of the Black Sea, whonce

"Tis a grand sight, from off the Glant's Grave, To watch the progress of those rolling seas Between the Bosphorus, as they lash and lave Europe and Asia."

The return to Constantinople down the Borphorus is delightful, going with the stream, and keeping close to the Asistic skie—glowing with all the purple glories of an Eastern sunset—the prospect is most enchanting the whole distance, until you turn round the angle of the Golden Horn, and reach the landing place of Tophans.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Samsonn, Sinope, Trobizonde, Dardanelles, Smyrna, Betum, Alexandria, &c.,

Beu tari.—It is a mile and a half across the Bosphorus from Galata to Scutari, which is situated on a sloping ground, and has a very picturesque appearance, from the mixture of trees, houses, mosques, and minarets, and is the most Orients port of Constantinople. It usually serves as a rendexvous and an emporium to the caravans of Asia. It is now appropriated for the accommodation of Anglo-French troops. Scutari contains very extensive burying grounds, which are the handsomest in Turkey. These cometeries extend for miles on the East and South of the town, towards the sea. Above these is the hill of Bulgaria, from which there is the finest panorama of Constantinople. Far as the eye can reach over the ridge of hills rolls the Black Sea; Therapia and Buyukdere on the Bosphorus; the castles of Europe and Asia, the Golden Horn, Pera, Galata, and Stamboul, all in one beautiful eneircling ranorama.

Adrianople.—The first European capital of the Turkish Empire, standing at the confluence of the Arda and Tunsha, with the Hebrus. It was built by the Emperor Hadrian. The principal object worthy of notice are—the Mosque of Selm, and the Bazaar of All Pasha. It is about 20 hours distant from Constantinople, and about 95 English miles from Philippoli. There is a Khan here.

Philippoli. — A town in European Turkey, situated on a small island formed by the Maritza. It contains a Mosque and a Bazaar. The town was nearly destroyed by an earthquake in 1818, at which time it contained a population of 30,000. Distance from Belgrade, about 65 hours; from Adrianople, 95 Eng. miles.

Sophia.—A town in European Turkey situated on a beautiful plain on the Ixa, and surrounded with mountaina. Travellers can find good accommodation here; and there are some hot baths celebrated for their medicinal properties. Distance from Philippoil, 26 hours.

A concession has been granted for a line of Railway from Constantinople to Belgrade, vir Adrianople, Philippoli, Sophia and Nissa, with branches from Sophia to Widden and Orsova, and from Adrianople to Shumla and Rutschuk, on the Danube. Distance to Belgrade, 627 Eng. miles.

ALGERIA.

The French territory in Africa, denominated Algeria, extends along the Northern count of the Continent from Tarbaque on the East, to Milonia on the west, the Atlas mountains traversing the country in two principal chains, of which the greater, separating the cultivated regions from the boundless waste of Sahara, forms the natural limit of the country; the French have, however, now established two stations in the desert.—Biskra and El Agouat. Several passes, abounding in scenery of majostic grandeur. exist in both the chains, the floest of which are the Tenush of Mousnigh, the Biban, and the El Kantasa. Many rivers take their rise in the Atlas, but they are all too shallow and rapid for any purposes of inland unvirution: the Cheliff is the most considerable, it ruses at the foot of Mount Ouenneseria, and after a course of about 300 miles, falls into the Mc literranean, at Kol-Mita. The mineral wealth of the Mountains of Algeria is very great, copper especially exists in abundance. The native bountation. which may amount to 3,000,000, has been generally divided into four classes, viz:-the Kabyles, or Herbers; the Moors; the Arabs; and the Jews; the first may be considered as the original inhabitants of the country, and tradition describes them as the descendants of some of those nations who fied before the victorious Israelites; a portion of their territory in the province of Constantine, with a few miles of sea-coast near Bougie, is still independent, and is the only pertion of Algeria which is now a closed country to the traveller. The Moors are descended from the ancient inhabitants of Mauritania , their complexions are lighter, and features fuller, than those of the Araba, who are the descendants of that race of Mahometan warriors who conquered Mauritania, and their countenances to this day attest their Asiatic origin; many live in fixed aboles, but a still greater number are migratory, and are called Bedouins. The Jews are chiefly descended from those who, at different times, were driven out of Spalis. they live entirely in the towns, and are devoted to trade; they are intelligent but bear a very bud character for integrity; many here, as elsewhere, have acquired great wealth a their women are deservedly celebrated for their beauty.

The European civil population can hardly exceed 70,000; it is composed of French, Spaniards, Germans, Italians, and Maltese. The army consists of about 80,000. Algeris is about 700 miles in length, and from 100 to 150 in breadth.

Algeria has submitted to many masters; part of it formed the ancient kingdom of Numbia, and after the Romans, it successively acknowledged the sway of Vandal, Byzantine, and Arab, the latter yielding before the victorious arms of the Ottoman Empire, of which it was declared a regency, and remained so until the French Conquest: Oran, however, for a short time owned the sway of Spain.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE FRENCH CONQUEST.

After the European peace of 1815, M. Duval was named Consul General at Algiers; he was born in the East, and understood the oriental languages, and the manners and customs of the inhabitants, but his policy was marked by great weakness, and he inspired none with confidence or respect. He consented, without making any objections, that the annual tribute paid by the African Company, established by treaty for the purposes of trade, should be raised from £24,000 to £80,000; and he also agreed that France should raise no forts or batteries around her factories -- a privilege she had always reserved in her ancient treaties. Hussein Dey succeeded to the government in 1819, and was so emboldened by the repeated concessions of the French Consul-General, that he openly announced his intention, when a favourable opportunity occurred, of abolishing the African Company, and destroying its establishments. His conduct soon brought about a very hostile feeling, on the part of the French government, towards his own, which was much increased by a dispute relative to a debt due from France to the house of Bacri and Busnach of Algiers, which house was itself a debtor to the government of the regency. The final rupture. however, took place in 1827, when the Consul-General went to congratulate the Dey on the eve of the Bayram; a discussion having arisen, Hussein struck the Consal with his fan; the news of this outrage was received with the greatest indignation in Paris, and on the 5th of June, 1827, the Moniteur announced that a squadron had sailed from Toulon to demand satisfaction for the insult offered to the representative of France. This squadron was composed of a ship of the line, five frigates, two brigs, and some smaller craft-in all, thirteen sail; on the arrival of this force, the Consul and all French subjects embarked, and through the medium of the Sardinian Consul-General the following demand was made by the Commodore: 1. - The chief officers of the regency, with the exception of the Dey, will proceed on board the flag-ship, and make apologies for that Prince to the French Consul. 2 .- At a given signal, the French flag will be hoisted at the Casbah, and at the surrounding forts, and saluted with 101 guns. 3 .- The property of French subjects embarked on board an enemy's ship is not to be seized. 4 .- No vessels hoisting the French flag are to be visited by the Algerine Corsairs. 5 - The Dey, by a special treaty, will execute, as far as his dominions are concerned, all conventions concluded between France and the Sublime Porte. 6 .- The subjects of the following states are to be treated as French :- Tuscany, Lucca, and the Papal States. The Dey would not listen to these terms, and in his answer alluded to various violations of treaty on the part of France. A blockade then commenced, and the squadron was reinforced by three vessels of the line, and an Admiral appointed to the command. This state of things lasted till July, 1829 when an incident occurred which sealed the conquest of the The "Provence" ship of the line, and regency. the brig "Alerte," hoisted signals demanding a parley, and anchored in the harbour of Algiers; the Admiral, accompanied by his secretary, an interpreter, some officers, and a guard of honour went ashore, and made arrangements with the minister of marine and foreign affairs for being presented to the Dey the following morning. Two interviews took place, and no satisfactory arrangements were concluded; in a few days they embarked, and sailed out of the harbour, the flags denoting patley still flying, consequently forbidding a resumption of hostilities, during which time they were repeatedly fired at by the town and fort batteries This event decided the French government to take more energetic measures than had hitherto been adopted; and Charles X., at this time, becoming from day to day more unstable on his throne, welcomed heartily this unsettled state of Algerine affairs, and desired, through that channel, to turn the minds of his people from political questions at home to schemes of conquest abroad : the mass of the nation, however, doubted the policy of the expedition; with the army alone it was popular. Early in the year 1830, the principal dockyards of France equipped 11 sail of the line, 24 frigates, 7 corvettes, 27 brigs, 7 steamers, in all about 100 sail, which fleet was destined to carry over 37,000 men to the shores of Africa, besides which, many merchant ships were chartered to carry over military stores. The army was commanded by General de Bourmont, and the fleet by Admiral Duperre; the troops disembarked at Sidi Feruch, about 13 miles west of Algiers, and after a hard-fought battle at Staoucli, and the capture of the forts around the town, Algiers unconditionally surrendered; thus terminated the reign of Hussein, and the Turkish domination in Algeria. A war of nearly 20 years' duration has left France almost the undisputed master of the country; for since the surrender of Abd-cl-Kader, the war against the natives has been confined to small expeditions for the punishment of a few refractory tribes. That extraordinary chief, who surrendered himself to France in 1817, was born in an encampment near Mascara, in the year 1806: his father took him to Mecca at the early age of eight; and shewing great quickness of perception during his youth, much pains were bestowed on hit education. Mohly-ed-Din, his father, it appears, conceived the possibility of establishing an Arabian dynasty in Algeria, and such ideas were instilled · into the mind of the young Abd-el-Kader; their discourses, however, on this subject, acquired too much publicity, and awakened the suspicions of the Bey of Oran, who arrested both father and son but they were soon set at liberty on condition of quitting the country; they returned to Mecca, proceeding by land to Tunis, and from thence by sea to Alexandria; from Mecca they visited Bagdad, and in 1828 they returned home, to which step no opposition was made. They apparently renounced politics, leading a most austere and moral life, and gaining the respect of all. The state of anarchy amongst the Arabs, which followed the conquest of Algiers, afforded an opportunity for the gratification of Abd-el-Kader's ambition; he rallied around him the tribes of his immediate neighbourhood, placed himself at their head, and excited them by his poems, in the name of the Prophet, to resist the invaders; he was stimulated in his efforts by promises of aid from the Emperor of Morocco. His descent from Mahomet, and a pretended vision, in which he represented himself as sitting on a splendia throne, giving judgment amongst the Arabs, tended in no small degree to strengthen his influence. At length, having collected considerable forces, he attacked the garrison of Oran, and for seme time compelled the French to remain within their defences. Treaties of peace were, at different times, concluded with him; but the restlessness of the Arabs, and the encrosching spirit of the French. soon caused them to be broken; places which, after the dissolution of the government of the regency. acquired an independence of their own under the authority of the Emir, fell one by one into the hands of the French; such was the case with Tlemcen, Mascara, Mostaganem, and some others. He was at last considerably harassed, and was continually obliged to take refuge in the desert-he was accompanied by a numerous force of cavalry, and inflicted great loss on the French by appearing where he was leastexpected, and cutting off supplies; he continued, however, to harass the French till the end of 1417, when, finding his resources entirely exhausted, he offered to surrender himself to Genera I de Lamoricière, on condition of being allowed to reside at Mecca or Alexandria; Abd-cl-Kader performed his part of the contract, but the French government detained this brave man a close prisoner till 1852, when he was released by the Prince Pre-ident of the Republic, and Broussa was agreed upon as his future residence. Since his surrender no opposition of any importance has been made to the French, and their territory may now be defined as composed of the four ancient provinces of the Regency-Algiers, Titeri, Constantine, and Oran; that of Titeri has now been united to Algiera

The Government is vested in the hands of a governor-general and commander-in-chief; the three provinces, viz. Alglers, Oran, and Constantine, are each under the command of a general of division; the civil department in each is under a prefet; but, practically, he is quite subordinate to the military authority.

Conveyances.—Five or six departures, by steamer during the month, from Marseilles, Cetteand Toulon. The voyage is accomplished in fortyeight hours; two to Oran; average length of voyage, three days; two to Philippeville, in the province of Constantine, forty-eight hours. Steamers from Algiers to Oran, once a week; from Oran to Gibraltar and Tangiers, once a month; from Algiers to Philippeville and Bona, three times a month: from Bons to Tunis, once a month. Diligences from Algiers to Blida, three times a-day, in five hours; from Philippeville to Constantine, three times a week, in about twelve hours; from Blids to Medeah, daily, in fine weather in about five hours: But the traveller is recommended to ride, as the road goes through the magnificent pass of the Teniah de Mousaiah. These are the only certain lines of diligences; but carriages go, when the state of the roads and the weather permit, from Oran to Tlemcen, and from Algiers to Aumale: all other journeys must be performed on horseback.

HINTO TRAVELLESS.—Before making any exlended journey into the interior, the English traveller should, through his consul, obtain an interview with the chef de bureau Arabe, who will give him a circular letter to the authorities on his route, is order that he may be enabled to get horses at places where none are to be hired. If the traveller is a sportsum, by all means let him take a gun, also a rifle, if he can conveniently do so. Pistola are quite unnecessary for purposes of self-defence; the roads are nearly every where free from danger, and where it exists the local authorities will always trant an escort.

Passroams.—The traveller's national passport is taken away from him on his arrival from France, and a pass provisoire is presented in return, which he retains during his stay in the country, and on his depa, are the original is returned. The regulations respecting passports are strictly enforced in all the seaport towns, but in the interior the passport is never asked for. The police requirer three days' notice before quitting the towns of Algiers, Oran, and Constanting.

MONRY .-- Same as in France

CEMEATE.—The elimate north of the Atlas much resembles that of the south of Spain, but more rain falls during the winter months; the heat, from June to Sopalabler, is excessive; south of the Atlas a more tropical climate exists, and rain rarely falls.

It is a healthy country to those who avoid excess in eating and drinking, who rise and retire to rest early, and who avoid sleeping in marshy localities.

A good map of the country has been made up from the government surveys, and published by authority; it may be obtained in Paris or Algiera.

A traveller may leave Marseilles, and be back in a fortnight, after having seen Algiers, Bilils, and Medeah, and the stupendous Teniah de Mousaiah, perhaps the most beautiful part of the Atlas Mountains.

Algiers .- Horers :--

HOTEL DE PARIS, beautifully clean, an excellent cuisine, good attendance and moderate charges. De la Régence, good but dear. De l'Orient de Rouen—both good and moderate.

About 50,000 inhabitants. Built on the slove of a hill, it is exceedingly beautiful from the sea. The lower part of the town is now laid out in the French style, in good streets, with arcades for foot passengers. The Place du Gouvernement is well planned, and on one side there is a very good statue to the memory of the late Duke of Orleans, who was a great benefactor to the city-he built the new grand mosque. The native quarters of the town are on the upper part of the hill, and must, of course, be visited; they abound in curious speclmens of Moorish architecture. The court-yard of the governor-general's palace should be seenpermission is readily granted. The environs of Algiers are very picturesque; cabs and omnibuses ply in abundance all day. Algiers is a busy, cheerful town, and the variety of costume is exceedingly curious. The best dealer in Moorish curiosities and Algerian merchandisc (jewellery, &c.) is Mustapha Rayato, Place du Government, opposite to the New Mosque; he is an honest, good man, and his things are of the best quality. The mosques may always be entered, but you are expected to take your shoes off at the door. There is an excellent theatre, and a second has been built, destined for an Italian opera.

English Consul.-John Bell, Esq.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTIST.—Mons. Mäler.

Blida.—Hotz .— Hotel de la Régence—good.

A pretty town, of several thousand inhabitants, at the foot of the lesser Atias, thirty miles from Algiers; the road from the capital grosses the beautiful plain of the Metidia, and passes through the flourishing French villages of Douara and Bouffarick. There is another road equally good, but rather longer, which passes several miles to the eastward of Douars. A railway is projected from Algiers to Blida.

Constantine.-There is but one hotel, and that is bad and dear. Population, about 37,000, chiefly Arab. In the city itself there is little to sec, but its position on a precipitous rock is most singular: it is the capital of the province. The easiest way to reach Constantine from Algiers is to take the steamer to Philippeville, and proceed from thence by diligence. The land journey from Algiers occupies nine days, and the road passes through some magnificent scenery; but there are too many difficulties to be encountered to recommend this route at present, as the roads are frequently impassable; the traveller is, consequently, obliged to retrace his steps, and await a continuance of dry weather before he can proceed. This state of things will not last long, as the government employ large bodies of the troops on the roads in all parts of the country. The province of Constantine contains many Roman remains, some of them in a high state of preservation.

Medeah, -- Hotel :--

in the lesser Atlas, several thousand feet above There is outside the town an aquethe sea. duct of Roman construction, though little of t original can be traced, awing to constant repairs The road to Blida rivals in beauty some of th great passes of the Alpa, with a more luxuriant vegetation. The river Chiffs is crossed about ten times: a good road is in course of construction.

Miliana.-- Hotel: --

But one, and that indifferent.

A small town, fifty miles from Blids, and about the same distance from Medeah. It is situated on the slope of a mountain called by the Arabs the Copper Mountain. From it there is a magnificent view of the plain of the Cheliff, and the range of the Great Atlas beyond. Lions are common in the neighbourhood of Miliana.

Oran. - Hotel :- Hotel de France-good.

The capital of the province of that name. Prettily situated on several hills, but an ugly town. The harbour is six miles distant, and is called Mers-el-Kebir (Arabic, Great Harbour.) The European population of Oran is about 9000. English Consul, Charles Tulin, Esq.

Philippeville .- A small unhealthy town A small but most beautifully situated town where travellers disembark for Constantine.

ROUTE via MARSEILLES.

For information respecting the journey from London to Marsellies, sea Paris, the hours of departure, modes of conveyance, cost, &c., see pages 44, 45, 46, and 47. A conveyance leaves the office of the Administration des Services Maritimes des Message ries imperiales, Rue Notre-Dame des-Victoires, Paris, each morning at half past 9a.m., and arrives at Marcellies at 9 p.m. the following evening. Fares—108, 87, and 72 frs.

The railways and the steamboats on the rivers Sance and Rhone have so consulcrably facilitated the performance of the journey from London to Marsallies, as to render it easy of accomplishment in a few hours. Thence travellers can proceed to Matta, Alexandria, and Constantinople, or to any of the later rediste ports, either rapidly per direct packets, or more leisurely via Italy, thereby visiting varvute the most remarkable towns of that country—seach as Genes, Horenco, Rome, Naples, &c.,—all of which will be found described in the Grims under the head of Italy, and the Routes laid down in "Bradsi-gas" to reland Guide to India."

The steam-ships of the "Administration des Services Maritimes des Messageries Impetales," Rue Notre-Dame-des-Victoires, convey the French mails between Marsellles and the principal ports of the Mediterranean Sea. They average from 120 to 220 horse-power. For particulars in reference t Times and Fares see alphabetical list of Steamera.

For notice of the different lines, viz., the Italian, Levant, Greek, Egypt and Syria, between Constantinople and Alexandria, and the various lines they correspond with, see alphabetical list of Steamers, pages 181 to 212, where the most ample information will be found recorded.

Passengers wishing to visit Genoa, Leghorn, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Messina, en route for Malta, or any destination beyond it, can embark in the packets of the line of Italy, leaving Marsellies on the 9th 19th and 29th of each month. They are privileged to stay ten days or more at any of the intermediate stations, proceeding to their des-fination by subsequent packets, within a delay of four months. On re-embarking, they are only entitled to such borths as are vacant when due notice of the departure is given at the company's office. The passage-money is always to be paid in advance, and in no case returned.

Passengers must strictly adhere to the printed regulations on board. They cannot have the exclusive occupation of a state-room, unless engaging al the bertis therein. The tariff of luggage is given in pages of the Guide already referred to; and the following is the charge for extra luggage on board the packets, viz.: -10 frs. per 70 kilos, between Marseilles and Malta, and 25 frs. per 70 kilos, to any destination beyond Malta. Goods and merchandise are not admitted as læggage. Carriagos are charged as follows:-

Large size .... at 1½ fares of 1st class passages. Small size (2 wheels) ditto. ditto.

In addition to the instructions given in reference to l'assports, under the column of "General instructions," at p. xxvi and xxxiii, the following taraff of charges will be found useful to the traveller:—French polico visé, gratis; British, 2 frs. 80 c.; Sardinian, 4 frs.; Tuscan, 2 frs., Homan, 3 frs. 50 c.; Neapolitan, 6 frs.; Greck, 1 fr. 50 c.; Russlan, 6 frs.; Spanish, 5 frs. 50 c.; Durich, 5 frs.; Itelgian, 4 frs. 50 c.; Purisha, 4 frs.; Austrian, 3 frs., 90 c.; Swiss, 2 frs. 50 c.; Turkish, 2 frs. 50 c.; American, 10 frs. 50 c.; Danish, 5 frs.

NOTICE TO HOMEWARD TRAVELLERS RETURNING FROM INDIA.—The Packets of the Marino Service of the "Messagerica Nationales," on their return voyage from Alexandria, are accompanied by Nyage from Arexandra, the accompanies of any Surgeon, but if the passage does not occupy 8 days, the passengers remain on board in the offing until that time has chaeced, when they are allowed to enter the harbour of Marseilles. In consequence of this, on their calling at Malta, no passengers an amitted but those who are not subjected to quarantine. Travellers should then bear in mind, that in order to avail themselves of the advantages offered by the French route, they must embut ken board the French Packets at Alexandria, for should they proceed to Malta by any other steamer arriving there in quarantine, they would not be admitted on board the French Packets.

EXCURSIONS TO UPPER EGYPT.—The following information will prove useful to the general mass of travellers visiting Egypt.

The steamers of the Egyptian Transit Administration perform regular trps on the Nile, from Cairo to Upper Egypt, by which means that interesting vayage—once so difficult and expensive—can now be accomplished most comburtably and economically in about eighteen days, thus opening an easy, interesting and agreeable route to an almost unknownland, which offers besides the highout historical interest, the advantage of a mild and salubrious climate during that season throughout which the severest cold is experienced in Europe.

Few who have not explored Upper Egypt exit conceive the deep interest appertaining to every feature of its historical character, or rightly analysis its territorial monuments and ruins.

ROUTE via TRIESTE.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS, &c .- BAGGAGE .- A TOcent regulation enables passengers for India. vid Trieste, who are encumbered with heavy baggage, to ship it at Southampton by one of the steamers leaving that port for Alexandria, on the 4th and 20th of each month. By adopting this plan much fromble and annoyance will be saved and the Traveller need only take with him such portion of his baggage as he may require until his landing in India, and the less he takes the better Passengers returning from India should adopt a similar course. and leave the cumbersome portion of their baggage at Alexandria for shipment to Southampton. Much inconvenience, arising from delay, &c., will be avoided by parties forwarding keys of packages subject to duty, with the address of the owner, and the list and value of the contents, to 127, Leadenhallstreet, London; or to Hickle, Borman, and Co. Oriental-place, Southampton. Personal baggage. when declared for transit at Ostend, can be forwarded to Trieste free of Custom-House examination. The same course is adopted in reference to baggage rom Trieste which need not be examined until arrival in London. It may be well to state that luggage declared for transit cannot be used until its arrival at its destination.

Passengers, on their arrival at Trieste from Alexandria, can have the extra quantity forwarded to England, &c., b) giving the necessary instructions at Trieste. Two pounds per cwt. is the tarist to England, exclusive of Custom-House charges.

Passengers must not take sealed letters into Austria, such being contrary to the pestal regulations of that country. Persons going to Trieste, vid Ostend and Vienna, are recommended to obtain a Foreign Office passport vised first by the Austrian Ambassador, and afterwards by the Belgian Consul, if rad Ostend. If there be different members of a family travelling logether, their names can all be included in the one passport. (See pages xaxiii to xxxviii.)

MONEY.—Sovereigns, are the best to take from England. No paper money or Foreign coin, should be taken beyond the Austrian frontiers, as it will be refused.

Though we give, in connection with the furnished, details of the various routes, the probable hours of arrival and departure of the different conveyances, yet we recommend, as a general course, that the tonist or traveller should refer himself to the Railway Time Tables and Alphabetical List of Steamers, to be found in their proper places in the Indian and Continental Guipzs, where he can accurately ascertain the exact hour.

We give the following routes, in order that the tourist may be enabled to chose such as he deems most worthy of his adoption.

ROUTES OUTWARD.

ROUTE 1.

London to Trieste, by Cologne, Presden, and Viennu.—The distance is 1,507 miles, and the time occupied five days sixteen hours. ### Alexandria .- Stat .- HOTELS :--

INDIA FAMILY HOTEL, situate in the principal square, a comfortable good house.

Alexandria, the ancient capital of Lower Egypt, is situated on the Mediterranean, between the Lake Mæriotis and the Isle of l'haros Few cities present more attractive features to the traveller than this. Its ruins, desolation, traditions, and departed glories, are alike worthy the student's consideration, who will find much to admire in its present appearance and position, as well as be delighted with the inspection of its antiquities. It is enclosed by walls of Saracenic structure, supposed to have been built by one of the successors of Saladiu, in the 13th century. The original city was built by Alexander the Great, soon after the fall of Tyre, about 333 a.c., for a mighty purpose, and with a grand design, it realised the hopes of its founder, as, not long after its erection, it became the emporium, not only for merchandise, but also for all the arts and sciences of Greece. Strabo tells us that ancient Alexandria was 30 stadia in length from east to west, and 7 or 8 stadia even where narrowest. The circumference was 9 miles, but Pliny, including no doubt the suburbs, reckons it at 15 miles. Lake Mæreotes bathed its walls on the south, and the Mediterranean on the north. It was also intersected by straight parallel streets lengthways, and a free passage was left to the northern wind, which alone conveys coolness and salubrity into Egypt. At the gate near the sea, a street of 2,000 feet began and terminated at the gate of Canopos. This street was decorated with magnificent houses, temples, and buildings. Along its extensive range the eye was never thred of gasing on its marble, the porphyry and obelisks which at some future day were destined to embellish Rame and Constantinople. The great street, the handsomest in the world, was intersected by another of the same breadth, which formed a square of half A league in circumference at their junction. From the middle of this great place the two gates were to be seen at covp d'ail, as also vessels arriving under full sail from the north and south. Palace, which projected beyond the promontery of Lochras, occupied more than a quarter of the city. Each of the Ptolomies added to its magnifi-It contained within its enclosure the Museum, an Asylum for learned men, groves, and buildings worthy of royal majesty, and a Temple, in which was deposited the body of Alexander in a gold coffin. This beautiful monument was violated by the infamous Seleucus Cibyofactus, who carried off the gold coffin, putting a glass one in its place. Alexandria also extended along the northern bank of the lake, and in its eastern view embraced the Gymnasium, with its portice of more than 600 feet long, supported by several rows of marble pillars. Without the gate of the Canopos there was a spacious circuit for chariot races whilst beyond that the suburb of Nicopolis stretched along the sea shore, and seemed a record Alexandria. A superb amphitheatre was built there, with a race-ground for the erlebration of the Quinquenalia. Such is the description left us of Alexandria by the ancients, but, above all, by Strabo,

The architect employed by Alexander in the construction of this city was the celebrated Dinocratus, who acquired such great reputation by building the Temple of Diana at Ephesus. Ptolemy Soter, one of Alexander's captains, was the first to render this city populous. He was appointed Governor of Egypt soon after the death of the Macedonian monarch, assumed the title of King, and made Alexandria the royal residence, B.C 304 years. Ptolomy Philadelphus also added much to the embellishment and grandeur of Alexandria. In the first year of his reign, the celebrated watch-tower of Pharos was crected. which, when finished, was considered one of the wonders of the world. The tower was a large square structure of white marble, on the top of which fires were kept constantly burning, for the direction of sallors. The building cost, if Attic, 800 talents, or £165,000; if Alexandrian, twice that sum. A curious stratagem was resorted to by the architect of this tower to perpetuate his name in connection with it, and take all the glory to himself. Being ordered to engrave upon it the following inscription..." King Ptolomy, to the Gods the Saviours, for the benefit of Sailors'-instead of the king's name he substituted his own, and then, filling up the hollow of the marble with mortar, wrote aron it the above-mentioned inscription. In process o time, the mortar having fallon of, the following inscription appeared: - Soutratus, the Cuidian, the son of Dexiphanus, to the Gods the Saviour of Sallors."

The Temple of Serapeum had within its verge the celebrated Alexandrum Library, containing 703,000 volumes in collecting books for this library, the following plan was adopted, viz., to seize all those which were brought into Egypt by Greeks, or other foreigners. The books were transcribed by persons appointed for that purpose. The copies were then handed back to the proprietors, and the original laid up in the library The works of Sophooles, kniptides, and Kachyins, were browed from the Athenians by Ptolemy Euergetus, who returned them the copies transcribed in as beautiful a manner as possible, presenting them at the same thue with £30,000 for the exchange.

This city, like all others of note in the early ages, was often the scene of terrible massacres. About 141 years before Christ, it was all but destroyed by Ptolony Physion. At this epoch nearly all the learned men fied to Greece, Asia Minor, and to the Islands of the Archipelago, where they revived learning, and the arts. From this period the fortunes of Alexandria were dimmed by feuds and scenes of carnage, until taken by Amron, who, astonished at the richness and grandeur of the city, wrote to the Calph:- "Phave taken the City of the West. It is of immense extent; I cannot describe to you how many houses it contains. There are 4,000 palaces, 4,000 baths, 12,000 dealers in fresh oil, 40,000 Jews who pay tribute, and 400 theatres, or places of amusement." From this period until the year 924 the city remained subject to the Caliphs. and then tell into the hands of the Magrebians. The chief thing which contributed to raise Alexandria to the pitch of extraordinary splendour which it enjoyed for so long a period, was its being the centre of commerce between the Eastern and Western world. And, though the revolutions which occurred in the government of Egypt, after it fell into the hands of the Mahometans, frequently affected this city to a very great extent, yet the excellence of its port, and the innumerable conveniences resulting from the East India trade to the different Governors of Lgypt, preserved it from total destruction when in the hands of the most bubarous nations, and in the thirteenth century, when the European nations began to acquire a taste for the elegancies of life, the old mart of Alexandria again revived, and its port became celebrated once more as the centre of commerce. But its ancient greatness declined after 1499, when It became subject to the Turks, when a passage was divovered round the Cape of Good Hope by the Pontuguese in that year. In the ruins of ancient Alexandra we behold a total wreck of vast grandeur, and the desolation which spreads around shows the after fallacy of human greatness.

ALKANDEL MODER.—The present city stands on a peninsula, situated between the two ports; and although a few years ago it presented little more than half-ruined houses and piles of rubbish, with the remains of a few magnineent edifices; still, at the present time, it is gradually assuming the appearance of a large populous city, many of its streets are wide, clean, and lin-d with rows of handsome houses. The present population is from 100 to 120,000. The commerce of Alexandria is still most extensive, as all the exports from and imports to Egypt pass through its port. The British and French Governments have Consuls at Alexandria, and there are several eminent British mercantile houses established there. There are also several wealthy Jewish merchants. The late extensive importance importance of Alexandria; as also the naval expeditions equipped there by the Pacha. It has two ports, viz.: the old and the new one; the former of which is the best. The new one being clogged with sand; and in stormy weather, vessels are subject to blige: the botten being rocky, the cable soon breaks, so that one vessel dashes against another, and many are lost. A fatal instance of this occurred many years ago, when forty-two vessels were dashed to pieces on the Mole, in a gale of wind from the north-west; since which numbers have been wrecked there.

The country about Alexandria is completely destitute of water, excepting that which is brought from the Nile by a canal of twelve leagues, every year, at the time of he inundation. Vaults and reservoirs are dug under the ancient city to receive the supply which must last until the next year. The canal is the only link of communication between Alexandria and Egypt, it being without the Delta; and from the nature of the soil, it may be stated to belong to the African deserts. Some partsof the old wall are yet standing, and are flanked with large towers about 200 paces distant one from the other; below are magnificent casements, which serve as galleries to walk in. The lower part of the towers contains a large square hall, the roof of which rests on thick columns of Thebac stone; and above this are several rooms, over which are platforms more than twenty paces square. The reservoirs arevaulted with much art; and though 2000 years have rolled by since their construction, they are still perfect. Only a few porphyry pillars and the front portice of Caesar's palace remain; but they appear very beautiful. The palace of Cleopatra was built upon the walls facing the port, having a gallery on the outside supported by several fine columns. Not farfrom the palace are two obelisks, commonly called Cleopatra's Needles: they are of Thebac stone, and covered with hieroglyphics; one is upturned, and lies on the strand; the other stands on its pedestal. One of these has been presented to the British government by the Egyptian government. These two obelisks are about sixty feet high by seven feet square, and it is supposed once decorated the palaces of the Ptolemies. Near the gates of Rosetta are five columns of marble, on the place formerly occupied by the portions of the Gymnasium. The barbarism of the Turks has since destroyed the remainder of the colonnade. But the chief object of attention is Pompey's Pillar, situated about a quarter of a league from the southern gate: it is built of red granite: the capital, which is Corinthian with palm leaves, and not indented, is nine feet high; the shaft and upper member of the base are of one piece, of newly ninety it long, and nine it in diameter. The base is a square of about fifteen feet on each side. This block of marble, sixty feet in circumference, resta on two layers of stones bound together with lead, but which has not prevented the Arabs from forcing out several stones to seek for imaginary treasure. The entire column, ninety-five feet high, is beautifully polished, but shivered a little at one side.
Nothing can equal the majesty of this monument, Seen at a distance, it overtops the town, and sexues as a signal for ships; whilst on a nearer approach it is gazed on with astonishment mixed with awe. The beauty of the capital, the height of the shaft, or the extraordinary symplicity of the pedestal excites unbounded admiration. The column was considered inaccessible until within the last half century, when, in a wild frolic, a party of English sallors, conceiving the project of emptying a bowl of punch on the top of it, scaled it by means of a rope. They dexterously availed themselves of the movements of a paper kite, by which they succeeded in fastening a rope to the summit; and by this they ascended, and performed this great achievement. It has since been rendered more accessible. Dr. Maddens mentions an English lady who breakfasted and wrote a letter on the top of it Much research and fruitless study have been expended in attempting to discover in whose honour the pillar was erected Denon on this subject ex presses himself thus:—"After having observed that the column is very chaste both in style and excention; that the pedestal and capital are not formed of the same granite as the shaft; that their workmanship is heavy, and appears to be merely a rough draught, and that the foundations, made up of fragments, indicate a modern construction-lt may be concluded this monument is not antique, and that it may have been erected either in the time of the Greek emperors or of the caliphs, since if the capital and pedestal are of sufficiently good workmanship to belong to the former of these periods, they are not so perfect but that art may have reached so far in the latter." The catacombs are also worth a visit. They begin at the extremity of the old city and extend some distance along the coast, forming the Necropolis, or City of the Dead. The excavation is from 30 to 40 feet wide, 200 feet long, and 25 feet deep, and is terminated by gentle declivities at each end One of these openings can be easily entered. Within there are no mummies; but the places which they occupied, and the order in which they were ranged, is still to be seen. Niches 20 inches square, sunk six feet horizontally, narrowed at the bottom, and separated from each other by partitions in the rock seven or eight inches thick, divides into checkers the two walls of this subterraneau vault.

Alexandria was never considered formidable as a fortress; and in 1798, when Napoleon Buonaparte attacked it, it surrendered without a blow. The place where Sir Ralph Abercromble full is about four miles from the city, in the direction of Rowetta.

The Railway between Alexandria, Cairo, and Sues is now opened. The distance is 142 miles. It is the sole property of H. H. Mahomet Said Pacha, vicercy of Egypt, who has constructed it on his own account. The time occupied between the two towns is about twelve hours. For Fares and Departures, see page 175. As the line is only in its infancy, of course several alterations will take place as to times of starting; and it is but probable that the fares will be lowered as seen as the great expenses of construction are completed.

The engineers, drivers, and carriages are all English; the road was hald by Robert Stephenson, on tron elsepers, and is considered much amounter thin any in Europe. "In order to facilitate the conveyance of Inggage through Egypt, travellers must limit the size of their trunks to the following dimensions:—

Length	3	feet.
Width	1	foot 3 inche	4
Depth	1	., 2 ,,

The weight of each trunk not to exceed eighty lbs.

Passengers should take as few packages or articles with them on their route as possible, as they are solely responsible for such which should be kept under their own personal charge; but parties who intend stopping at Cairo are requested to give notices of their intention to the agents at Sucz and Cairo, and deliver to both a list of their packages, that the necessary assistance may be given for the separation of their luggage. On landing from any steamer, or embarking therein, First Class Passengers pay 1s., and Children and servants 6d. Parties are requested to embark only from the transit wharf.

Omnibuses are provided at the expense of the ransit administration to and from the landing places and the loctel, and the hotel and railway at Alexandria. These conveyances will leave the hotels half an hour before the appointed time of starting.

Payments for transit fares, overweight of luggage, ac., must be made in English gold, Egyptian plastres, Spanish or German dollars, napoleous or five-franc pieces, at the government rate of exchange (See Bradshaw's Overland Guide, page 97.) English bank notes will not be received. Passengers from India proceeding to Europe by the Austrian Lloyd's steamers, must sonarte their luggage from that of the booked-through passengers on its arrival at Alexandria, otherwise it will go on to Southampton.

The departure of the Austrian Lloyd's direct steamers from Alexandria for Trieste altogether depends on the arrivals of the mail packets a Sing. They generally leave for Trieste in twenty-four hours after the arrival of the mails and passengers, at Alexandria.

English or Dutch subjects proceeding from India-China, or Java, vid Trieste, to England or Holland, should obtain a passport from their respective. Governments, and obtain the visés of the Austrian. Consul, either at Bombay, Madras, Caloutta, Ceylon, China, Singapore, or Battavia, as the case may bag.;

Boulac.—about two miles distant from Cairo, of which it is the port. Its appearance is not at a striking, as it possesses only one building, work notice—the palace of Ismael Pacha—a singularitemixture of Italian, Greek and Arabian attacture.

Cairo.—Stat.—Hotel:— Shepherd's Hotel, the best Coulomb's. Williams Indian family Hotel. At all of which information may be obtained respecting boat or caravan. Cairo may be fably considered the point of departure for the Nile as well as for the desert journey; the traveller will provide hinself with a boat and all the necessaries for his voyage, better at Cairo than in Alexandia, besides saving the hire and expenses of his boat for at le ust half a month, the time employed between Alexandria and Cairo, with scarcely a single object of interest on that part of the voyage, wines and provisions for the Nile or the desert will be as well provided in Cairo as in London. There is an Italian warehouse and blecult bakery kept by Mr. Walker, where the English traveller will find as great a variety of condiments as he can reasonably desire.

Cairo, the capital of Egypt, is situated in a plain at the foot of a mountain, in long. 32" E., lat. 30" N. It is entered by a pretty good road; and as approached, the city presents a very imposing appearance. Jawhar, a Moggrebin general, founded it in the middle of the tenth century, and named it "Alkahira," or the victorious. It soon become the residence of the Calpha, and, consequently, the capital of that country. It is divided into the old and new cities. The new city is situated on a sandy plain, about 24 miles from the old one, on the same side of the river. The citadel, rising above the lotty buildings, appears to issue forth from a grove of the richest foliage, and presents a most imposing appearance. The streets are narrow and unpaved, and the houses are gloomy. Each street has a gate, which is closed at nightfall. The number of inhabitants is about 300,000, though some travellers estimate it at 400,000. No one is allowed to appear in the streets after sunset, without carrying a candle in a Ca'ro paper-candlestick, under the penalty of a heavy fine. A canal, called Khalis, flows along the city from one end to the other, with houses on both sides. In its progress it forms very many small lakes, called berks, the principal of which lies in the great square near the eastle. On its banks are built the most beautiful houses in the city, but, being dependent for its supply of water on the inundation of the Nile, it is dry for several months in the year, and covered with beautiful verdure. In the water season the barges and barks of the aristocracy may be seen constantly gliding ay and down on its surface, especially in the evenings, when carious fireworks and a variety of music enh; " the scene. Stone walls and handsome battlen.cuts, with very fine towers at every hundred paces, surround the modern city of Cairo, which is bady defended. The fortified palace, erected by Saladin in the 12th century, was the only place of defence in the city, and yet the Tyrks let it fall into ruln, until it was thoroughly repaired, not long since, by the Pachs. Guides and used are in constant requisition to go up to It, passing on their way through the Bazaara, by the Mosque of Bassan, and through the gate memorable for the slaughter of the Mamelukes. Its principal apartment was a magnificent hall, environed with twelve columns of granite, of prodigious height and thickness, brought from the ruins of Alexandria. These sustained an open dome.

under which Saladin distributed justice to his subjects. A magnificent view of the city, and above 30 miles along the Nile, including the ruins of Old Cairo, the suburbs of Boulac, and Djiah, site of Memphis, great Pyramids, Obelisk of Heliopolis, ruins of Maturesh, Pyramids of Sakara, and the "Eternal Nile," is obtained from this palace. The Pacha does not now reside there, he having removed to a still more magnificent palace in the vicinity, which contains a pavilion 250 feet by 200 feet, each wall of which is adorned with colonnades of white marble. A Military College, and other institutions, have been founded lately, with the view and for the purpose of introducing European arts and improvements. In the city there are about 300 mosques, some of which have six minarets, and are adorned with beautiful granite columns, brought from Heliopolis and Mem-The largest mosque is that of Azhar, -tanding in the centre of the city. The next in size is that of Sultan Hassan, the finest structure in modern Egypt, and extremely light and ele-gant. It is built in the form of a parallelogram, and has a deep frieze running round all the wall, adorned with Gohic and Arabesone sculpture. In the neighbourhood is an extensive Necropolis, in which there are many splendid tombs, including a magnificent one built by the Pacha for his family, adorned with five spacious domes. There are several Khans and Caravanseries. These are in general several stories high, and are always full of people and merchandise, Cairo being the centre of the trade with the interior of Africa, and having carayans departing at intervals from it for Fezzan, Darfur, and other quarters, OLD CARRO.—Here we find very little to interest or amuse, except the Granaries of Joseph, which, as subject of special notice in the pages of Holy Writ, must deeply interest the Christian traveller. In it we also find a pretty church, used by the Christians and Copis, the lister being the original inhabitants of Egypt.

At Old Cairo there are two distinct and separate Cemeteries for Roman Catholics and Protestants, both are in a very quiet situation, and very nicely kept, in the latter are several monuments to Indian officers, who have found a last resting-place here ou their way home.

The apariment built over against Old Cairo and above the river is worth notice: it admits the water, and a column, with lines at a distance of every inch, marks every two feet as far as thirty, Joseph's Well will also interest: it is situated in the fortified palace, and is said to have been made by King Mohammed 700 years ago, because the Egyptians attribute every thing to this remarkable character. The well is cut in a rock, and is 280 feet deep. The water is drawn to the tep by means of oxen, placed on platforms at proper distances, which the machine that raises it. Moore, Greeks, Tyrks, Jews and Copts constitute the population of this celebrated city, which contains 240 principal streets. 46 public squares, 11 is zaran, 148, achools, 300 public cisterns, 1,160 coffee houses, 55 public baths, 400 meagues, and one hospital for the mad and inform. English hotels and lodging houses are established at Cairo. English medical men are lukes is the finest burfal place in Egypt: it is not far from the city, and on the way of the Desert: the tombs present various forms, some of them being magnificent, having domes supported by finely carved transparent marble columns. At the distance of a mile, in another direction, are the tombs of the Caliphs: they are beautiful structures, being of the light and elegant style of the Saraccnic architecture, and flave some exquisitely worked domes and minarets. On the edge of the Devert, (which he was attempting to explore,) is Burkhardt's grave, under a small tombstone scarcely discernible.

Should the traveller prolong his stay at Cairo for some days, and visit the Pyramids, he is recommended to take with him a guide and a supply of provisions and candics. In returning, he can visit the tale of Rhoda and the Nilometer; Sakhara and the site of Memphis will require another day. The other objects worth seeing are the mosques, the Obelisks of Heliopolis (three hours ride), Shoubea, a palace of thee Pacha (one hour's distance), Gardens of Rhoda, Ptrified Forest, and the Toura Quiress. (See "Bradshaw's Overland Guide to India.")

Memphis, it will be remembered, was taken and sacked by Cambyses, the Persian king; it was afterwards visited by Alexander the Great, previous to the foundation of Alexandria.

The final ruin of Memphis was accomplished by the Arabs, who used up its materials in building Old Chiro in 638.

Heliopolis, or the City of the Sun—the oldest perhaps in this land of antiquities—was a sort of saccrdotal and university town, where the litustrious Plate is said to have graduated. It consisted for the most part of temples and colleger. Mothing, however, of these now remain but a few isolated mounds, and one solitary obelisk said to have been erected by the Pharoah mentioned in the history of Joseph.

CAIRO TO SUEZ.—By Railway. Suez is a wretched looking uncomfortable place; mud and wooden houses abound; but there is a good hotel. It is bounded by the desert and the sea. Scarcely a blade of grass or foliage of a tree is to be seen about.

The journey from Alexandria to Suez is performed in about twelve hours, including a stoppage at Cairo, and sufficient time for refreshment and repose at the central station between Cairo and Suez.

Horse at Suzz.—There is an excellent hotel kept by Mr. Shepherd, who has a similar establishment at Cairo.

THE RED SEA.—At the head of this sea lies Sues. It is 1900 miles in length, and not more than 200 miles broad, being comparatively a long and narrow sea. The coral veets with which the channol abounds are very brantint in appearance, though extremely dangerous to sailing vessels, but not so a seamers, which keep the middle of the sea.

The shores present scenes of desolation unparalleled on the face of nature. Neither verture, grains, nor one green spot on which the eye could reat with pleasure can be seen. On the east side of the head of the Red Sea a good view can be obtained of Mount Sinst.

Adem, a seaport of Arabia, now occupied by the flon. East India Company as a depôt for the steamers, de traversing the Red Sea. It was coded to them after the unsuccessful treaty for Socrots, and has since been a scene of warfare. Here the steamer puts in for coal, during the shipping of which the voyagers have an opportunity of attivelying the curious places about, and of refreshing themselves at the Hotel, where capital mutton and full are generally obtained. Leaving this station, they sail through the Straits of Babolmandel into the Indian Ocean.

Bombay is an island city and the seat of government for the Western part of India. It came into the hands of the English by the marriage of Churles II. with Catharine of Portugal, and was made over to the East India Company in 1688, at which time It became the sent of government of all their pos-sessions on that side of Hindostan, which was previously at Surat. Bombay is now one of the three Presidencies by which their Oriental territories are governed. Its length from north to south is six and a half miles, and its breadth near the fort is about a mile and a half, separated from the mainland by an arm of the sea. In conjunction with the adiacent islands of Colaba, Salselie, Butcher's Island Elephanta, and Carnjah, it has a commodious and well sheltered harbour. It contains a strong and capacious fortress, a city, dockyard, and marine arsenal. The best and linest morehant ships are built here of teak, which is brought from the neighbouring countries, being found more durable than the best English oak. The country in the vicinity is well wooded, but good water scarce; cocos-muts abound, and its markets are supplied with every delicacy.

The town of Bombay is nearly a mile in length from the Apollo gate to the Bazaar, and about a quarter of a mile broad in the widest part, from the Custom House across the Green to Church gate, which lies in the centre between the Apollo and Bazear gates. There are two gates towards the sea, which have commodious wharfs and cranel built out from each, with a landing-place for pur-sengers. Bombay Castle—a regular quadrangis, built of hard and durable stone, having the advantage, in one of the bastions, of a large reason voir of water-is situated between these gr The entire town is enclosed by fertifications afti Vanban's System, erected by the Portuguese, and have been strengthened from time to time, as t place increased in importance. They are parties larly strong towards the sea, the harbour being completely commanded by a range of batteries; Many large and beautifully-built houses are esti-tered in the space called the Green. The Church; which has a very neat and light appearance, sta in this localty, and on the left of its gate is the Government House, presenting a very showy ap-aperance, and the Bazaar, which is crowded and oppulous, is on the right. The native merchanta' houses of business are situated here. A confagration, in 1803, nearly destroyed this portion of the town, and the Bazaar, Barracks, Custom-House, and several other public buildings were destroyed, and fears were entertained for the safety of the magazine. The trade and commerce of Bombay is very extensive. It carries on a valuable trade with the countries situated in the Arabian and Persian gulfs, the western coast of India, its castern parts, and the Islands in the eastern ocean, and an immense opium and wool trade with China, from which Government derives a large revenue, and the native merchants become, in the fullest sense of the expression, "Merchant Princes." In 1808 the quantity of wool brought to Bombay for re-exportation amounted to 85,000 bales, of 375 lbs. cach, which were partly procured from the country on the Nerbuddah 1t also enjoys a considerable trade with Europe, and different paris of America. It contains about 220,000 inhabitants, three fourths of which are Parsees, and the other fourth is composed of persons from almost every Aslatic nation

The Company's naval force consists of twenty fighting vessels hesides armed boats, despatch boats, and other craft. The annual expense for the maintenance of the Anglo-Indian army is about £10,000,000. The army, native and European, is distributed throughout the country at spointed stations, forming a chain of military posts, and keeping up a continual communication with the souts of the various Tresidencies.

The Bombay Court of Judicature consists of a Chief Justice and one puisme judge, and its jurisdiction extends over all the territories subject to the Presidency. The climate is as salutrious as any in India, and Assurance offices require less premium on lives than for any other part of the empire.

The Government of Bombay is vested in a Governor and three Councillors, subject to the entire control of the Supreme Government of Bengal. The Court of Directors appoint the Governor Members of the Council, the Counsander-In-chief of the forces who, though not officially a Member of the Council, yet may receive such an appointment from the Directors, in which case he takes precedence of all the other members.

The travelling distance from Bombay to Calcutta is 1,300 miles; to Delhi, 965; to Hyderabad, 480; to Madras, 770; to Poonah, 90; to Scringapatam, $20; and to Surat, 177 miles.

The tariff from Suez to Bombay is, for a person occupying a berth in cabin with two or three athers, £00; for a married couple occupying a cabin or main deck, with a w.c., £185; without a w.c., £7185; for children with their parents, five years old and under ten, £28; two years old and under five, £14; for European servants, £25; for Native servants, £15.

delian and

Ceylon .-- An island of the Indian ocean, lving off the S.W. coast of the promontory of Hindostan, from which it is separated by the Gulf of Manara and Palk's Strait. Its early history is involved in obscurity; but it is supposed to have ranked high among the cities of Asia, in population and influence, if it be the Taprobane referred to by Strabo Pomponius, Mela and Phny. Little was known of Ceylon beyond its existence as an island, until it was visited by the Portuguese after the discovery of the passage by the Cape of Good Hope. It was in 1505 divided into many sovereignties, which afterwards were merged into one, under the title of Candy. The Dutch expelled the Portuguese, and possessed themselves of the entire circuit of the coast for ten or twenty miles from the sea, and the whole of the north part of the island, contining the dominion of the King of Candy enthely to the interior. These possessions were surrendered to the English in 1796, having first sustained a siege of three weeks. In 1815 the British marched in with an armed force, and, after deposing the king, incorporated the whole island as a part of the British dominions.

The island is mountainous and woody, and is divided into two parts by lofty mountains. Spring sets in about Oct., and the hottest season is from Jan. to April. The island abounds with very fine fruit. and produces pepper, ginger and cardamoms, with different kinds of rice, which ripen one after the other. One of the most remarkable trees in the island is the talepot, which grows straight and tall, and is as large as the mast of a ship; the leaves are so large as to cover fifteen men, and when dried they are round, and fold up like a fan; every soldier carries one, as it serves for his tent. But the most important of all its vegetable productions is the cinnamon tree, the bark of which is distributed over every part of the habitable globe Topazes. garnets, rubies, ores of copper and iron, and veins of black crystal abound; and in addition to the various productions of Ceylon previously enumerated, connected with it is the pearl fishery, carried on in the Gulf of Manaar, which is considered the richest source of that article in the world; however, it is a Government monopoly, and only opened periodically. There are likewise numerous other productions of considerable commercial importance.

Calcutts is the capital of Hengal, the seal of the Indian Government, and residence of the Governor-General of the British dominions in the East Indies. It is one of the largest and most beautiful cities of Asia, hence its soubliquet of "city of palaces," and the modern capital of Hindostan. It is situated upon the river Hoogly, which forms the western channel of the Ganges, and is one of the principal of its numerous branches navigable-for large reseals. Its name is derived from Kals, a guddess, and Cuttah, a temple, dedicated by the Hindoos to Caly, the goddess of time, situate between the villages of Chultametty and Goburdpore, where the agenus of the English East India Co. Service, in 1680, obtained permission of the English.

peror Aurungzebe to establish a trading factory, which, in consequence of the disturbed state of the Province of Bengal, they were allowed to fortify in 1690. The town stands on almost a perfect level to alluvial and marshy ground, covered with jungle and stagnant pools about a century ago, and which still betrays its unsoundness everywhere, by the cracks conspicuous in its best houses. The town is about 100 miles from the mouth of the river, the navigation of which is difficult, and very often dangerous, it being filled with numerous sand-banks, constantly shifting their position. The larger vessels load and unload at Diamond Harbour, from whence passengers are conveyed to the city (60 miles distant) by smaller vessels, or in boats. From the mouth of the Hooghly to Diamond Harbour the scenery on both sides of the river is that of a perfect paradisc.

As we alvance up the river, however, the scene becomes quite animated, the shipping and bastle on the river increase, and the beautiful country-seats on its banks announce the approach to the capital. The town and suburbs extend about six miles up along the left bank of the river. An immense square is in the middle, which, together with the adjacent buildings, torms what is properly calved the town of Calcutts. The intermediate space is the Esphanade. The Citadel of Fort William is the most regular fortress in India, but would require 10,000 men with 600 pieces of cannon to defead, it. It was erected by Lord Clive, in 1157, immediately after the battle of Plassey. The Governament House, the largest and most beautiful cdifice in the town, was built by the Marquis of Weilesley, on the west of the Esplanade. In it the Governament business is transacted. The other public buildings are the Town House, Hall of Justice, Hospital, and Jail, call of which are within the esplanade); two English, Portuguese, Greek, and Armenian churches, together with several small Hindoo pagodas, Mahommedan mosques, Sikh temple, &c. &c.

The traveller to india will, beside the places above described, flud much to attract and interest in his wandering; through that land of sunbeams and of flowers. Several works are at present extant that will be an invaluable acquisition to him in his wandering; through the East, a choice selection of which will be found in "Bradshaw's Overland Guide to India," page 41; and for further information he is advised to consult Messrs. Madein and Allen's catalogue of works on India, with whose history are identified so many interesting traditions and reminiscences of extraordinary interest.

AND AS A NATURAL CORRESPENCE

inforce-rion is a weakness or want of power of the digestive juices in the stomach to convert what we cat and drink into healthy matter, for the proper nouri-hment of the whole system. It Is caused by everything which weakens the system in general, or in the stourich in particular. From it proceed marly all the discuses to which was are liable; for it is very certain, that if we nufd always keep the storagh right, we should by the by old ago or needent. Indigestion odgees a great variety of unpleasant sensations: holigst the most preminent of its miserald thets are a want of, or an inerduce appeti's, matimes afterded with a constant craving tor fink, a distension or feeling of cular ment of in Memach, flatulency, beart burn, pains in the misch, acidity, unp'cased taste in the mouth some crees of departed direction there is converte dier lish for food, but still the printing is not greatly impaired, no at the state. beried of meals persons so afflicted can cat artily, although without much gratification; a train of negrous symptoms are also frequent. ints, general debility, great languidness, profit for exercise. It is almost impossible to enginerate, symptoms of this first invader apon the fut is, as in a hundred case of Indigentia will, reliably be something peculiarly debethey what they may, they see a by the food becoming a burden justificant to the etomatch; and in all posticing most wanted in that which and give energy to the nervous and muswaterns - nothing can more speedily or with pore certainty effect so desirable an object than ton's Extract of Camomile Flowers. The has, from time immemorial, been highly esin England as a grateful anodyne, im ting an aromatic bitter to the taste, and a ding degree of warmth and strength to the ratomach, windy colic, and general weakness, forages been strongly recommended by the sminent practitioners as very useful and beficial. The great, indeed only, objection to leir use has been the large quantity of water sich it takes to dissolve a small part of the wers, and which must be taken with it into the mach. It requires a quarter of a pint of boilwater to dissolve the soluble portion of one chim of canomile flowers, and, when one or a two ounces may be taken with advantage. must at ones be seen how impossible it is to to a proper dose of this wholesome herb in the ma of tea; and the only reason why it has not ing since been placed the very first in rank of all Morative medicines, is that, in taking it, the smach has alway been loaded with water, hich tends in a great measure to counteract, d very frequently wholly to destroy the effect must be evident that loading a weak stomach th a large quantity of water, morely for the spose of conveying into it a small quantity of micine, must be injurious; and that the medites must possess powerful renovating properties ly to counteract the bad effects likely to be goduced by the water. Generally speaking, this the team the case with camomile flowers, a herb messing the highest restorative qualities, and, properly taken, decidedly the most speedy er, and the most certain preserver, of health esc I LLS are wholly CAMOMILE, proby a poculiar process, accidentally dissared, and known only to the proprietor, and he firmly believes to be one of the most mable modern discoveries in medicine, by is all the e-sential and extractive matter of than an onnee of the flowers is concentrated four moderate sized pills. Experience has the fine aromatic and stomachic properties for the herb has been esteemed; and, as they into the stomach unencumbered by any or indigestible substance, in the same their benefit been more immediate ed. Mild in their operation, and is in their effect, they may be taken at any dunder sor ergumstance, without danger or inconvenience; a person expeed is sold in wet a whole day or night could not be receive any injury from taking them, but, on the contrary, they would effectually prevent a con being taken. After a long acquaintance with and strict observance of the medicinal propertie of Norton's Camomile Pills, it is only doing then justice to say, that they are really the mos valuable of all Tonic Medicines. By the word tome is meant a medicine which gives strength to the stomach sufficient to digest in proper quan tities all wholesome food, which increases the power of every nerve and muscle of the human body, or, in other words, invigorates the nervous and muscular systems. The solidity or firmness of the whole tissue of the body which so quickly follows the use of Norton's Camomile Pills, their certain and speedy effects in repairing the partial dilapidations from time or intemperance, and their lasting salutary influence on the whole frame, is most convincing, that in the smallest compass is contained the largest quantity of the tonic principle, of so peculiar, a nature as to pervade the whole system, through which it diffuses health and strength sufficient to resist the tormation of disease, and also to fortify the constitution against contagion; as such their general use is strongly recommended as a preventative during the prevalence of malignant fever or other infectious diseases, and to persons attending sick rooms they are invaluable, as in no one instance have they ever failed in preventing the taking of illness, even under the most trying curcumstances.

As Norton's Camomile Pills are particularly recommended for all stomach complaints. indigestion, it will probably be expected that some advice should be given respecting diet. though, after all that has been written upon the subject, after the publication of volume upon volume-after the country has, as it were, began inundated with practical essays on diet as means of prolonging life, it would be unnecessify to say more, did we not feel it our duty to make the lumble endeavour of inducing the nublic so regard them not, but to adopt that course which is dictated by nature, by reason, and by comb sense. Those persons who study the wholesome and are governed by the opinions of writers of diet, are uniformly both unhealthy in body and weak in mind. There can be no doubt that the palate is designed to inform us what is proper for the stomach, and of course that must best instruct us what food to take and what to around we want no other adviser. Nothing can to pair clear than that those articles which his a saled to the tasts whereby represented the and sustenance, nether liquid or solid, foreign prof native production; if they are pure and unadulterated, no harm need be dreaded by their use: they will only injure by abuse. Consequently, whatever the palate approves, eat and drink, always in moderation, but never in excess; keeping in mind that the first process of digestion is performed in the mouth, the second in the stomsth; and that, in order that the stomach may be able to do its work properly, it is requisite the first process should be well performed; this consists in masticating or chewing the solid food, ac as to break down and separate the fibres and small substances of meat and vegetables, muxing them well, and blending the whole together before they are swallowed, and it is particularly urged upon all to take plenty of time to their meals, and never eat in haste. If you conform to this short and simple but comprebensive advice, and find that there are various things which others eat and drink with pleasure and without inconvenience, and which would be pleasant to yourself only that they disagree, you may at once conclude that the lault is in the stomach, that it does not possess the power which it ought to do, that it wants assistance, and the somer that assistance is afforded the better A very short trial of this medicine will best prove how soon it will put the stemach an a condition to perform with ease all the work which nature intended for it. By its use you will · soon be able to enjoy, in moderation, whatever is agreeable to the taste, and unable to name one individual article of food which disagrees with or sits applemently on the stomach. Never forget that a small meal well digested affords more mourishment to the system than a large one, even of the same food, when digested imperfectly. Let the dish be ever so delicious, ever so enticing a variety offered, the buttle ever so enchanting, heyer forget that temperance tends to preserve health; and that health is the soul of enjoyment. But should an impropriety be at any time, or ever so often, committed, by which the stomach becomes overloaded or disordered, render it Jemmediate aid by taking a dose of Norton's Camontile Pills, which will so promptly assist

It is most certainly true that every per his lifetime consumes a quantity of matter, which if taken at one meal we fatal; it is these small quantities of it matter which are introduced into our took by scident or wilful adulturation, which se often upset the stomach, and not unfred lay the foundation of illness, and perhaps ruination to health. To preserve the constitu it should be our constant care, if possible counteract the effect of these small quantity unwholesome matter; and whenever, in that an enemy to the constitution finds its the stomach, a friend should be immedia. after it, which would prevent its misch effects, and expel it allegether; no better, can be found, nor one which will perform the with greater certainty, than NORTON'S OX MILE PILLS. And let it be observed, the longer this medica e is taken the less it will wanted; it can in no case become habitual its entire action is to give coargy and force of stomach, which is the spring of life, the actionach, from which the whole frame draws its sites and support. After an excess of entities drinking, and upon every occasion of the health being at all described, these Ptick be immediately taken, as they will a eradicate disease at its commencements a it is most confidently asserted, that by the use of this medicine only, and a common of caution, any person may enjoy at forts within his reach, may pass three without an illness, and with the core attaining a healthy OLD AGE.
